THE GENEALOGIST

A QUARTERLY MAGAZINE OF GENEALOGICAL, ANTIQUARIAN, TOPOGRAPHICAL, AND HERALDIC RESEARCH.

NEW SERIES.

EDITED BY

Monument of Sir Thomas Olley, Bart., in the Church of St. Andrew Undershaft, London.

PREFACE.

In the preface to last year's volume, I expressed a hope that this Magazine would continue to receive the unstinted support which has for so long been extended to it, and it is very satisfactory to find that this hope has been amply fulfilled. During the nine years that I have had the honour of acting as editor, more than one new publication has appeared, dealing, though on somewhat different lines, with the subjects to which our columns are devoted; nevertheless, it may be safely affirmed that these new ventures have in no way interfered with the popularity which THE GENEALOGIST has always enjoyed. This annual preface affords once more an opportunity of thanking one and all who have given me their help during the past year, and especially my acknowledgments are due to Mr. G. C. Bower for the very curious and interesting Offley manuscript, which will always make this volume memorable. As Mr. Bower has pointed out in his excellent introduction, its quaint and homely details bring vividly before our eyes the life and habits of the Elizabethan age, and help us to realize, as no historical text books can do, the England of that glorious epoch. The writer of the manuscript, though as a rule wonderfully accurate, has fallen into a few genealogical errors, and a pedigree has therefore been compiled, the first portion of which appears in this Volume, correcting these mistakes and at the same time carrying on the male line of the different branches of the Offley family, as far as has been found possible. As an appropriate frontispiece, the monument of Sir Thomas Offley in the church of St. Andrew Undershaft

PREFACE

In the preface to last year's volume I expressed a hope that this Magazine would continue to receive the sustained support which has for so long been extended to it, and it is very satisfactory to find that this hope has been amply fulfilled. During the nine years that I have had the honour of acting as editor, more than one new publication has appeared, dealing, though on somewhat different lines, with the subjects to which our columns are devoted; nevertheless, it may be safely affirmed that these new ventures have in no way interfered with the popularity which THE GENEOLOGIST has always enjoyed. This annual preface affords once more an opportunity of thanking one and all who have given me their help during the past year, and especially my acknowledgments are due to Mr. G. Hovver for the very curious and interesting Office manuscript, which will always make this volume memorable. As Mr. Hovver has pointed out in his excellent introduction, its quaint and homely details bring vividly before our eyes the life and habits of the Elizabethan age, and help us to realize, as no historical text books can do, the England of that glorious epoch. The writer of the manuscript, though as a rule wonderfully accurate, has fallen into a few genealogical errors, and a pedigree has therefore been compiled, the first portion of which appears in this Volume, connecting these mistakes and at the same time carrying on the main line of the descent of the Office family, as far as has been found possible. As an appropriate retrospect, the monument of Sir Thomas Office in the church of St. Andrew Undershaft has been selected. The "History of the Family of Wrottesley" has now been satisfactorily concluded, and with it a separate index has been issued. I am sure that all our subscribers will fully appreciate the importance of General Wrottesley's work, which has been provided without any extra cost to them. It is indeed a model family history, admirably conceived and most ably written, so that it may well serve as a pattern to those desirous of undertaking a similar enterprise. The ancient deeds which it contains, the originals of which perished in the unfortunate fire at Wrottesley Hall, render it of exceptional value and interest.

It is hardly necessary again to refer to what may be termed the "standing" series of papers which have done so much to gain for the Magazine its high reputation, but among the other articles and pedigrees which have been contributed this year the following are deserving of special mention:—"The Pedigree of Maunsell," by Mr. Cokayne, accompanied by abstracts of the evidences from which it was compiled; Dr. Law's discoveries relating to the Visitations of Lewys Dwnn, and the latter's patent as Deputy Herald; Mr. Henry Wagner's pedigree of the Huguenot refugee family of Chalié; Mr. V. C. Sanborn's most interesting "Plough Company of 1630," which will receive attention both in this country and in America; Mr. Foster's "Newcomen and Hummings Pedigree"; and last, but not least, "The Marriages at Fort St. George," which from the fact that many of the founders of our Indian Empire were married within the walls of St. Mary's Church, possess quite an historic interest.

The Genealogist.

A MANUSCRIPT RELATING TO THE FAMILY OF OFFLEY.

A pedigree is to a family history as the skeleton is to the living creature. The facts of birth, marriage and death are essential, but one longs to clothe them with the details of actual life. This has been done for three generations of the Offley family, the author of the following pages, and what must have been years of chronicling seems worthy of publication. The work is the theme of the period in which the distinguished family was a standard in literary English; the author describes a social life at a time in which the family was a standard in the ways of the times, the family was a standard in the growth of a nation.

Sir Thomas Offley can hardly have been a member of the family. "His Mr. Nicholls" had connections in the family, but he was not himself of that family. From the time the name was made known for the individual's attention, it is shown to note that when fortune smiled upon him, the thought of him he was not unmindful of his kindred, but turned up his nose and chose to show in his property. He died not only a merchant of London, but he purchased estates in the shire, which remained for many years the property of his descendants.

The manuscript is in the possession of Miss Mary Offley, of Wombourne, near Barnsley. It passed to the family by the marriage (18 June 1707) of Francis Offley, of Wombourne, with Hannah, daughter of James Offley, of Wombourne, Derbyshire, and widow, with his wife, daughter of James Offley.

The Genealogist.

A MANUSCRIPT RELATING TO THE FAMILY OF OFFLEY.

A pedigree is to a family history as the skeleton to the living creature. The facts of birth, marriage and death are essential, but one longs to clothe them with the details of personal interest. This has been done for three generations of the Offleys by the author of the following pages, and after nearly three hundred years his chronicle seems worthy of publication. The style has the charm of the period in which the Authorised Version gave a standard to literary English: the matter illustrates a phase of social life at a time in which after faction fights had ended with the wars of the Roses, the benevolent despotism of the Tudors encouraged the growth of a wealthy middle class, the foundation of the landed gentry of England.

No one can study the Heralds' Visitations without noticing the close connexion between the City and the country gentry. For the younger son in those days the professions can hardly be said to have existed. He had either to accept the position of a dependent of his elder brother, and to see his children sink into the ranks of the yeomanry, or to seek fortune by trade in the towns. On the other hand, the elder brother not infrequently consolidated his position by a judicious alliance with the daughter of a wealthy merchant, and the merchant found in the purchase of land the only permanent investment for his accumulations. The action and reaction of these movements is shown very clearly in the text.

Sir Thomas Offley can hardly have come to London as a stranger. "His Mr. Nichells" had connexions in Staffordshire, if he was not himself of that county by birth. From the first the path was made smooth for the industrious apprentice. It is pleasant to note that when fortune smiled upon him, like Joseph of old, he was not unmindful of his kindred, but brought up his brothers and sisters to share in his prosperity. He lived and died a merchant of London, but he purchased Madeley Manor in Staffordshire, which remained for many years the principal seat of his descendants.

The manuscript is in the possession of Miss Martin-Edmunds, of Worsbrough, near Barnsley. It passed to the Edmunds family by the marriage (18 June 1767) of Francis Edmunds, of Worsbrough, with Hannah Maria, daughter of Joseph Offley, of Norton in Derbyshire, and coheirress, with her sister Urith, wife of Samuel Shore, of that Edmund Offley, the disposition of whose estates forms the subject of Mr. Hunter's work, "A True Account of the Alienation and Recovery of the Estates of the Offleys of Norton in 1754" (London, 1841, 12mo). It was known to Mr. Hunter who quotes it in his "Chorus Vatum," and to Dr. Samuel Pegge, the antiquary, who in a manuscript history of the owners of Norton, also in the possession of Miss Martin-Edmunds, makes it the basis of his account of the Norton branch of the Offley family.

As to the authorship of the document nothing definite can be said. Internal evidence shows it to have been written in the reign of James I, and Dr. Pegge was disposed to attribute it to "this William Collins" whose kinship to the Offleys is traced at the beginning of the history. It is an equally plausible conjecture that it was the work of John Weston, the younger, son of the wise and discreet servant who secretly married Ellen Offley, Sir Thomas's favourite niece, to his "great choller." There is a personal note in the account of the reconciliation and of the expectation of favours to come, which Sir Thomas's untimely death frustrated. The Westons lived in the neighbourhood of Madeley, and it was at Madeley that the sight of Sir Thomas's picture pendent in the dining chamber rejoiced the heart of the author.

Whoever he may have been, it has been thought better to let him tell his tale without comment and to reserve for the conclusion a pedigree illustrating the somewhat intricate relationships which he describes, and the later generations of the Offleys.

A Comemoraçon of the Life of Williã Offley Bayliffe of Stafford, & after Aldermã of the City of West chester & of the fortunate blessings of god in his children & posterity.

If rare & admirable qualities of o^r Auncestors deserve a Thankfull acknowledgem^t of their worthy life & deeds; And that noe Man is borne for himselfe, For parents, Kindred Freinds yea & antient servants may challenge some p^{te} of their godly and vertuous Acts. Nemo suum querat nec enim sibi nascitur ullus. Non nobis solum nati sumus. Soe then may I rehearse & acknowledge some p^{te} of that I have credibly heard; & most that I have knowne & seene of that worthe Mr. William Offley, [who twice bare the cheifest office in the Burrow Towne of Stafford. Pia et venerabilis series & propago Cradocis et Dorringtoni And by his Trade was A mercer;]¹ who was married to one of the Dorringtons Daughters of Stafford, & Mr. Craddock married the other sister; his Father John Offley then livinge having to wife one Margery, who after was married to one Dillarne a Man of good estate & abilitye in Stafford. This Margerie was Mother to W^m Offley, & Grandmother to S^r Thomas Offley, & by this came the kindred betweene Offley & Collins, Margery Offley, & after Margerie Dillarne Grandmother to S^r

¹ The passage within square brackets has been scored through in the manuscript.

Thomas Offley & mother toould W^m Collins wife, who was Grand-mother to this W^m Collins. But now concerninge W^m Offley hee had by his first wife two soñs, viz^t Thomas & John, This Thomas was sent to London when hee was but xii Yeares of age, & was put apprentice to Mr. John Nechells merchant Tayl^r of London, & merchant of the Staple at Callice, This Mr. Nechells was of great acquaintance wth Mr. William Lillie who made the Gra^mer now called Lyllies Gra^mer, & was newly elected schoolem^t of Jesus schoole in Pauls churchyard, of the foundation of that worthie Doct^r Collett; And this Thomas Offley became a good Gramarian under Mr. Lillie, & understood the Lattine tounge pfectly, & because hee had a sweet voyce, hee was put to learne pricksong amongst the choristers of Paules, for that learned Mr. Lilleye knew full well that the knowledge in Musick was a help & furtherance to all arts. Musica mentis medicina meste, for it is a great helpe to pnuntiacon & Judgm^t. Pythagoras would admitt of noe scholler unless hee had some perfect knowledge in Musick, soe had this Thomas in both these arts above his Fellowes of that tender age. And now leaving the schoole but not his Love of Learninge, hee applied himselfe to his trade of M^cchandize of the staple whereunto he was bound xiii yeares wherein hee p^rfitd soe much by his wisdom & dilligence that hee deserved great love & liking of his Mr. Nichells insomuch that in the tyme of his apprenticeship, hee preferred & p^rmisd him his Daughter & heire Joane Nichells to be his wife, & that they should enjoy his lands & goods & substance. Johannes Nechells Duxit in uxorem Katherinā filiā et heredem Stephani Genings. And this Mr. John Nechells married the Daughter & heire of S^r Stephen Genings that worthie Knight Merchant Tayl^r of the Staple & founder of the Free Schoole in Wolverhampton & Maior of London in the last yeare of the Raigne of K. Henry the Seaventh of Famous memory. This Thomas Offley being in such Favour & Credit & estimacon wth the worshipfull Cittizens & Merchants, sent for his three sisters to London, Margrett, Joane & Izabel. This Margrett was placed in service wth Mr. John Nechells, wth whom her Brother Thomas Offley was prentise. And shortly after the decease of Katherine Daughter & heire of S^r Stephen Genings, this John Nechells tooke to wife his maide servant Margrett Offley, but hee had no issue by her; And here I have occation somewhat to write of the godly life & Death of this Mr. John Nechells who maintained dayly a plentiful table, & releived most of the poore sort of his parish, a very religious and godly man detesting vice and embracing virtue; from his mouth ever to all men pceeded gentle & loving words, & some little tyme before his Death & Departure sitting in his chaire, hee called his Servant Thomas Offley. And s^d to him sonn Thomas I pray thee take money & goe to the Mercers shopp, & buy mee a paire of Sattin sleeves; That shalbe done S^r s^d Thomas will you have any thing else, nothing s^d Mr. Nechells but the blessing of god goe & be with thee, but before hee returned with the Sattin, most quietly & in his chaire hee departed this life. And soe noe doubt hee prophesied truly of this Thomas Offley, for the blessing of god followed him all the dayes of his life; for Immediately after hee was chosen Mr. of his Company of the M^rchant Taylors, & shortly after was elected Alderman, & in Queene Maries was sherriffe of London. Queene Marie sent to her sherriffe Thomas Offley a guilt & graven armour, and xii guilt & graven partisons out of the tower of London in 1553: Guilford Dudley was Deliv'd by the Leivetennant of the tower to Thomas Offley to be beheaded at the tower hill, 1553: In a troublesome tyme when Wyatt of Kent rose wth an army against the Spaniards, & this worthie sheriffe saved many that should have dyed for this Conspiracy, & w^{thin} two yeare after was Maior of London, the yeare before Callice was lost; & in his tyme of Mairallitie was a great dearth of Corne, but it was not seene nor felt in the Lord Maiors howse, His expences were great when hee was sherriffe & in his Mairalitye, & in the yeare after his losse was greater when Callice was lost from the English. For hee lost lands & wools & great substance, yet hee greived not thereat but gave god thankes, as well for the adverse fortune as for his p^rsperity. Hee continued Alderman untill the 25 yeare of Queene Elizabeth of Famous memory, & was cheife Alderman & Father of the City many yeares, welbelovex in Court & Countrey; hee was Maior of the Staples both of England & Westminster above twenty yeares, & although the Order & Custome was every yeare to make theire election for theire Maior, of him still they made there choice as a man most worthie of the place, and Dignity thereof, for in the absence of the Lord cheife Justice the Recognizance of the Staple are acknowledged before the Maior of the Staple & the Recorder of London. Hee was alsoe chosen by her Maiesty to assotiate the Lord Mountague in his Embassage to the City of Bruges in Flaunders. He was knowne to her Maiesty, for kneeling before her at the Knighting of the Lord Maior, shee comanded two of her gentlemen pensioners to take him from kneeling & to sett him upon his Feet. I know you well s^d shee Mr. Alderman, & I knew you in my Father's tyme; this [thus] was hee beloved in Court & Countrey. A loving landlord to his teñents noe Raiser of Rents nor taker of Fines but being urged thereto by his teñants. Of the bodie of his Lady Dame Joane, hee begat three soñs whereof two dyed in theire minority, & the eldest Henry was brought up in his youth in learning & in a vertuous & godly life, could speake & understand the Latine & french tounge, very expert in the art of . . . ¹ and in keeping of accompts, could indite well, did write a faire & legible hand, was factor for his Father in the City of Bruges in Flaunders, sold his wools, received Flemish money, returned into sterling tablet to London payable by bill of exchange; & as hee was vertuously brought up in his youth, soe continued hee all the dayes of his life, an upright & just man, of zealous & sound Religion, fervent in prayer, frequented churches, dilligent in attending & hearing Lectures & Sermons, given to hospitality pittying & releiving the poore. Hee was married by the consent of parents & Freinds in a worshipfull

Family, to one of S^r John Whites Daughters who was sheriffe of London when his Father S^r Thom: Offley was Maior, hee had by his wife Mary three sons & one Daughter the eldest soñe Thomas Offley died before his Father Henrie he was full of Melancholy & fell into a Consumption, & died when hee was about Sixteene yeares of age. Henry the Second soñe dyed in his swadling cloathes. Mary the Daughter next child to Thomas dyed when shee was eight yeares of age & was interrd in S^t Andrews Undershaft in the high chancell by her Grandmother Dame Joane Offley; John Offley the youngest soñe (who is twenty yeare younger then his eldest Brother Thomas) liveth now a K^t in Staffordshire in great authority & estimaçon, married the Daughter of Mr. Fuller Esq^r a man learned in the lawes beloved of the Aldermen & Comon Counsell in London, for that at every parliam^t they elected him for one of the Burgesses; & hee spake his Conscience & was not affraid, & was not affraid of there Faces, in behalfe of the zealous preachers that were silenced; against the Lordliness of some y^t were in authority; hee was as bould as Father Lattimer. This S^r John Offley K^t was high sherriffe of the County of Stafford, & attended the Kings Maiesty, at his returne out of Scotland throughout the s^d County in An^o 1618. But to returne to W^m Offley his Daughters, Margrett the eldest that was married to Mr. John Nechells, who as you have heard had no issue by her but left her very rich, & being a beautifull woman of a goodly complexion, tall & in her best tyme, after was married to Stephen Kirton Cousen & Godsoñe to that worthy K^t S^r Stephen Jennings who had by his wife Margrett two soñs Thomas & John Kirton, This John the younger was a very beautifull man, and at Bruges in Flaunders was tearmed a second Absolon, the Angell of English men, & hee dyed in his best tyme unmarried. Thomas the elder Brother was married in a worshipfull stock & after the decease of his Father Stephen Kirton Alderman of London (who lyeth interrd in the upper end of the Chancell in the church of S^t Andrews Undershaft in London) became a great M^echant & shipped much wools & afterward studied the lawes & became a learned & expert lawyer, & purchased lands in Northamptonshire & dwelled in a goodly house called Thorpp where hee builded & planted Orchyards & gardens, wth all mañer of pleasant Flowers, hearbs, & Fruits, wth pleasant allies & Walkes. A iustice of peace in that Countie, There hee lived at Thorpp & kept good hospitality, & after he grew in yeares hee married his son Stephen Kirton (in house with him) who had the name & sⁿame of his Grandfather who dyed Alderman of London as afores^d. Now touching the Daughters of this Alderman by Margrett his wife, one of the Daughters of old W^m. Offley; the eldest of them was married to S^r Nicholas Woodroffe somtyme Maior of London, who after leaving the Citty and giving up his Cloake (as the tearme is) had a goodly house & estate in Hampshire about thirty miles from London, where hee & his Lady the Daughter of Mrs. Kerton dyed & left behind them sons & Daughters. His Eldest sone

S^r David Woodroffe K^t who married one of the Daughters of S^r John White K^t sister to Mrs. Offley, who was wife to Henry Offley esq^r & mother to S^r John Offley; this David Woodroffe K^t dyed, whose widow was married to S^r George Wrotesley K^t. S^r Nicholas Woodroffe had his youngest Daughter Mary Woodroffe who was married to one Mr. Harding a Marchant who dyed & left his wife a Rich widow in lands & livins, who after was marryd to S^r Thomas White brother to my Lady Wrotesley; Also another Daughter of Stephen Kirton & Margrett his wife was married to S^r Richard White K^t: The third Daughter of this Margrett Kirton was married to one Mr. Whitell a marchant Tailor & marchant of the staple, & late apprentice to her Father Stephen Kerton, this Richard Whetell was greivously tormented wth the ruīng gout in the ioynts of his hands and could not Feed himselfe but somtyme wth a sylver Forke Contra nodosam non est, medicina podagram. This Richard Whetell had one only Daughter by his wife Margrett Whetell who was a beautifull Damsell & Concubine to S^r Thomas Mildmay K^t who after the decease of the ould Lady Mildmay, made her Lady Mildmay, & shortly after this K^t died, & his lady was married to S^r Francis Lacon of Roulett [? Kinlett] in shropshire. The fourth Daughter of Margrett Kerton was married to Mr. Dutton of Sherbourne in the County of Gloucester marchant of the staple a man of great estate & worship A younger brother of the Family of Dutton of the greatest worship of Cheshire & Lancashire, the most famous house (the nobillity excepted) in those Countyes. This Dutton married his children in worshipfull Families one to Mr. Fettiplace learned in the lawes a Famous Counsell^r; & other Daughters that be ladies of worship, His soñe & heire is lame & impotent, as the almighty by nature hath framed him; else doe I marvell that hee doth not challenge the Lands honor & Dignity of Dutton, for that I have heard reported that it was entayled upon the heires male. I cañott name all that are descended from this Stephen Kirton and Margrett his wife Daughter to W^m Offley, and eldest sister to S^r Thomas Offley. And now concerning Izabell Offley the second Daughter shee was married to one Mr. Blower a Rich Cittizen of the Company of Drapers, A man of Faire livings and lands beside his trade who had howses [in] Merck [Mark] lane, In tower street, in little eastcheape & in New fish streete, & in Eastham in Essex. This Blower had issue two soñs Thomas & John, This John Dyed in his prentiship, & Thomas was unthrifty & would not be ruled, but Frequented evill Company & sold his lands, some to his uncle S^r Thomas Offley, & some his mother Izabell bought & gave it by will to her Brethren S^r Thomas & Richard Offley putting them in trust to be good unkells & to have a pvident care of her soñ Thomas who then had marryed a Dutchwoman & shortly after Thomas dyed in good and perfect memory to his last breath very penitent & sorrowfull for his sinfull life past; hee called upon god for mercy with weeping & teares comendinge his soule to his Savio^r

& Redeemer wth such godly words that the preacher reported hee never saw any man dye more godly; soe ended the posterity of Blower whose lands came in question & in suits of lawe by one Goddard who fetched his Pedigree from 8 or 9 Discents, & was overthrown in his suite & was after compounded wth to make a generall release for all his lands, & after that Goddards decease another Goddard his Nephew made a claime & entred suite for the same Lands & Henry Offley defended the title, and after him S^r John his soñe, for a sum of money agreed with Goddard so that the Land is now quiett: And now touching Joane the third Daughter of W^m Offley & sister to S^r Thomas shee was married to one Thomas Michell of London Ironmonger one of the Richest Co^moners within the City of London & dyed wthout issue leaving a great substance to his wife of goods money & lands during her life, & after her Decease hee ordeyned that his executrs should sell the lands w^{ch} were 3 howses at Bassings hall w^{ch} Judge Owen bought & builded a faire Dwelling house in Merrk [Mark] lane w^{ch} was also sould, & all to be bestowed upon Deeds of charity, to the hospitalls, for mending high wayes, for poore maids Marriages and other charitable uses w^{ch} houses were sold for 4 hundred markes & bestowed by the executrs S^r Thomas Offley & S^r Alexander Avenon Knights & Aldermen of London; & S^r Thomas enquired for some of the Kinred of the s^d Mr. Michell in Staffordshire being poore on whom hee liberally bestowed leases & money to theire great Content. And this widow Michell by the advice of her Brother S^r Thomas Offley tooke to husband James Leveson M^cchant of the staple at Callice, a younger & the second soñe of Nicholas Leveson Alderman, a widower, for his first wife was S^r Rowland Hill's Daughter & had by her 3 soñs S^r Richard Leveson, of Lulshell [Lilleshall], Walter Leveson of London M^cchant of the staple, & Edward Leveson of Perton Esq^r, men of wisdom gravity & great substance, & by his latter wife Michells widdow hee had 2 Daughters, the elder was marryed to Walter Aston soñ & heire to S^r Edward Aston of Tixall a famous K^t & mighty in livings Rents & services; the marriage was solemnized at Wolverhampton where for a fortnights space great p^rvision was made for all kind of meate, Beere ale wine & meates most plentiful, In all the Inns and victualling howses, wth Cookes in every Inn, & Tents sett up in the Feilds, not only for the towne & Countrey adjacent, but for all strangers & passengers, that Journeyed through the towne, being a great markett and throughfayre, to the towne of Shrewsbury, Wales and the City of West chester, & all such were liberally received with wholesome and delicate Fare, franke and Free with horse meate and mans meate wthout paym^t of any money & soe were all travellers enterteined during that tyme, such a solempne Franke & Free marriage was never heard of. They had betwene them many children whereof some dyed in theire minority & many were marryed in worshipfull houses according to there degree & estate. The other Daughter Joyce Leveson was marryed to John Gifford Esq^r soñ & heire to S^r Thomas Gifford K^t son & heire to S^r John Gifford, K^t a noble Courtyer one of the best Bowmen and horsemen of England, a man in great Favour wth that mighty King of Famous memory Henry the 8th. This Sr John Gifford builded that goodly house of Chillington where Elizabeth o^r late queene of England of Famous memory kept her Court in her pgressse in Staffordshire, soe did o^r noble King James keepe his Court at Tixall where hee sett Forth his pclamaçon wth these words in the latter end, Given at Tixall the xiith day of August in the xviiiith yeare of o^r Raigne of England France & Ireland &c. Soe this noble King and Queene graced these Famous houses in Staffordshire. As touching the sons & Daughters of Sr Walter Aston of the howse of Tixall, Sr Edward Aston soñ and heire to Sr Walter, a worthy Justice of peace in the County of Stafford and Leicester, a man in estimaçon with the privy Counsell, a man of gravity & wisdome in his youth in so much that the Lord Burleigh Lord Treasurer upon Conference wth him, gave him that Co^mendacon, that hee deserved a better place then to be a justice of peace in Staffordshire, Robert Aston Esq^r the second Brother a man learned in the lawes & a justice of peace in Staffordshire, & Recorder of Stafford; The Daughters also of Sr Walter Aston & his lady Neeces to Sr Thomas Offley were bestowed in worshipfull Familyes, the God-daughter of Sr Thomas Offley married to Mr. Astley of Patshall Esq^r of Antient worship another to W^m Crompton of Stone Esq^r, another to Sr Stephen Slaneys soñ & heire, after whose death shee was marryed to Sr W^m Chetwyn of Ingestry K^t: & others likewise were worshipfully bestowed: In like maⁿer were the Children of John Giffard of Chillington Esq^r, for his sons men of great wealth, pollitique, couragious, & resolute in all attempts, Men of great wisdome, temperance and gentleness, so that they did deserve and continue that name of gentle Gifford. The Daughters likewise were bestowed in worshipfull Familyes, as the Lady Dormer in Northamptonshire & others there sisters matched & lincked to men of like worship & Dignity. And although the bestowing of these Daughters soe worthily matched, might seeme to draw away a great p^{te} of wealth and living into other Familyes such p^{ro}vident care hath beene forseene by these 2 worshipfull howses, that noe p^{te} of ancient inheritance hath beene diminished from the heires, wth seldome may be seene to be performed in many noble houses where god hath blest with many noble children. And as touching Sr Walter Aston K^t is in such credit and Favour wth his maiesty, who hath appointed him for his wisdome & singular Dexterity in Spaine to be an Ambassador, doth obscure his Auncestors, in hono^r and Dignitye, although none can more illustrate there Predecessors, then they that obscure them in such sorte, and although much more might be spoken of the Lady Aston of the Offleys blood who was grandmother to this Lord Embassado^r and Mrs. Joyce Gifford mother to Walter Giffard of Chillington Esquire both being Neeces to Sr Thomas Offley, who from his youth to his ould age was a welbeloved Citizen, a worthy marchant & a fortunate, a wise & a grave senat^r, by whose love & acquaintance his sisters were advanced in Marriage. Soe that from W^m Offley his Father are issued by good Fortune & Education, from the first wife in Stafford in the blood of the Offleys in three discents above foure psons of hono^r worship and gentility. But it may be objected that you show the Felicity of the man, but let us heare of his good & godly life, for it hath beene noted that hee hath beene too much given to the concupiscence of the flesh, & had Children illegittimate, noe marvell thereat for his wife & lady Dame Joane the Daughter & heire of Mr. John Nechells; shee was civill vertuous & learned, meeke, mercifull, iust, sound, and chaste, from her cradle utterly avoyding the concupiscence of the flesh, and after shee came to the yeares of forty shee grew weake & infirme in body & mind, for in her youth shee would write & cast accompts, & receive & pay for all the pvision & accompts bestowed in the howse, & by this infirmity shee was supposed not to contynue many yeares, whereas notwithstanding shee lived above fourescore. And this S^r Thomas Offley the husband being of a pure sanguine complexion, w^{ch} is naturally inclined to a voluptuous life, to fullfill the desires of the Flesh, yett god so wrought in his hart that his mouth should nott offend according to the Psalmist, for hee was wont to say if god had appointed him a Fellowship, to his & her Contents, hee would never have trodd his shoes awrye. And in the Judgm^t of men that was supposed that this lady after her such suddaine defect should not long continue, wherefore this S^r Thomas made choice of a vertuous sober & discreet matron, the widow of one Mr. Pike, whom hee had thought lawfully to have enioyed, but true it is that man may purpose & suppose, but god is hee that Doth determine and Dispose. This gentlewoman for her knowledge and nurture, mañers, wisdom and behavio^r was sought unto by many worshipfull Cittizens for the Educacon of there Children, in Knowledge, Nurture and behavio^r, & not only Cittizens but also the worshipfull in Courte and Countrey. Ladyes of hono^r and Nobility by birth were taught & brought up at Bedd & Board by this Gentlewoman who was after marryed to one Raymond, it was not knowne what became of that Raymond, but shee bare the name of Mrs. Raymond, And S^r Thomas begatt 2 sons of her body, whom he vertuously brought up in learning, & they became good students in the University & hee provided them lyvings, wherein one of them liveth revered, for his calling place & learning, & in great credit & love of his parishioners, the other & the elder god hath taken to his mercy. This Mrs. Raymond dwelt in the next house to the mansion howse of S^r Thomas, & for a long tyme shee dyned and supped wth some of her Gentlewomen, that shee schooled at his Table; but this Gentlewoman growing into yeares departed from S^r Thomas his howse & placed herselfe a Mile of [off] having pvided sufficient mainteynance for her selfe where shee also lived in great Credit and love of her Neighb^{rs} & dyed rich, & left that to her son w^{ch} shee had by Ramond who unthriftilly spent it, & shortly after Dyed, unto this Gentlewoman resorted many tymes Mr. Henry Offley to vissitt her & to have her advice & Councell if any thing did trouble him in body or mind. But now to returne to this worshipfull K^t although hee sometymes was addicted to the lusts of the flesh, to performe the pleasure thereof, yet as it hath beene afores^d, hee never used his tounge to speake any lascivious word or idle speech, the one being the pvocation of nature w^h hath beene in many of the saynts of god, the other the instigation of the Divell; w^h his sin in p^rformance of the lust of the Flesh is cleared & covered by Xte his Savior and hee received in this world a iust reward for that syn, for the extreame punishm^t & agony of the goute pceeding out of the extraordinary lust of the flesh, w^h he was sore tormented withall twice in the yeare. In his old declining age & in his extremity, he wold repeat these words in Lattine, Ego vero vernis sum, I verely am a worme & noe man, the reproach of the people & an abiect of men, I came naked into the world & so shall depart hence againe, All the glory and pompe I have in this world is but a puffe & a blast of wind; It fell out soe by the will of the allmighty that hee & his ladie were sore tormented at one tyme, the one w^h the Ordinarie sickness of the goute, the other w^h the Sicknes unto Death; whereupon hee sent for his brother Robert Offley whose advice & Counsell hee used in all his extremities, saying the tyme is, that my lady & wifes tyme now is come; that shee is like to depart hence out of this world, I canot vissitt her for god hath vissitted mee, And I desire you & my brother Hugh Offley, to helpe mee for pvisiō for her Funerall, wth Black & yard kerchiffes, for fourscore poore weomen & five, blacks for o^r Freinds & Kinsfolke, that this Funerall may be performed to the uttermost according to her calling and Degree; spare not for cost although it cost a 1000^{li} & soe was she interred in a large Vault, & monum^t p^rpared for her & for S^r Thomas & the kinred & posterity of them & soe was shee accompanied to the grave wth funerall pompe of Heraulds, Bañers & Mourners, & M^rs Livery of Marchant Taylors: After that god had taken to his mercy this his fellowship, whom hee loved cherished & mainteyned according to her calling & Degree, bearing w^hall her infirmityes, & knowing by gods word that the life of man was but seventy yeares, & the rest but sorrow & travell, he wold not marry againe though he was moved by many of his Freinds to match himselfe w^h a rich & vertuous widow lady of the Citty, but hee knowing that by such meanes he might hinder the estate of his posterity wold not hearken to that motion, but p^rpared himselfe to make a godly & liberall testam^t. And as he lived to god, so hee dyed to god, hee raised no Rents, nor tooke no Fynes of his tennants but what hee was urged unto by them, & then hee tooke no more then they offered & willingly gave him, Hee was liberall to the poore & espetially to his poore parishion^rs & Neighb^rs whom hee daily releived, hee never sued man for Debt but one Clothier w^h whom hee compounded for halfe the Debt & released him; to all the prison^rs in & about London hee gave releife weekly, hee was one of the chiefe masters of Xtes Hospitall, hee never putt any money to usury, Hee trusted by the blood sheding of his Savior that the blotts & Filthiness of his life were washed & cleane purged, & that hee might enter into the holy hill & Dwell in the Tabernacle of god, hee observed the precept of the xvth psalme; of his iust gotten goods, hee refreshed the bowells of the poore, supposing that to be the best usury, that is bestowed upon the Members of X^{te}. And by his last will & testament hee left all his Lands to his only soñ, & the one halfe of all his goods & substance to his soñ likewise, And the other halfe for his Funeral Charges & expences & Legacies, wherein hee did nott forgett his Servants, his Kinred, & Fourscore & two Persons of poore people, wth Gownes of good bi Cloth: hee remembred all the prisons in and about London liberally. Hee gave to Xtes Hospitall one hundred pounds, Hee gave to the towne of Stafford one hund'd pounds for young beginners for 2 yeares to trade wthall (as his sister Kerton did in like mañer to the same towne), Hee gave 4 hundred Markes to be bes[t]owed upon poore honest maids marriages, upon poore schollers in the University, In the mending of highwayes & other charitable uses, at the discretion of S^r Thomas Bromley K^t Lord Chancellor of England, Hugh Offley Alderman and Robert Offley his Broth^r, and John Offley & Richard Offley & his beloved servant John Weston his Overseers. And after his goods were this devided, betweene his soñs his Funerall & Legacies, the remainder likewise to be devided the one halfe to his soñe, & the other halfe to Charitable Uses at the discretio of his Execut^{rs}. Hee gave also to the poore of the ward where hee was Alderma, Aldgate Warden, certaine wood & Coales at every tyme of X^{mas} for seaven yeares after his Death. I canott remember all the good deeds, all the good benefitts but in parte I reioyce in this worthy K^t when his savior shalbe his Judge and say unto him come thou blessed of my Father &c, Dwell in my Tabernacle enter into my holy hill thou shalt never be removed For when I was hungry thou gavest mee meate, when I was thirsty thou gavest mee drinke, when I was naked thou clothest mee, when I was in prison thou vissitest mee &c.

There was for a Yeares space after every moneth a sermon in remembrance of him: notwithstanding hee shalbe in everlasting remembrance, hee shall not be afraid of any evill tydings. A goodly monum^t was erected for him in the Chancell of S^t Andrews Undershaft in London, His worshipfull Grandchild S^r John Offley hath his picture pendent in his Dying Chamber, the sight whereof doth reioyce my hart so often as I behold it.

- I. John Maunsell, of whom below.
- II. Thomas Maunsell, 2d son, now [1634] living in Ireland, a Sea Captain; born 6² and bap. 7 April 1577;¹ mat. at Oxford (Mag. Hall) 10 Oct. 1594, "aged 14"; was, as "Thomas Maunsell, of Chicheley, Bucks, Gent.; late of Barnard's Inn;" admitted 14 Aug. 1599 to Gray's Inn; settled at Derryvillane, co. Cork, in 1609. He married Aphra, da. of Sir William Craford, of Mongeham Magna, Kent, by Ann, (d. 26 May 1624), da. of JOHN NORTON, of Suffolk and London. In the pedigree of Crayford, of Ampthill, among the additional pedigrees at the end of the Visit. of Beds, printed by the Harleian Society, it is said of this "Captaine Thomas Maunsell" [that he was] "of Vandy [presumably The Vache in Chalfont St. Giles] Bucks." This apparently must have been between 1600 and 1609. He, who was living 5 Feb. 1641/2, on which date he was plundered of £2,496 10s., is said to have, not long afterwards, died at Gloucester, on his journey back to Ireland. Admon. in the Consistory Court of Cork to his sons Thomas and Walter Mansell, which Thomas Mansell, being then "of Moccollop, co. Waterford, Gent.," enters into a bond as to the said admon., 20 April 1661. His widow Aphra was probably then dead, as most certainly she was in or before the next year. M.I. at Cahirconlish, co. Limerick.³ They had issue.⁴

² Memoranda in old writing at Thorpe Malsor, wherein the dates of birth and in some cases those of baptism of several members of the Maunsell family are given.

⁴ Of their two daughters (1) Aphra, married George Peacock, of Graig, co. Limerick, and was buried with her mother; (2) Anne, married Robert Naylor, Dean of Limerick (1639), maternal uncle to the celebrated Richard (Boyle), 1st Earl of Cork; while of the five sons, Richard, the youngest, of whose descendants, if any, nothing is known, gave evidence 20 Aug. 1642 as to above mentioned plundering of his father on 5 Feb. previous. (I). Thomas Maunsell, the 1st son, was of Moccollop, co. Waterford, and joint administrator to his father, 20 April 1661. He is said to be ancestor of the Maunsells of Plassy, Bank Place, Ballywilliam, Oakley Park, Castle Park and Spa Hill. (II). Walter Maunsell, the 2d son, was of Moccollop aforesaid and joint administrator to his father, 20 April 1661, but of his descendants, if any, nothing is known. (III). Boyle Maunsell, of Gaulstown or Kilbroney, co. Kilkenny, left male issue which is now extinct. (IV). John Maunsell, of Ballyvoren, near Cahirconlish, co. Limerick; born at Knockmorne, co. Cork, and educated at Lismore, matric. at Dublin (Trin. Coll.). He married firstly in 1656, Mary, da. of George Booth. She died before 1662 and was buried at Cahirconlish. M.I. He married secondly Jane, da. and coheir of John Campbell, of Callen, co. Kilkenny. She died 23 Jan. 1674. His will dat. 4 Nov. 1685, pr. 4 Feb. 1685/6 at Dublin. By his 1st

III. Richard Maunsell, of the Inner Temple, 3d son, bap. 7 Feb. 1579/80.¹ He married, 9 May 1623, at St. Saviour's, Southwark, Dorothy, widow of Humphrey PHIPPS, of London, merchant (who was buried at St. Swithin's, London, 18 Jan. 1620/1), da. of Henry MORDAUNT, of Thunderley, co. Essex, by Susan, da. of Symon BELKNAP. He died s.p. about 1631. His admon. in C.P.C. 13 Dec. 1631, as "of Woodford, co. Essex, Esq.," granted to his nephew John Maunsell; the relict, Dorothy, renouncing. She, probably, married, as a third husband Richard HASLEWOOD, of Belton, co. Rutland, and was living 1645.

1. MARY, bap. 20 June 1568;¹ married before July 1602, (—) CONNY, and had issue.
2. ELIZABETH, bap. 3 Sep. 1570;¹ married before July 1602, (—) PETTIT, and had issue.
3. MARTHA, bap. 3 May 1571;¹ married 24 March 1590/1, Henry EDWARDS, and had issue.¹

JOHN MAUNSELL, of Chicheley afsd., afterwards of Bromley, co. Kent, and of Thorpe Malsor, co. Northampton, eldest son of Thomas Maunsell, of Chicheley, by Agnes, his wife, both abovenamed; born 9 and bap. 12 Dec. 1574;² succeeded his father in April 1582; mat. at Oxford (Mag. Hall) 27 Oct. 1592, aged 17; admitted to the Middle Temple, 1594; Barrister-at-Law.¹ He, in 1622, purchased the estate of Thorpe Malsor.¹ He married 25 Jan. 1601/2,¹ Katharine, da. of Richard Ward, of Hurst, co. Berks, Esq. She died 18 Aug. 1607, aged 28.¹ He died 19 Oct. 1625 and was buried at Bromley, aged 50.¹ M.I. Will dat. 12 July 1621, pr. 4 Feb. 1625/6 in C.P.C. (35 Hele). They had issue, three sons—

- I. THOMAS MAUNSELL, born 1602 and died 2 April 1606.¹ He is mentioned in the will, dated April 1605 (proved Feb. 1605/6), of Sir Richard Ward, of Hurst aforesaid, as "THOMAS WARD MANCELL, my godson."
- II. John Maunsell, of whom below.
- III. Thomas Maunsell, of the Middle Temple, 2d surviving son, born 15 May 1606;¹ admitted to the Middle Temple, 1626; Barrister, 1633; died unm., 25 Feb. 1643, aged 36, and was buried at Thorpe Malsor. M.I.

JOHN MAUNSELL, of Woodford, co. Essex, and Thorpe Malsor aforesaid, Barrister at Law, 1st surviving son & heir of John wife he had issue male who inherited the Ballyvoreen, the Ballybrood, and other estates. By his 2d wife he had Thomas Maunsell, of Drombane, co. Limerick, his youngest son, born 1 Dec. 1673, who was Sheriff of co. Limerick 1715, and who in March 1727/8, succeeded to the estate of Thorpe Malsor, co. Northampton (under the will of his cousin Robert Maunsell) and died there 27 Sep. 1739 in his 67th year, being ancestor, in the male line, of the succeeding and now [1902] existing possessors thereof.

Maunsell, of Chicheley, Bromley and Thorpe Malsor, by Katharine, his wife, both abovenamed; born 12 March 1604/5;¹ adm. to Lincoln's Inn, 9 Nov. 1624, his father being then described as "of Chicheley;" succeeded his father in Oct. 1625; entered his pedigree in the Visitation of Essex, 1634. He married 8 June 1626,¹ Susan, da. of Humphrey Phipps, of London, merchant, abovenamed, by Dorothy, da. of Henry MORDAUNT and Susan, his wife, both also abovenamed. He died 2 May 1677, aged 73, and was bur. at Thorpe Malsor. Will dat. 21 May 1669 to 24 Nov. 1675, pr. 30 May 1677 in C.P.C. (51 Hale). His widow died 29 Nov. 1678, and was bur. at Thorpe Malsor. Will dat. 20 May 1677, pr. 3 Feb. 1678/9, in C.P.C. (22 King). They had issue, seven sons and five daughters—

- I. Robert Maunsell, 1st son & heir ap., aged 5 & upwards in 1634; of whom below.
- II. Charles Maunsell, 2d son, born 14 Feb. 1629,² living 1634; died young.
- III. John Maunsell, of London, merchant,⁵ 3d son, born 24 Aug. 1630.² He married in or before 1664, Martha, da. of (—). He died at Edmonton, Middx., 12 Dec. 1670. Will, in which he describes himself as "of the city of London, Leatherseller," dat. 21 Nov. 1670, pr. in C.P.C., 9 Jan. 1670/1, 23 June 1680 and 8 June 1689 (7 Duke). His widow married (Lic. Vic. Gen. 5 Feb. 1671/2, she being then of Bow, co. Middx., about 33) George DUKE, of Aylesford, co. Kent, "Esq.," then about 55 and a widower. He was living 1677. She died before June 1680. They had issue, two sons and two daughters—

(I). ROBERT MAUNSELL, of whom below.

(II). JOHN MAUNSELL, 2d and youngest son, born about 1667; living a minor in June 1680, but of full age in June 1689. He died s.p., probably before 1704, as he is not mentioned in the will of his uncle, Robert Maunsell, dated 17 Jan. 1704, entailing the family estates, or in any subsequent wills of any of the family.

(1). SARAH, born about 1664; died unm. 10 and was buried 17 Sep. 1684 in her 20th year, at Thorpe Malsor. M.I.

(2). MARY, 2d and youngest da., born about 1668; was a minor in June 1680, but of full age in June 1689. She died unm. and was buried 17 Oct. 1726 at Thorpe Malsor. Will dat. 11 Dec. 1725, pr. in C.P.C., 4 Nov. 1726 (240 Plymouth).

² He is described as "merchant" in the monumental inscription to his daughter Sarah.

IV. Richard Maunsell, 4th son, born 24 Feb. 1633;² living 1634; died young.

V. THOMAS MAUNSELL, of Rothwell, co. Northampton; born 29 Aug. 1640² and bap. at Thorpe Malsor.⁶ By the will of his brother Robert, he, on the death without issue of his nephew, another Robert Maunsell, which happened 10 Feb. 1716/7, was entitled for life to the reversion of the estate of Thorpe Malsor, subject to the life estate therein of his said nephew's widow, whom, however, he predeceased. He, who was the last male descendant of the purchaser of that estate, died unm. and was bur. at Thorpe Malsor 24 Oct. 1721. Will dated 21 Oct. 1720, proved 28 Oct. 1721 (207 Buckingham).

VI. HEMPHREY MAUNSELL, born 31 Jan. 1642,² and bap. at Thorpe Malsor;⁶ was sometime Fellow of King's College, Cambridge; B.A., 1666; M.A., 1670; died unm., of consumption, at Montpelier, in France. Will dat. 6 Jan. 1676/7, pr. 14 April 1677 in C.P.C., by his father (40 Hele).

VII. HENRY MAUNSELL, of London, merchant, youngest son; born 1 Aug. 1647² and bap. at Thorpe Malsor.⁶ He died unm. 5 and was buried 9 Nov. 1699 as a "Lodger at Mr. Lucy's" at St. Mary's, Wolnoth, London. Admon. in C.P.C., 18 Dec. 1699.

1. *Dorothy,*⁷ born 19 March 1627,² only da. in 1634. She mar. in or before 1659 William WHEELOWES, of Gayton, co. Northampton, Gentleman of the Privy Chamber (1671), who was bur. at Gayton, 29 Sep. 1680. She was living 1704. They had issue.

2. CATHARINE,⁷ born 16 July 1639² and bap. at Thorpe Malsor;⁶ mar. there 10 Feb. 1658 the Rev. John COURTMAN, D.D., Rector of Thorpe Malsor, who died 9 and was buried there 12 Feb. 1691/2, aged 65; M.I. His will dat. 28 Dec. 1691, pr. 23 March 1691/2, in C.P.C. (34 Fane). She died 27 Jan. 1704 and was buried there, aged 66; M.I. They had issue.

3. SUSAN,⁷ born 19 Oct. 1644² and bap. at Thorpe Malsor;⁵ mar. there 1 Aug. 1665 Edward HILL, of Rothwell Manor, co. Northampton, who entered his pedigree in the Heralds' Visitation of that County, 1681,⁸ and who died 1 Aug. 1705, aged 70. She was buried at Rothwell 29 Oct. 1731, aged 88; M.I. They had issue, 19 children.
4. ELIZABETH,⁷ born 26 June 1646² and bap. at Thorpe Malsor.⁶ She is said to have mar. (—) LEIGH. She died before 6 Jan. 1676/7.
5. MARY,⁷ born 12 Oct. 1648² and bap. at Thorpe Malsor;⁶ mar. there 4 May 1669, Daniel BLUNDELL, of St. Mary le Bow, London, whose will dat. 5 Jan. 1674/5, was proved 15 May 1679 in C.P.C. (53 King). She was living 1675, but died before 1704. They had issue.

ROBERT MAUNSELL, of Thorpe Malsor aforesaid, 1st son of John Maunsell, of the same, by Susan, his wife, both abovenamed; born 15 Jan. 1628;² being aged 5 years & upwards in 1634; adm. to Lincoln's Inn 3 Nov. 1649; succeeded his father in May 1677. He married 17 April 1656, at Thorpe Malsor, Judith, da. of Thomas BROOKE, of Great Oakley, co. Northampton, by Margaret, da. of Sir John WALTER, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer.⁹ He died without surviving issue, 27 and was bur. 29 May 1705, at Thorpe Malsor, aged 77; M.I. Will dat. 19 Jan. 1704/5, to 20 May 1705, proved 18 July 1705, in C.P.C. (121 Gee). His widow, to whom for her life he devised his estates, died 27 and was bur. 29 April 1709, at Thorpe Malsor. Will dat. 14 July 1708, proved 29 April 1709 (293 Lane). They had issue—

JOHN MAUNSELL, only son, born 12 and bap. 23 Feb. 1666, at Thorpe Malsor; died young, 31 Dec. 1677, and was bur. there; M.I.

SUSAN, died in infancy.

ROBERT MAUNSELL, of Thorpe Malsor aforesaid, 1st son of John Maunsell, of London, merchant, by Martha, his wife, both abovenamed, which John was next surviving brother of Robert Maunsell, the late proprietor. He was born 1 and bap. 23 Jan. 1665, at Thorpe Malsor. He succeeded to that estate on the death, 27 April 1709, of the widow of the said Robert Maunsell (his uncle) the last possessor. He married, after Jan. 1704/5, his cousin Catharine, da. of the Rev. John COURTMAN, D.D., Rector of Thorpe Malsor, by Catharine, da. of John MAUNSELL, of Thorpe Malsor, both abovenamed. He died without issue and intestate 10, and was bur. 12 Feb. 1716/7, at Thorpe Malsor, aged 52; M.I. His widow who, for her life, possessed the estate in dower, was bur. at Thorpe Malsor 1 March 1727/8. After her death the estate passed, under the will of her husband's uncle, Robert Maunsell, dat. 19 Jan. 1704/5,¹⁰ to the testator's "cousin Thomas Maunsell (son of cousin John Maunsell, of Ireland, Esq., commonly called Captain Maunsell) for his life," with rem. to his sons in tail male. This Thomas Maunsell (who was youngest son of Captain John Maunsell, a younger son of Thomas, the emigrant to Ireland in 1609, who was a younger brother of John Maunsell, the purchaser, in 1622, of the Thorpe Malsor estate) took possession of Thorpe Malsor accordingly and died there 27 Sep. 1739, in his 67th year, being ancestor of the Rev. Cecil Henry Maunsell, the present holder.¹¹

KING ARTHUR: A CRITICISM.

In all the literature of romance there is no more attractive figure than Arthur. The legend has always had a fascination for me; and many an hour have I spent in vain endeavours to spin from it ever so slender a thread of history; but the task was like making ropes of sand, and I had not the wizard's secret. Eagerly therefore I took up The Genealogist, hoping that a more cunning hand than mine might prove to have achieved success.

Mr. Scott-Gatty's tentative pedigree gives a sad blow to these hopes. It is needless to remind him that neither a duchy of Cornwall nor a kingdom of North Wales existed in Arthur's time: how then are we to accept a duke of the one in the fifth, and a king of the other in the third century, as real persons? Helen again, mother of Constantine the Great, is said to have been a Dacian princess. Certain it is that from Greece sprang the original of her name, and that her son was born in Dacia. Before we are asked to reject that story in favour of King Coel, it would be well at least to offer some show of reason, and some evidence that Constantius had visited Britain at an earlier date. And when a second Helen is put down, without any evidence, as mother of a second imperial Constantine, and daughter of a second British king, it makes one the more incredulous.

But let us test the pedigree by dates. Of the same generation are the emperor who died in 306, and another slain in 388. History relates that Constantine the Great was born in 272. In 313 he had a marriageable daughter; in 323 a son capable of commanding his fleet. His mother may have been born circa 250; her father circa 225—certainly not much later than 230. Llewellyn is called his next brother: suppose we date his birth as late as 245, and his son's 290. That is to strain probabilities; but even so we make Maximus all but one hundred at the time of his execution, over ninety when he embarked on a career of military adventure, and sixty or seventy at the most probable date for the birth of Constantine. Before proceeding further, would it not be well to refute the historians who represent him as a Spaniard, and Constantine (here called his son) as an adventurer of humble origin? Lastly if, as it would seem, Constantine's sons were grown men in 411, how old was Ambrose when he overthrew Vortigern, and begot Arthur—assuming for the moment that Ambrose was his son, and that the dates assigned to Ambrose and Arthur are correct?

As a matter of fact these dates have no basis except a palpable mistranslation of Gildas, for which a gloss of Bede's seems to be responsible. Other chronologers put them thirty years or so later. What Gildas says is this.¹ From the rise of Ambrose the war continued, with varying fortune, usque ad annum obsessionis Badonici montis [qui prope Sabrinum ostium habetur] novissimæque ferme de furciferis non minimæ stragis, quique quadragesimus quartus, ut novi, orditur annus, mense jam primo emenso, qui jam et meæ nativitatæ est.

Apart from textual variations, the sentence is characteristically obscure and anacoluthic, and its meaning may be open to question; but no editor that I have seen has introduced into his text any mention of "the landing of the Saxons," as in Bohn's translation, which Mr. Scott-Gatty quotes. The words orditur (or oritur, whichever is the correct reading) and ut novi seem to me to shew conclusively that he is reckoning backward from the date of writing to Mount Badon; while mense (not annus) is the natural antecedent to qui. I would therefore paraphrase thus:—The year now begun is, to my own knowledge, the forty-fourth since that event; and one month is already over—the month of my birth."

What then of Gildas—the one authority contemporary with the age of Arthur; and how much does he tell us? The Vita Gildæ makes him one of four and twenty sons of a Scottish king; but that is scarcely credible, after reading his own description of the Scots.² Others interpret the sentence above quoted to mean that he was born in the year of Mount Badon, a sense which, it seems to me, the words will hardly bear; yet to square with that theory he has been split up into two, and a Gildas Badonicus invented. Internal evidence shews that he was either a Roman domiciled in Britain, or a Briton saturated with the Roman culture and traditions, who flourished in the sixth century. Latin is nostra lingua: Diocletian the lawful emperor; Maximus and the rest being mere upstarts and pretenders. On the other hand, the soil of Britain is in nostro cœspite: Picts, Scots and Saxons nostri inimici: even the sins and follies of the Britons are upon his own head. He played in fact the part of a British Jeremiah. His admiration is all for Rome, the seat of religion and empire: the Roman character and institutions he contrasts with the vices and disorder of his own countrymen—their lack of courage, manliness, and stability; their want of foresight; their internecine feuds. The desperate struggle for existence, and their great deliverance, had taught them a lesson; but a generation since grown up was fast lapsing into the old vices. Of all this Gildas writes as within his own recollection.

² For the Picts and Scots Gildas expresses a peculiar abhorrence. The Saxons he represents as bloodthirsty and treacherous foes; but Picts and Scots as ridiculous and degraded savages as well.

Unfortunately the History, so called, is not a narrative, but a piece of turgid rhetoric, involved and obscure. The facts it supplies might all be compressed into a paragraph or two. Moreover even in his time the materials for history were wanting. The land was desolate; the cities in ruins; the people reduced to savagery, or scattered upon other shores. In the absence of native records, he tells us, he wrote the tale of all that Britain did and suffered under the Roman emperors as best he could, non tam ex scripturis patriæ scriptorumve monumentis, quippe quæ vel si qua fuerint aut ignibus hostium exusta [sunt] aut civium exsili classe longius deportata non compareant, quam transmarina relatione, quæ crebris inrupta intercapedinibus non satis claret.

In other words, continental authors supplied him with brief notices of the conquest of Britain, the careers of Constantius, the two Constantines, and Maximus, the appeal to Aëtius, and so forth; but even then he could find no means of filling the gaps between.

Maximus he seems to represent as British born;¹ but for a fact two centuries before his own time he is no better authority than another. As for Ambrose, he flatly contradicts Mr. Scott-Gatty (whom Bohn's translation seems again to have misled) and says distinctly that his parents, Romans, no doubt of official rank, met their deaths (not in the struggle for the empire, but) in the Saxon invasion. So much for the conjecture that Constantine the emperor was his father. But once more I quote the passage:—

... duce Ambrosio Aureliano, viro modesto, qui solus [fuit comis fidelis fortis veraxque] forte Romanæ gentis [qui] tantæ tempestatis collisione occisis in eadem parentibus purpura nimirum indutis superfuerat: cujus nunc temporibus nostris soboles magnopere avita bonitate degeneravit ...

Nor does Gildas say that the soboles Ambrosii "provoke to battle their cruel conquerors," as Bohn has led Mr. Scott-Gatty to suppose,² but that the remnant of the Britons under Ambrose himself took heart of grace and did so. Lastly, the word soboles

(if it have any precise application) cannot possibly refer to Arthur. His firm and enlightened rule (if he ever did rule) was already past and over when Gildas wrote.

The Epistola Gildæ seems to indicate the persons really meant. That Jeremiad selects for special reprobation or admonition five contemporary kinglets: (i) Constantine,¹ "tyrannical whelp of the foul Damnonian lioness," who that very year violated the sanctuary, and put to the sword two young princes of the blood royal; (ii) young Aurelius Conan [or Caninus] another "lion's whelp"; (iii) greyhaired Vortipor, tyrant of the Demetæ, "infamous son of a good king"; (iv) Cuneglas, whose name is wrested into the Latin lanio fulvus, "bloody butcher," in order to fasten upon him that opprobrious description²; (v) Maglocun, "the island dragon," a mighty warrior who had the best of masters, overcame a king his uncle in his youth,³ and despoiled many tyrants of life and kingdom. Among these, on several grounds, one is tempted to seek the seed of Arthur and of Ambrose; though indeed, so far as the testimony of Gildas goes, there might be no Arthur at all, but Ambrose the hero of Mount Badon and saviour of his race.

From Gildas we turn to "the collection of Welsh and Anglian legends which passes under the name of Nennius,"⁴ to which the date here assigned is circa 796. Other writers have supposed it a good deal later; but the point is of little consequence. Between this work and the age of Arthur admittedly lies not merely the gulf of centuries, but a great national cataclysm. If Gildas had to deplore the absence of documents, few indeed can have survived the renewed struggle with the Saxons and their final victory. The consequences soon appear. Constantius, who died in Britain, is here the son, not the father, of Constantine the Great. Yet these were not obscure personages, unrecorded in the annals of their time. Note the introduction of the marvellous—the miracles of St. German and St. Patrick; the death of Guortigirn by fire from heaven. Ambrosius now becomes homo sine patre, the fruit of a sort of immaculate conception;⁵ though turning the page we find in this curious patchwork a second and contradictory account taken from Gildas. "Unus est pater meus de consulibus Romanicæ gentis." The contemporary author tells us plainly that the Saxon war was long and doubtful. Here we read another story—an invincible hero, and unbroken success:—

² Also "urso multorum sessor aurigæque currus receptaculi ursi." The expression recalls the gloss on Nennius which renders Arthur "ursus horribilis," and seems to suggest for his name the etymology Arcturus.

³ This description cannot fail to remind us of the story of Modred.

Corruerunt in uno die nongenti sexaginta viri de uno impetu Arthur, et nemo prostravit eos nisi ipse solus; et in omnibus bellis victor exstitit.

In short, we have passed already from history to the realm of fiction and romance; and no modern "Vindication" can disguise the fact.

The texts of Nennius vary more widely even than those of Gildas. But all the editors I have seen read that Ambrose fuit rex inter omnes reges Brittanice gentis, not in omnes regiones Britannia. Whatever that may mean, to write of an elective monarchy looks to me like anachronism. It was not "the natives," but Guorthigirn, to whom he had previously been a cause of apprehension, as the narrative goes on to explain. When Arthur pugnabat contra illos cum regibus Brittonum, sed ipse dux erat bellorum, the sentence, fully quoted, need not exclude him from royal rank. The passage which contains the expression Arthur map uter is only found upon the margin of one MS., though for some inexplicable reason it was interpolated in the text of Hardy's edition. The glossator himself, so far from making uter a person's name, or even a title, translates the two words filius horribilis. So much for the mighty Uther Pendragon!

Arthur thus remains, and must remain, a hero of romance: in history, the shadow of a shade.¹ Mr. Scott-Gatty's courageous attempt to clothe him with substance has painfully emphasised our doubts. His very existence is matter of faith, not of knowledge.

"Rain, rain, and sun! a rainbow on the lea!
And truth is this to me, and that to thee:
And truth or clothed or naked let it be.

"Rain, sun, and rain! and the free blossom blows:
Sun, rain, and sun! and where is he who knows?
From the great deep to the great deep he goes."

But if there be no evidence of his wisdom and his valour, there is even less, perhaps, of the frailties and vices attributed to him. While some of his exploits recall Samson and the Maccabees, his incestuous amours read like an echo of the story of Amnon. We are thus at liberty to picture our hero as near spotless as we choose. As a legendary figure—saviour of his country, the dauntless champion of a lost cause, he is incomparable. We cannot part with him. Though he yield up to Ambrose his kingship among kings, or even the victory of Mount Badon, among the unnamed chieftains who shared the glory and anguish of that deadly strife, there is room for him still. With that we must needs be content; for vain would be the hope that, from some far off Egyptian midden, may yet be unearthed the evidences lost even before the day when Gildas wrote.

W. H. B. B.

¹ I am surprised to find Mr. Scott-Gatty writing of Arthur's bid for the empire as if that were history. Had it been so, we should certainly hear of it from foreign annalists. When his name had become the centre of a legend cycle, the deeds of others tended, as usual, to crystallise round it. In this story, for example, we may see the rise of Constantine, or Maximus, or as some have thought, of Charlemagne.

Thomas Cruys,
the plaintiff.

Thomas claimed by a feoffment made to Alexander Cruys and the heirs male of his body.

A deed enrolled on this Roll shows that William Fenys, Kt., Lord de Say, son and heir of James Fenys, Kt., late Lord de Say of Sele (sic), had sold to Geoffrey Boleyn, Citizen and Alderman of London, the manors of Hevere-Cobham, Hevere-Brocas, Sele and Kemsyng. In another deed Geoffrey Boleyn is styled Mercer and Alderman of London.

De Banco. Hillary. 4. Ed. 4. m. 244 dorso.

Sussex.—Alianora, Countess of Northumberland, sued John, Bishop of Chichester, Elizabeth, formerly wife of Robert Ponynge, and another, for the next presentation to the Chantry of Craweley.

Robert Ponynge, Kt.,

temp. E. 1 (sic).

John.

William.

William Utteworth,
the plaintiff.

The defendants called to warranty Nicholas Turvyll, who appeared and warranted the manor to them, but subsequently made default, and the plaintiff recovered. The suit is probably a recovery by a collusive suit.

De Banco. Hillary. 4. Ed. 4. m. 425.

Devon.—Walter Reynelle sued John Colyford, the Prior of St. John the Baptist, of Exeter, to give up to him a "calathus" containing deeds and muniments relating to the manors of Malstone, Estwogwill and other places, and he stated that one Elizabeth Maltstone, daughter and heir of Robert Malstone, was formerly seised of the manors and had enfeoffed William Stigill in them, who had enfeoffed John de Montagu, Chivaler, who had enfeoffed William Stigill, from whom he gave this descent:—

William Stigill,
 Margaret.
 |
 Walter Reynell,
 the plaintiff.

The defendant stated that Robert de Malstone was formerly seised of the manors, and his son Robert had died s.p., and they descended by special remainder to Robert, the son and heir of Thomas de Loghtyndon, and the heirs of his body, and failing such, to Ralph de Shillyngford and the heirs of his body, from whom he gave this descent:—

Ralph de Shillyngford, had been seised of the manors, and being in possession of the calathus and had lost it.

De Banco. Hillary. 4. Ed. 4. m. 484.

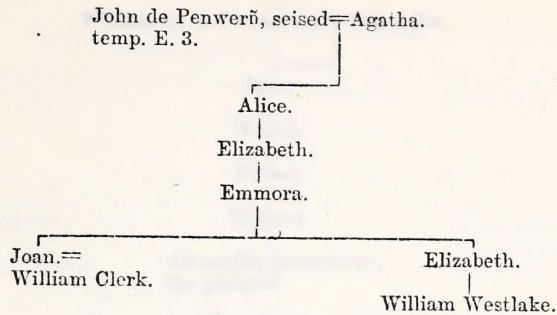

Kent.—John Culpeper, Richard Culpeper, and Nicholas Culpeper, the sons of Walter Culpeper, sued John Fogge, Kt., for the fourth part of two messuages, two mills and divers lands and rents in Pepynbury, Tunbrigge and Tudeley.

The reader will note the sub-division of the land owing to the tenure by gavelkind.

De Banco. Trinity. 5. Ed. 4. m. 118.

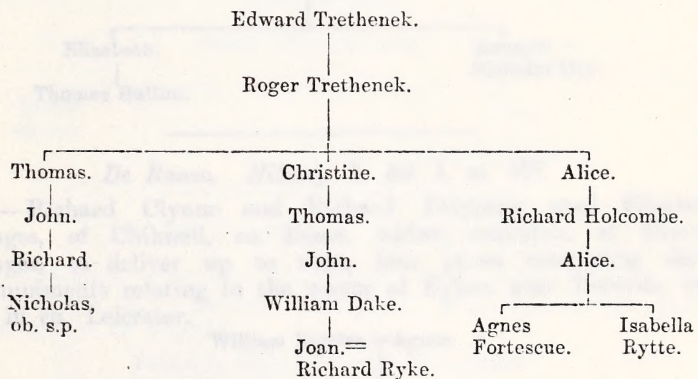

Cornwall.—William Clerk and Joan, his wife, and William Westlake sued William Menwynnek for lands in Penwerñ, which John de Penwerñ had given to John de Penwerñ and Agatha, his wife, and the heirs of their bodies.

The suit was dismissed, as William Westlake had died since the issue of the writ.

De Banco. Mich. 5. Ed. 4. m. 542.

Cornwall.—John Moyle sued John Rytte, late of Dountomas, gentleman, for an illegal entry by force into lands in Trethynnek, in the parish of Lanrak.

John Moyle claimed by a grant of Richard Ryke and Joan. John Rytte acting for Agnes and Isabella had expelled him, and stated that Roger Trethenek never had a daughter named Christine. See suit at p. 27.

De Banco. Hillary. 5. Ed. 4. m. 129.

Suffolk.—Alexander Crossovere sued William Geddyng for execution of a Fine levied 10 E. 2, between William de la Crossovere, of Ikelyngham, and Petronilla, his wife, complainants, and Adam de Gedding and another, deforciant, respecting lands and rents in Ikelyngham.

1. George.
2. John (IX). Ancestor of the Leeds branch.

The above is the early part of the Thoresby pedigree entered by Sir W. Dugdale. According to the researches made by Mr. A. S. Ellis (see Thoresby Soc. Miscellanea, vol. ix, 112) it is manifestly incorrect, though as the antiquary was only seven years old at the time, he is not responsible for it.

Mr. Ellis considers it doubtful if Ralph Thoresby (VII) ever existed. The branch at West Cottingwith had been there for some generations and left their wills, three of which are copied by Mr. Ellis. He thinks it probable that it descends from John, a second son of George Thoresby (II).

We therefore must begin with Richard Thoresby, of West Cottingwith, whose will is dated in 1558, as under:—

- A. RICHARD THORESBY, of West Cottingwith, in the parish of Thorganby. Will 25 Nov. 1558, pr. at York 23 Nov. 1563, to be bur. in Thorganby Church; mar. . . ., bur. in Thorganby Church. They had issue—

CHEKE OR CHEEK FAMILY.—It is stated in Burke's "General Armory" that the Chekes of Evesham are descended from Sir John Cheke, preceptor to Edward VI. I have a pedigree of the Evesham family carried back to Solomon Cheke, living in the middle of the eighteenth century.

If any reader of The Genealogist could refer me to record evidence of the above-mentioned Solomon Cheke's descent from the preceptor's family, I should feel greatly obliged.

KING ARTHUR.

In his criticism of my paper on King Arthur, Mr. B. accuses me of carelessness in preparing it—this I candidly admit; of misleading my readers by quoting Dr. Giles' translation of Gildas—this I am not so sure about, and will presently consider; of quoting passages from Nennius that do not appear in the text—this I deny and will prove later on; and, finally, of making a general chronological bungle of the whole situation. As to this, as far as my paper covered the ground, i.e., from A.D. 382 to 493, the chronology is absolutely feasible. The connection between Maximus and Constantine the Great I must allow is weak, and I regret having quoted this particular Welsh tradition, which, after all, had very little bearing upon the subject my paper dealt with. My authority for it was The Hendre Book, and my reason for quoting it was that I am strongly inclined to think there was some such connection between these two men. One fact with regard to this criticism I must say very much surprises me. Mr. B., who poses as a student of the Arthurian legend, has missed, or entirely ignored, the only two novelties in my paper, the only two points, in fact, worthy of consideration or criticism, and for which alone the paper was written. The story and traditional ancestry of Arthur is known to every student of British or Welsh history, and every one is at liberty to believe it or not as they like. The sole object of my paper was to lay before my readers two possibilities—(1) that the mythical Uther Pendragon might be identical with the historical Ambrosius Aurelianus; pleading that as the word Uther, used as a proper name, is unknown in Welsh genealogies, with the exception of the traditional father of Arthur, and as the term "Uther Pendragon" might be translated as meaning "the wonderful, horrible, or victorious commander in chief," it might, after all, be a nom de guerre for Ambrosius: (2) that the Cystennyn Vendigaid, or Constantine the Blessed, son of Tydwall, King of Armorica, with his son Constans, a monk, of Welsh tradition, might be identical with the historical Constantine the Usurper, with his son Constans, a monk. The only notice Mr. B. takes of these two novelties is, in the one instance an exclamation of "so much for the mighty Uther Pendragon," of which, I must admit, I don't quite see the relevancy, and in the other a suggestion that Constantine ap Tydwall was identical with Constantine of Damnonia, mentioned by Gildas in his Epistola as then living!!

Mr. B. asks for further data. I therefore give such data as concisely as possible in the form of a tentative chronological summary. I must ask my readers to remember that this summary, as was my paper, is based upon the assumption that the battle of Badon Mount was fought circa 492-3 and not A.D. 516, which is the date given in the Annales Cambriae. This date circa 492-3 throws King Arthur back twenty-three years, and so brings all the leading characters of this epoch within chronological touch of one another.

TENTATIVE CHRONOLOGICAL SUMMARY.

382 A.D. Maximus, by birth a Briton,¹ or a Spaniard,² or from parts near Britain,³ was in command of the Roman army of occupation in Britain. The army revolt, and elect him Emperor of the West.⁴

388 A.D. Maximus was beheaded at Aquileia, and his son Victor was slain at Vienne.⁴

Welsh tradition claims Maximus as a Briton, and gives him by Helen his wife, who was daughter and heir of Eudhaf, King of Britain, the following sons:—Owain Vinddu, Ednyved, Peblig, and Cystennyn.⁵ He is mentioned by Gildas, Bede, and Nennius.

400 A.D. [N.B., this is quite a possible date for the birth of Ambrosius Aurelianus, or it might be placed even earlier.]

407 A.D. The army in Britain again revolt and elect one Marcus, Emperor of the West, but shortly after kill him. They then elect one Gratian, a Briton, to the same post; he reigned only four months and was, like his predecessor, put to death. Constantine, another Briton, was then elected Emperor of the West.⁴

Welsh tradition states that Gratian the Usurper was killed both by Constantine, son of Maximus, and by Constantine, son of Tydwall.⁶

407-11 A.D. Constantine, a Briton, of low extraction,⁷ no obscure person,⁸ serving in the army of occupation in Britain, was, upon the death of Gratian the Usurper, elected Emperor of the West by the army. Passing into Gaul he gained a great victory over the Vandals, upon which Honorius the Emperor, against his will, recognised his election by sending him the Imperial robe. He had a son called Constans, who was a monk, but of whom he nevertheless made a Cæsar. Gerontius, a British general commanding the forces in Spain, thinking he had been slighted, caused a revolt in the army against Constantine, the outcome of which was that Constantine and his son Julian were murdered at Arles, and Constans Cæsar, late a monk, was slain at Vienne an^o 411⁴.

Welsh tradition states that Cystennyn Vendigaid, or Constantine the Blessed, grandfather of King Arthur, was second son of Tydwall, King of Armorica. At the request of the Britons he landed here with an army to assist them against the Picts and Scots. He slew Gratian, and was thereupon elected King of Britain. He married a Roman lady, and had issue by her three sons. Constans, the eldest, was a monk, yet nevertheless succeeded to the throne of Britain; Emrys Wledie, or Ambrosius Aurelianus, the second son; and Uther Pendragon, the third son, father of King Arthur. Constantine and his son Constans, the monk, were both slain at the instigation of Vortigern, a Briton, who thereupon seized the British throne.¹ At the time of this occurrence, both Ambrosius Aurelianus and Uther Pendragon were children.²

448-9 A.D. Anterior to this date Ambrosius was leading a faction against Vortigern.³ The Saxons, under the leadership of Hengist and Horsa, landed in Kent.⁴

455 A.D. Ambrosius and Vortimer, son of Vortigern, gained a victory over the Saxons at the battle of Aylesford.⁵

456-63 A.D. [N.B. Between these dates Ambrosius was elected supreme King of Britain.]

463 A.D. [N.B. This is a possible date for the birth of King Arthur. Mallory, in his Morte Dartur, opens with this sentence:—"It befel in the dayes of Uther Pendragon when he was kyng of all England." This must have been after Vortigern had been deposed. He then proceeds to relate the meeting of Uther (? Ambrosius) and Igrayne, and the birth of Arthur. In cap. iii he writes:—"Thenne within two yeres kyng Uther felle seke of a grete maladye." The two years are computed from Arthur's birth, and Uther (? Ambrosius) dies of the "grete maladye." From the above one may fairly say that Arthur's father was probably a man advanced in years.]

465 A.D. Ambrosius Aurelianus was completely routed by the Saxons.⁶ Concerning Ambrosius, Gildas states that his parents had worn the purple.⁷ Bede writes of them:—"regium nomen et insignia ferentibus."⁸ Camden writes of Ambrosius:—"But Gildas and Bede write that his ancestors were Emperors, and slain here, and if so, why may not I positively affirm that he was descended from that Constantine, who under the 4th Consulship of Theodosius the younger, out of the hopes that good fortune would attend that name, was chosen Emperor in Britain, and afterwards murdered at Arles."⁹

¹ This statement cannot be taken literally. Vortigern no doubt, either in blood or politically, represented the faction that brought about the deaths of Constantine and his son Constans, as Ambrosius evidently held him responsible for the same, but Vortigern could not be identical with Gerontius.

Mr. B., on the other hand, in his criticism, thus writes of Ambrosius:—"As for Ambrose, he [i.e., Gildas] flatly contradicts Mr. Scott-Gatty (whom Bohn's translation seems again to have misled) and says distinctly that his parents, Romans, no doubt of official rank, met their deaths (not in the struggle for the empire, but) in the Saxon invasion. So much for the conjecture that Constantine the emperor was his father."

According to Nennius, Ambrosius was leading a faction against Vortigern anterior to the Saxon landing in 449, how then could his parents, who were dead at that time, have been killed in an invasion which had not yet taken place, or Ambrosius be the sole survivor of the same? What Gildas does say is that Ambrosius alone had survived the upheaval of that great storm, the same in which his parents, who had been undoubtedly raised to the purple, had perished. Why should not this same storm have been one of those that shook the whole of Western Europe on the gradual decline of the great Roman Empire? In one of these upheavals we know that Constantine the Usurper, and Constans his son, the monk, both came to an untimely end.

488 A.D. Arthur was fighting against Oehtha, son of Hengist, as Dux bellorum cum regibus Britonum.¹

493 A.D. Arthur won the battle of Badon Mount, which was the last of a series of twelve battles.² Concerning Arthur—Nennius often alludes to him, but Gildas and Bede do not mention him by name. Geoffrey of Monmouth puts these words into Arthur's mouth when addressing his troops before his expedition against Rome:—"Likewise Constantine, the son of Helena and Maximian [Maximus] who were both my kinsmen, and both wore the crown of Britain, gained the imperial throne of Rome."³ Yet in the body of his work he makes Arthur to be the son of Uther Pendragon, nephew of Ambrosius, and grandson of Constantine, the brother of the King of Brittany.⁴ Mallory in his Morte D'Arthur also makes Arthur say:—"I have understood that Bellinus and Brenius kynges of Bretayne have had thempyre in their handes many dayes. And also Constantine the sone of Heleyne which is open evydence that we owe noo trybute to Rome but of ryght we that ben descended of them have ryght to clayme the tytle of thempyre;"⁵ but in the story he is son of Uther Pendragon.

516 A.D. This is to my mind a possible date for the battle of Camlan, in which Arthur was mortally wounded. I am well aware that the evidence is not sufficiently strong to establish this date as that of the battle, but there are indications that it might be such, which I here give.

The date given in the Annales Cambrie is 537. "Gueith Camlan in qua Arthur et Medraut corruere;" but this same authority gives the date 516 as that of Badon Mount, which there is every reason to suppose is not correct; nevertheless, it would seem to indicate that there was a battle fought in 516, in which Arthur took part. In The Hendre Book I find attached in the margin to the following individuals, the accompanying dates:—

Constantius Chlorus, an° 305.

Emrys Wledic or Ambrosius Aurelianus, an° 466.

King Arthur, an° 516.

We know that Constantius died at York in 306; that Ambrosius was, according to Mr. Gardiner, overthrown in 465. How about the date 516 to Arthur? It looks to me as though the compiler of The Hendre Book was at any rate guessing at the dates of the death of these men.

In the same work it is stated of Caswallon Lawhir or Caswallon with the Longhand, King of North Wales, and father of Maglocune or Maelgwn Gwynedd, that:—"he was slaine one the parte of Kinge Arthur at Camlan field against Medrod." Welsh tradition says that Maelgwn succeeded his father as King of North Wales in 517.¹

On turning to the Anglo Saxon Chronicle we find that after this date 516, the West Saxons made great headway under Cerdic and Cynric, his son, who had landed in Britain A.D. 495.

"519. This year Cerdic and Cynric obtained the kingdom of the West Saxons, and the same year they fought against the Britons, where it is now called Cerdicsford. And that time forth the royal offspring of the West Saxons reigned," etc.

This all looks as though the Britons were unable any longer to hold the Saxons in check. What better reason could there be than the loss of their great leader, King Arthur?

I will now proceed to answer some of Mr. B's criticisms, which have not been replied to in the foregoing summary.

HELEN, MOTHER OF CONSTANTINE THE GREAT.—Mr. B. says she was probably a Dacian princess, and that her son was certainly born in Dacia. He does not give his authorities, but I suppose they are Cedrenus, an eleventh, and Nicephorus Callistus, a fourteenth century writer. On the other hand, Fl: Lucius Dexter, a fourth century historian writes:—"Ab anno 306 Successerat in imperio, Gubernationeque Hispanice, Constantio patri Constantinus filius cognomento Magnus ex Helena foemina primaria Britanniae."¹ The whole of this matter has been fully argued out by Mr. Morant, in his history of Colchester,² and to that work I would refer Mr. B., where he will find that the weight of evidence is in favour of Helena being a Briton, and that no one knows for a certainty where Constantine the Great was born.

CONSTANTIUS CHLORUS.—Mr. B. says I ought to show that Constantius was in this island at a date prior to that when he is known to have been here. As far as I know he makes his debut in the pages of history as Governor of Dalmatia, circa 283; where he resided anterior to that date no one knows. Zosimus states that he lived for the most part in Britain.³ It is a well-known fact that after he had been declared Emperor he still lived at York, where he died in the year 306. Also that Constantine the Great, his son by Helena, the year after his conversion to Christianity, summoned to the Council of Arles, A.D. 314, three British Bishops, thereby recognising the British Church as a branch of the true Catholic faith. Why this interest in, I might almost say affection for, this far-off island by these two Emperors of Rome?

I may here add that Gildas does not mention either Constantius or the two Constantines in his De Excidio, as stated by Mr. B.

GILDAS' PARENTAGE.—Mr. B. scoffs at the idea of Gildas being one of twenty-four sons of a Scottish king [not that I ever said he was]. His reason for scoffing is that Gildas wrote so strongly against the Scots! This is not what is generally said of his parentage; he is stated to have been one of twenty-four sons of King Caw, a North British chieftain, whose territories no doubt lay north of the now defined Scottish border, but the North Britons were a totally different race from the barbaric Scots, the associates of the Picts; they were, in fact, their bitterest enemies. No wonder Gildas used strong language. One of the vices of the age was, according to Gildas, concubinage—it produces large families.

NENNIVS.—Mr. B. writes:—"From Gildas we turn to 'the collection of Welsh and Anglian legends, which passes under the name of Nennius' . . . in short, we have passed already from history to the realm of fiction and romance." What ancient chronicler has ever existed who at times has not given way to marvellous recitals, some of which contain the sternest truths of life here and hereafter? But let us keep Mr. B. to his authors—Gildas, the historian; Nennius, the romancer. I wonder whether Mr. B. has read in Gildas the story of St. Alban crossing the river Thames, the waters dividing for him, as in the Red Sea incident in Holy writ? This is quite as marvellous as anything related in Nennius, and it is further a somewhat vulgar miraculous incident without any symbolical or allegorical meaning underlying it, such as one finds in the Nennius recitals. It is impossible for me here to enter into a vindication of Nennius, and if I did I should only quote Professor Zimmer's able work, Nennius Vindicatus, which, after all, Mr. B. can read. Professor Zimmer has spent many years of his life in making a most careful and elaborate analytical study of this chronicle, or rather these chronicles, and I feel sure Mr. B. will forgive me if I prefer the opinion of this learned German Professor to his hurried and somewhat pointless remarks upon this work. I must here apologise for having taken for granted that Mr. Petrie selected to edit for that great work, Monumenta Historica Britannica, the oldest edition of Nennius; on referring to the preface I find he selected a more modern one, but the one which he considered to be the most authentic, the same edition, in fact, that had been edited by Dr. Gale. This manuscript is in the Public Library at Cambridge, and in the text of it appears the "Artur Mab Uter"¹ paragraph, and also the sentence about Ambrosius, "qui fuerat rex in omnes regiones Britannie."² The "Artur Mab Uter" sentence also occurs as a marginal note in a MS. lettered by Mr. Petrie "B." My critic says that neither of these appear in the text. While upon this matter I notice that he seems to shy at my expression about Ambrosius being elected King of Britain. He says "to write of an elective monarchy looks to me like anachronism." It did not look so to that sixth century historian Gildas, however. In § 21 he describes the luxury that followed the victory of the Britons over the Picts and Scots, after the vain appeal to Ætius, when they were driven to bay in their mountains, and at last rallied. He says that they anointed wicked kings.³ These kings in their turn were put to death by their own anointers,⁴ and others and worse were elected.⁵ For this and other reasons which could be cited, it looks as though the Supreme Kingship of Britain was elective.

³ Hist. Nova, Lib. ii, cap. viii.

GILDAS DE EXCIDIO, § 26.—Bede, who wrote under 200 years after Gildas, and evidently copied him as to this paragraph, as he uses almost the same words, gathered from it that the battle of Badon Mount took place forty-four years after the landing of the Saxons; no doubt he had before him a less corrupt edition of Gildas than now exists. The oldest MS. known to be in existence to-day is a copy made not earlier than the end of the twelfth century, and deposited in the Public Library at Cambridge. Bede's words are:—"Et ex eo tempore nunc cives nunc hostes vincebant, usque ad annum obsessionis Badonici montis, quando non minimas eisdem hostibus strages dabant, xl^{mo} circiter et iiii^o anno adventus eorum in Britanniam."⁶

Camden also evidently takes the same reading. He writes:—"The Saxons indeed, about the forty-fourth year after their landing in Britain, by a breach of articles renewing the war, laid siege to this city [i.e., Bath], but being surprised by the warlike Arthur, they betook themselves to Badon hill, where (though in a desperate condition) they fought it out, and were slain in great numbers. This seems to be the same hill with that we now call Banesdown, hanging over a little village near the city named Bath Stone, and showing at this day its bulwarks, and a rampire. I know there are some who seek for it in Yorkshire; but let Gildas himself restore it to this place, for in an old manuscript copy of him in the Cambridge Library, where he treats of the victory of Aurelius Ambrosius, he says:—‘To the year of Badon hill siege, which is not far from the mouth of the Severn.’¹

Monsieur de la Borderie, in his interesting paper entitled “The date of the Birth of Gildas,”² takes it for granted that Bede copied Gildas, and by introducing into Gildas’ text certain words out of Bede’s, he gets therefrom the date of Badon Mount as taking place forty-four years after the Saxon landing, and the date of the birth of Gildas as being identical with that of the battle, viz., 493, thus:—“Et ex eo tempore nunc cives nunc hostes vincebant, usque ad annum obsessionis Badonici montis novissimæque ferme de furciferis non minime stragis, quique quadragesimus quartus [adventus eorum in Britanniam] ut novi, oritur annus, mense jam uno emenso, qui et mee nativitatis est.” The words introduced I have placed between brackets. These four words, as he says, make sense of this otherwise incomplete passage.

Dr. Giles, who edited the Bohn edition, also gathers from § 26 the date of Badon Mount and the birth of Gildas.

Feeling quite incompetent to enter the lists with such a galaxy of scholars, each of whom seems to take his own line on this matter, and not feeling at all contented with Mr. B.’s paraphrase of the same passage, I sent my paper, together with Mr. B.’s criticism, to a friend of undoubted high scholastic attainments. I have his consent to publish his epitome of the situation. He writes as follows:—

“In his preface Gildas describes his own language as ‘poor, though well meaning’ [vili licet stylo, tamen benigno]. It is unfortunate that it should be held to be so poor that no scholar can refrain from enriching it with additions, so as to make it bear his own well-meaning interpretations.

“But Gildas is so important for his period—he is the only contemporary evidence we have—that it is well worth yet another effort to arrive at, not what he may have meant, but what he actually says.

“His attitude and purpose are given us in his preface [§ 1] ‘I have resolved,’ he says, ‘to describe the ventures in fierce warfare not so much of the most valiant warriors as of the indolent.’ It is plain, therefore, that there are ‘valiant warriors’ to whom he will not do justice. The one person whom he unreservedly commends, he passes over in a sentence; he does not even name the king who is responsible for what he calls 'the present peace and justice' [§ 26, præsentis serenitatis ac justitiæ] which had, when he wrote, lasted a generation.

"He confesses [§ 1] he has held his tongue for 10 years or more out of compunction, and contrition, and bewilderment, but at last has yielded to the pressure of his friends. What was the event which ten years before had put into his head to write his 'Historiola'? Who was it whose hand had brought 'serenitas ac justitia' to the land, whose departure was the signal for the headlong rush ad Tariatara of his successors, and whose memory kept Gildas silent for more than ten years?

"What does Gildas actually say about the course of events from the landing of the Saxons to the time of his writing? If this period was under 100 years, it would be well within his power to have heard of the events from actual survivors, as no one supposes that he was under forty years old when he wrote.

"[§ 23]. In the first place he says, the Saxons were called in by Guthligern and for sometime [multo tempore] were kept quiet by doles [§ 24]. Becoming discontented with these they set to ravaging the land on their own account [§ 25]. But after a time [tempore aliquanto interveniente] the remnant of the Britons arose under Ambrosius and at last were given the victory [§ 26]. After the time of Ambrosius [ex eo tempore] the struggle was uncertain, until the decisive victory of Badon Mount. The year of Badon Mount is the forty-fourth year. After that victory, for a time the Britons lived properly, but the witnesses of this unhopd for deliverance passing away [illis decedentibus], a new generation has arisen of men who cannot remember the struggle and who are conscious of the present calm and justice. These, except a very few [pauci valde pauci] are rushing daily to Hell.

"What does this plain tale amount to? The Saxons are supposed to have landed in 449 A.D. A few years of doles to an ever increasing and insatiable invader would seem a long time and account for Gildas' expression 'multo tempore.' Another few years of ravaging and desolation would pass the 'aliquantum tempus' up to Ambrosius' success. There are sixteen years between the landing of the Saxons and Ambrosius' death in 465, if that is the date. If Arthur was born two years before Ambrosius' death, the date of his birth will be 463. If he began fighting at the traditional age of fifteen, he fought his first battle in 478, and would have fifteen years for the rest of the twelve battles to bring the battle of Badon Mount, and his twelfth and last battle to 493.

"Gildas says the year of Badon Mount dawns or begins the forty-fourth year; this he knows as sure as he knows the date of his own birth. The forty-fourth year of what? Does he not mean what Bede understood him to mean, the forty-fourth year of the struggle, and therefore the forty-fourth year from the landing of the Saxons?

"For the memory of the importance of this battle to have died out we must allow twenty to thirty years at least, which will bring us to 513 or 523. For ten years or more the degenerate stock have been rushing to Hades, and Gildas has held his hand over his mouth. He must at anyrate then be writing after 523 or 533. If Arthur's death in 516 at the battle of Camlan was the cause and commencement of this ten years of evil living, it would give 526 or a few years after as the date of Gildas' warning.

"Mr. B., in his paraphrase of Gildas' sentence about Badon Mount is just as arbitrary and inexact as the translator whom he condemns. Everyone must agree that whatever he meant, what Gildas said is 'the year of Badon Mount, which dawns (or begins) the forty-fourth year, as I know well.' Mr. B. paraphrases thus: 'The year now begun is, to my knowledge, the forty-fourth since that event.' He proceeds at once to ask, 'What then of Gildas, the one authority contemporary with the age of Arthur; and how much does he tell us?' He may well ask."

Although Dr. Giles' somewhat free translation of Gildas § 25, when he states that it was the soboles of Ambrosius who goaded the cruel conquerors to battle, cannot be accepted, yet this in no way affects my case. All I wanted from Gildas was that which even Mr. B. cannot deprive me of, viz:—That the parents of Ambrosius had been adorned with the purple, and had met with untimely deaths in the struggles [not Saxon, as Mr. B. asserts] of the times. That Ambrosius alone of his race had survived the same, and was Commander in chief of the British forces in a series of battles, which series preceded another series, the latter ending with the great victory of Badon Mount. It is from Nennius, not Gildas, that I gather that the name of the Commander in chief of this second series was Arthur. It is also from Nennius, not Gildas, that I gather that it could not be Ambrosius who led the forces at Badon Mount, as he was fighting ante 449, and would have to be of an abnormal age to be alive and on active service in 493, or, as Mr. B. would have it, 516.

In conclusion, I feel that an apology is due to the Editor and readers of The Genealogist, in that so much of the valuable space of their periodical has been taken up with this subject of King Arthur, which, after all, is not of universal interest. I trust, therefore, that Mr. B. will now allow the matter to drop. He asked me for fuller data; I have given such data to him. I have also answered his criticisms, and I hope that unless he has some new light to throw upon the two points raised by me, viz., the identity of Uther Pendragon with Ambrosius Aurelianus, and that of Constantine the Blessed with Constantine the Usurper, he will allow the memory of Arthur to drift back again into limbo.

A MANUSCRIPT RELATING TO THE FAMILY OF OFFLEY.

Now resteth to speake of John Offley the only German Brother to S^r Thomas, but I leave him wth his Brother in law Mr. James Leveson, for that John Offley should have served him as an apprentice to the staple but it fell out otherwise as shalbe declared hereafter & in Mr. Nechells tyme hee lay much at the Brick house in Hackney, w^{ch} house was purchased by Mr. John Nechells of one Mr. Turnor, & this Mr. John Offley had the keeping of that house, & lay there for that house was furnished, wth goodly bedding & all maner of household & in stead [sic] all w^{ch} was left wholie to S^r Thomas Offley & renewed by him as occasiō served & soe after to Henry Offley soe that howse was Furnished havinge plate as ofte as it pleased them to remove from London. And new to returne to W^m Offley againe & to heare somewhat of his lawfull & vigilant endeavours. Hee was accustomed to say that the almighty had decreed hee should not possess much, but his posterity should; notwithstanding hee sought divers wayes to enrich himselfe for the better maintenance of himselfe & Family [And hearing that Leather & skins were in great request amongst the Merchants of West chester, very good Merchandize to be shiped for Spaine He tooke ground & builded a faire howse about Byerston in Shropshire adioyning to Staffordshire in Mucleston parish about xx^{tie} miles from West chester and furnished it wth workmen & Tooles & necessities for that trade and pspering therein¹] And within a short tyme hee fell in acquaintance wth an Aldermans widdow Named M^{rs} Rogerson, who had one onely Daughter named Alice Rogerson, who was brought up in all vertuous good maners like unto her mother religious & Fearing god, And this W^m Offley married a 2^d wife this widd: after his sonn John Offley married the Daughter Alice: This widd: being young had by her husband five soñs & 2 Daughters who were all brought up in learning & vertue & when they came to Discretion were sent up to London & were placed some by the meanes of the elder Brother Thomas Offley & his sister Mrs. Kerton who remained Aldermā Kertons widd. unto the end of her life, & shee tooke one of the soñs apprentice another was put to her soñ, & another to a stapler so that three of them were of the staple and free of the M^{ch}ant Taylors. Robert the eldest soñ was apprentice at the hanging sword in Cheapside with a wid' of great wealth who soe dilligently & Faithfully served out his yeares, that hee was in great Credit & Beloved of his Neighbors thereabouts in so much that his M^{rs} had a liking to him, & marryed wth him & being now of great wealth, by the means of his Brother Thomas Offley bought his Freedom of the staple, & became a brother of that Company by Redempⁿ for then the staple at Callice Flourished, & hee shipped much wools, & after the loss of Callice the staple was kept at Bruges in Flanders, where he much p^rited and being of great wealth ready to be called to a higher office & Dignity it pleased god to vissitt his wife wth sickness unto Death, to whom this sorrowfull husband Robert made earnest suite that shee wold make a will & to the vallew of 1000 m^ks to give away to her Freinds & Kinred & hee would willingly performe it, & at his importunate request shee gave away to her freinds & others whom shee loved, & so most godly and devoutly departed this life upon whose Funerall hee spared no cost. After the death of this wife hee remained a widdow^r all the dayes of his life, hee dwelled in Gracious street over against the Conduitt, beloved of all his Neighb^{rs} hee kept great hospitallity; hee p^rpared yearly for his owne house keeping 4 hundred pounds w^h hee liberally bestowed upon his Kinred Freinds, & Neighb^{rs}: and very bountifull to the poore hee was very Devout & godly & used much the Company of a learned preacher Mr. Wager parson of Gracious Church hee was one of Xtes hospitall in Southwarke for the maimed sore diseased & Lane persons, hee p^rpared for the Frensie, Lunatick & mad people in Bedlam (for the better recovering of there senses) every thursday throughout the yeare two great Potts of wholsome pottage & Broth wth Leggs & Rack of Mutton & other good meates w^h great Potts were Carryed wth 4 Porters from his house to Bedlam all being Done at his p^per cost & charges. Hee had by his wife 2 Children a soⁿ & a Daught^r, who were vertuously brought up in Learning nurture & good maners; the Daughter was schooled wth M^{rs} Raymond, And when shee came to lawfull yeares for Marriage was matched wth Alderman Brooke dwelling at the end of Bucklesberry who after was sherriffe & Maior of London; his soⁿ Robert bearing the name and sirname of his Father, after hee came to mans estate, did practize for recreaⁿ Millitary Discipline, wherein hee came a perfect quick & expert souldier in warlike affairs ready if such need did require, to bestow himselfe life and lim for his prince & Countrey. Hee was noted to be a Skilfull & expert Leader before o^r late Queene Elizabeth of Famous memory, in the parke at Greenw^h among 4000^d souldiers Cittizens & for his knowledge had great comendaⁿs.

 Robert Ofley the Father a man of exquisite knowledge & judgm^t knew that youth should be trayned up to those studdyes and Facultyes whereunto they be most aptest by nature, and that in rash adolescency, youth be more prone to pleasure & voluptuousness then to godliness & vertuous exercises, therefore hee did not mislike of his sons practice but comended & mainteyned it, for the Capitaine & govern^r of mans life is the mind, w^h when it taketh the way to glory by vertue is mighty & skilfull, & hee hath no need of fortunes helpe, w^h canott give nor take away honesty, industry nor vertuous Qualityes to nor from any: When Ene^{as} arrived into Italy hee sent to Laviniū (where Rome is now) a hundred Embassad^{rs} to King Latinus Court. And before the City of Laviniū, the youth there were exercising in Martiall affaires, some on horse back some in Charriotts & breaking the wild horses in the Dust, some in Drawing strong bowes and shooting, some in wrestling and challenging one another, in ruining & in the noble science of Defence, & theise comendable exercises were forcible employm^{ts} for the defence of King and Countrey, for the stronge maintenance of bodily strength & courage, & for helpe ag^t diseases & infirmityes; whereas the youth of o^r Dayes are given to wantonesse, to Drunkeness & quaffing & to great excess delighting to make there Companiōs Drunke & compellinge & threatning them to Drinke much more then will suffice nature & they have found out a cloake for there Drunkeness to cover there excessive sinne, namely to drinke the health of some noble or worshipfull person or Deare Freind as though the health of them were held by there imoderate Drinking; The Lord amend this execrable practise for tis to the great Displeasure of almighty god in the abusing of his good creatures, the impoverishing of the Comonaltie, the increase of horrible diseases, the hindrance of health & the shortning of life. This Robert the Father did not so much mistrust his soñe but to follow the steps of his Father & Auncestors in vertuous exercise, & if that should fortune that if either Forreigne or Civill warrs (from the weh the Lord deliver us) should Come this Robert by his practise & knowledge might be able to governe & Lead an army to fight for his King & Countreye. This Robert the younger by the consent of his Father and Freinds tooke to wife to his owne good liking the Daughter of Aldermā Osburne somtyme Maior of London & liveth in good estate a Turkie Marchant in great wealth & Dignity. Thus much touching Robert the eldest of the five Brethren that were borne in the City of Westchest^r all worshipfull beloved Cittizens of great accompt & bearing great office & authority within the City of London. And all these countenanced and advanced by this worp^l K^t S^r Thomas Offley a loving mercifull & bountifull man, to his Kinred Freinds Neighb^{rs} & Tenents, & especially to the poore so that they were noted of the Cittizens & received these names according to there naturall Quallityes

S^r Thomas Offley the grave Alderman & Father of the Citty: Robert Offley the Good Fellowe
 Thomas Offley the younger Gentleman
 Richard Offley the Marchant
 Hughe Offley the Draper
 Williā Offley the Chiefe dr.

Next to Robert Offley was Thomas Offley Juni^r marchant Taylo^r & marchant of the staple, was married to a rich & wealthy widd. & lived gentlemanlike in great pspertye & had noe issue. Richard Offley m^rchant Tayl^r & marchant of the staple was a great shiper of wools & was Factor for his Brother S^r Thomas Offley at Callice when it was loste & not many dayes before the loss, hee passed away by sale & good Bills of exchange & good men five thousand pound for wools sould whereof was good paym^t at the Dayes; such was his good dilligence & service at that tyme of sorrow; the losse whereof was the begining of the decay of the staple, & S^r Thomas lost above x^{li} a yeare in good Land, This Richard Offley tooke to wife the Daughter of S^r Willia Chester K^t who was Lord Maior of London when Pauls steeple was on fire, a grave wise & religious Alderman who was made K^t by Queene Mary, although of a contrary religion when hee was sherriff of London w^h Dignity of Knighthood was seldome offered to any Alderman before hee was Lord Maior, but the cause was this Chester being a marchant of great accompt in the Citty of Anwerpe, whereby hee Furnished Phillip King of Spaine w^h great trasure & summs of money upon his arrivall in England. This Richard Offley had by his wife many children w^h were vertuously brought up in true religio and in the Feare of god, & in good maners of life having so good parents & so godly a Grandfather who dayly instructed them & when they came to Lawfull yeares were matched in marriage w^h Cittizens of good accompt & Trade. This Richard Offley together w^h John Offley & John Weston were Overseers of the Last will & Testam^t of S^r Tho: Offley & this Richard Departed this life w^hin one halfe yeare after the Buriall of his Brother S^r Thomas, & left his wife in good estate who remaineth still a godly & vertuous widdow. This W^m Offley marchant Taylor & Marchant of the staple married an Aldermans Daughter at S^t Lawrence Pultneyes Parish in a goo[d]ly house somtymes the Duke of Buckingham the one halfe whereof hee dwelled in; the other halfe the Right worshipfull Company of Marchant Taylors bought & founded a schoole w^h Mr & Ushers w^h sufficient stipends to the same. This William Offley was very rich, & yett had great loss by servants & Factors above 4 Thousand pounds and twice was called to be sherriffe of London & fined for it which cost him a Thousand Pounds. Hee had many Children whereof some dyed, & 2 of his Daughters were worshipfully bestowed in marriages the one to Mr Smith an ancient Pensioner to the late Queene Elizabeth, The other was bestowed upon S^r John Walter, K^t a Man learned in the Lawes & Famous in his tyme, And like if hee live to attaine to hon^r & Dignity, for in the perfect & exquisite knowledge of the Lawes, many of the Nobillity have derived there Originalls. This Willia Offley had the French & Dutch tounge pfectly & no knowledge in the Lattine, yet had hee a sentence in his plor where hee used to Dine & supp, in the panes of his glasse Window written, w^h hee would ofte repeate Nil Certius morte Nil incertius hora mortis; w^h is nothing is more Certaine yⁿ Death, Nothing more uncertaine then the hower of Death w^h was a good signe of the motio of the holy spiritt of god to remember his mortality, & the uncertainty of his end, & this uncertainty was veriefied in him, for being very meerry & pleasant in Company, being stricken w^h a dead palsie hee fell downe, & lost the use of his tounge & dyed w^hin three days; his hart was sure Fixed in the Lord his Savio^r, for hee reioyced in godly prayers & exhorta^ons: His will was made wherein hee dyed as was reported worth 50th Thousand pounds whose widdow for her wealth was married to Sr Henry Bromly K^t a man welbeloved of his Maiestie & shee now is a widdow againe, the Lady Bromly, & liveth at Holt Castle a little from Worcester.

Hugh Offley Free of the Company of Leather sellers a Famous marchant adventurer, & in France; hee purchased a goodly house in Lyme street of Sr John Leveson of Kent, wherein his Grandfather Nicholas Leveson Alderman of London dwelled & there dyed, wth house this Hugh Offley plucked downe & in that place erected a goodly & stately Frame wherein hee kept a most bountifull house when hee was sherriffe of London, and a little before that tyme as his owne charges hee sett forth a costly show of Prince Arthur wth his K^{ts} of the Round Table. Hee made choice of 300 Archers goodly & personable men all very well appointed in bt sattin Dubletts & bt velvett hose, every one having a bowe of yew & a dosen of waxed Arrowes, & hee appointed certaine stages & Forts & marks to shoot at, & liberrall rewards to them that wonn the prizes, & plentifull Banquetts hee p^rpared for the Archers; & they m^rched in goodly & orderly array, three & three together, & every three a bow length from another, wth made a comly show from the M^rchant Taylors Hall in London to Mile End Greene where by Fortune the late Queene Elizabeth (of Famous memory) passd by & caused her Charriott to be stayed to behold this goodly show of Archers, speaking to her nobility that then attended her noble person, that in her life shee never saw a more stately Company of Archers who approaching neare her maiesty did there Duty upon there Knees, praying god long to psper & preserve her maiesty, & shee most graciously bowed her body & gave them most harty thanks, saying that shee wold love mainteyne and advance her Cittizens of the City of London & prayed to god to bless all her good subiects therein. This Hugh Offley was in great Favour wth many of the Nobillity of France, so that when the Nobillity had obtained license to see her Ma^{tie} & her Courte some of them came to this Hugh Offleys house, & to his great charges hee most Bountifully received them, sparing no cost to give them entertainm^t in most ample maⁿer, & they made him a Companion with them to the princes Court: But it may be objected that these be but riotous practises & for pompe & vaine glory, nay it is rather manly exercises, wherein in antient tyme god hath blessed this Kingdome wth most noble Victoryes, for Archery bringeth strength to the armes & body, wrestleth against diseases & withdraweth mens minds & affections from idle vayne Cogitations From Table play & Cards & Dice, & other idle pastims Ryotting & Drunkeness, therefore the man is to be comended highly that mainteyneth Archery. And now for his good deeds hee was beneficiall to all the hospitalls, to the prisoners about London, to the poore in Hackney, where he had alsoe a faire mansion house wth great Orchyards & gardens adioyning thereunto. To the Maior & Aldermen of Chester hee gave a goodly standing Cup of Sylver wth Cover Double guilt of the vallew of Fifty pounds to drinke wyne in theire pendisse. Hee gave two or three houses that hee purchased of his Brother John Offley, being of sixe pound of the ould Rent, to this use, that every moneth in the yeare the blessed Comunion should be celebrated & a sermon should be preached & xii poore widdowes should receive wth the minister, & to every widdow should be dealt a peece of money, so that the Rents of those Houses should be devided to the poore widdowes & to the minister & to be p^d monethly. Hee was also a Founder of the great Conduitt in the M^kett place, these good deeds & many more did this worthy Cittizen & dyed in London.

40 Hale. [HUMPHREY MAUNSELL, pts., 1677]. " Monpellier, Jan^y 6, 1677 " [1676/7]. " Ever Honored S^r, It has pleased God to bring me soe within these three last months by a consumptive cough that it is not likely in the opinion of many that I can live long in this world. Doe not, I pray, S^r, believe that my writing this is any cause or effect of melancholy, which, I thanke God, I never was freer from than I am at present but whatever may happen it is convenient to settle one's temporall as well as Spirituall affaires. S^r, I shall have in my Lord Conway's hands, due to mee, Feb. 14, fiftie five pounds, which (deducting three pounds which I gave to the Poor of my Lord's parish) I leave and bequeath to you. The money I will desire my Lord to pay in to my brother, Henry Maunsell, for I suppose that a more convenient way then to send a man a purpose to Ragley. I have some few Bookes there alsoe, which, not being worth the fetching away, I intend to distribute in the family and give some to my Lord's librarie. Whatever is due to mee from the College and my Bookes and Bedding there be pleased to fetch away or make money of it. Seaven pounds I payd for the income of my chamber and since have layd out some more for its better furniture. What I layd out myself, I abate to the successor; the seaven pounds is due and I pray, S^r, draw it yourselfe. The papers of this income are at Ragley, I will get them sent to London and soe to Cambridge. Five pounds I left in my brother Blundell's hands, which I alsoe give to you, But out of these summes of money which you have or shall receave I beseech you to pay to the Poore of Thorpe five pounds, which I give to them; the manner and proportions of giving to each according to their necessities you best know, but I pray, S^r, let this debt be payd with great care. Farther, S^r, I desire you to give to all my relations, yourselfe, my mother, all my brothers and sisters gold rings ten shillings apeece which will amount to seaven pounds,¹² and the five pounds that lye

¹² This, apparently, would be as under:—

To Father and Mother, 10s. each ...	1	0	0
To brother Robert Maunsell and wife, 10s. each	1	0	0
To brothers Thomas Maunsell and Henry Maunsell, 10s. each ...	1	0	0

the plaintiff.

The defendants claimed to hold the manor by a deed of feoffment made by John Fitz John.

De Banco. Hillary. 6. Ed. 4. m. 328.

Wilts.—William Besyle sued Roger Tocotes, Kt., and Elizabeth, his wife, for the manor of Wederove, which Elias de Raboyne and Matilda, his wife, had given to John Besyle and Margaret, his wife, and the heirs of Margaret, temp. E. 1 (sic).

John Besyle, seised temp. E. 1.=Margaret.

Peter.

Peter,
ob. s.p.

William Besyle,
the plaintiff.

Patent Roll. 6. Ed. 4. part 2. m. 5.

William la Zuche, of Richard's Castle, living temp. E. 3.

James, Earl of Wilts, attainted 1 E. 4, had held the manor of Ashby la Zusche and the King had granted it to his Chamberlain, Sir William Hastynges, on 26 Oct., 4 E. 4. James, Earl of Wilts, however, had enfeoffed in the manor Ralph, Lord Sudeley, Sir William St. George and others before the date of the attainder, and these feoffees had been expelled by Sir John Lovell, Kt., also before the date of the attainder. The heirs of La Zusche, named in the pedigree, claimed the manor from William, Lord Hastynges, pleading that it had not been affected by the attainder of James, Earl of Wilts.

De Banco. Hillary. 6. Ed. 4. m. 403.

Norf.—Cecily Ovy, Thomas Geffreys and Margaret, his wife, and William Smyth and Joan, his wife, sued William Jenney, Sergeant-at-Law, and five others, for a moiety of a moiety of the manor of Hedenham.

James Ilketishale, = Ida.
seised temp. E. 2.

The defendants claimed by a grant of William Ilketsale, and they stated he was son of Robert, brother of Robert, father of Thomas, father (sic) of Idonia, the mother of Margaret Seyve. It will be seen that the two pedigrees named in the pleadings do not accord.

De Banco. Hillary. 6. Ed. 4. m. 366 dorso.

Derb.—Henry Pole and Alice, his wife, and John Babyngton, Armiger, sued Robert Wode and Isabella, his wife, for land in Rodburn, which William Dethek, Knight, the grandfather of Alice, and great-grandfather of John, and whose heirs they were, had given to Reginald, his son, and the heirs male of his body, and failing such, to Thomas, brother of the said Reginald, and the heirs male of his body, and failing such to Roger, brother of Thomas, and the heirs male of his body, and failing such, to his own right heirs, and they gave this descent:—

Verdict for the plaintiffs. See suit of Easter, 36 H. 6, at vol. xviii, pp. 239, 240, according to which Robert Dethek had died s.p., but without doubt Robert has been written by mistake for Roger in the earlier suit.

De Banco. Trinity. 7. Ed. 4. m. 101.

Kent.—John Harneys sued Joan Chepstede for lands and rents in Chevenyng, which Matilda, formerly wife of Hamon de Hirst, gave to William de Chevenyng and Joan, his wife, and the heirs of their bodies.

William de Chevenyng, = Joan.
seised temp. E. 2.

Joan admitted the claim.

De Banco. Trinity. 7. Ed. 4. m. 427.

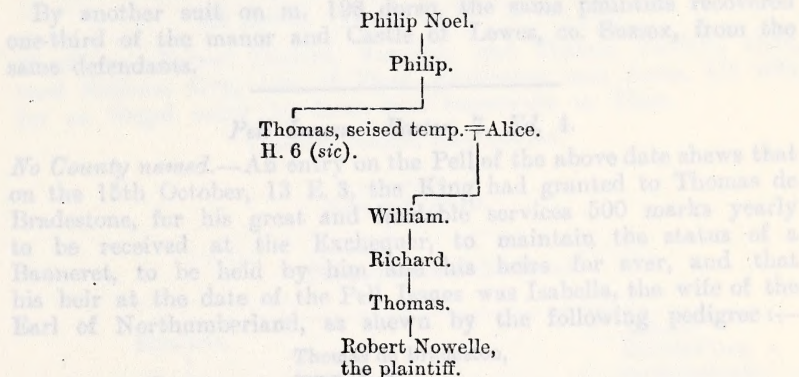

Leicester.—John Willenhale sued Humfrey Stafford, of Grafton, co. Worcester, and another, for a forcible entry into Leyre.

John Willenhale claimed by a demise made to his father, Robert Willenhale, to take effect after the deaths of Joan and Richard Willenhale. John was under age and sued by his custos.

De Banco. Mich. 8. Ed. 4. m. 446.

Staff.—Robert Nowelle (Noel), the younger, sued Thomas Chetwode and Isabella, his wife, for the manor of Newebold.

There appears to be an error in the pedigree, for there could hardly be five generations between 1422 and 1463.

De Banco. Trinity. 7. Ed. 4. m. 359.

Wills.—Robert Shotusbroke, Kt., sued John Rogger, the younger, and Margaret, his wife, for land in Puryton and Chellesworth, which Adam Walrond had given to Joan, his daughter, and the heirs male of her body.

De Banco. Trinity. 8. Ed. 4. m. 126 dorso.

Salop.—John, Duke of Norfolk, and George Nevylle, sued Robert Danby, Kt., and others, for one-third of the Castle of Dynesbran and one-third of the Castle of Castri Lerriis (? Leonis) and one-third of lands in Bromfeld, Yale and Wryghtesham, in Wales.

Richard Arundell, the younger, seised temp. Ric. 2.

The defendants admitted the claim.

By another suit on m. 128 dorso, the same plaintiffs recovered one-third of the manor and Castle of Lewes, co. Sussex, from the same defendants.

Pell Issues. Easter. 7. Ed. 4.

No County named.—An entry on the Pell of the above date shews that on the 15th October, 13 E. 3, the King had granted to Thomas de Bradestone, for his great and laudable services 500 marks yearly to be received at the Exchequer, to maintain the status of a Banneret, to be held by him and his heirs for ever, and that his heir at the date of the Pell Issues was Isabella, the wife of the Earl of Northumberland, as shewn by the following pedigree:—

Thomas de Bradeston, temp. E. 3.

Isabella.=Earl of Northumberland.

A similar entry on the Issues of the Pell of Easter, 2 E. 4, states that the grant was 1,000 marks yearly, and that Isabella was then married to John, Lord Montagu.¹

De Banco. Mich. 8. Ed. 4. m. 328.

Sussex.—John, the Bishop of Chichester, sued Richard Forster for an illegal entry into his close at Houghton.

John Houghton, seised of the manor of Howgh-ton.

Juliana.

John Cheyne,
of Stuberoft.

John Cheyne.

Joan.=
Richard Forster,
the defendant.

The defendant claimed rights of estover in the Bishop's wood as lord of the manor of Houghton.

De Banco. Mich. 8. Ed. 4. m. 431.

Northamp.—Robert Tanfeld, Armiger, and Thomas Tanfeld, clerk, sued Nicholas Ovy, late of Flore, gentleman, and Anne, his wife, for an illegal entry by force into tenements in Flore.

Theobald Trussell, Kt.=Katrine.

John.=Margaret.

Philippa.=Alexander Bosun.

Elizabeth.

Thomas.

Anne.=
Nicholas Ovy,
the defendants.

The pleadings state that Philippa married Alexander, son of Joan Bosun of Harewold, formerly wife of Walter Bosun, and see suit of Hillary, 5 E. 4, ante p. 34.

De Banco. Mich. 8. Ed. 4. m. 553.

Dorset.—William Clavyle, the elder, sued Richard Clavyle for lands and rents in Hwytelyffe.

Henry Whitelyff.=Agnes.

Joan.=Walter Clavyle.

Richard Clavyle,
the defendant.

De Banco. Easter. 10. Ed. 4. m. 319.

Derb.—Ralph Sacheverell, Armiger, sued Henry Vernon, Armiger, for land in Stanton Lees.

Richard Vernon, Kt., formerly seised of the tenements.

William.

Henry Vernon, Armiger,
the defendant.

Henry Vernon stated that he had entered as heir of his grandfather, Sir Richard Vernon.

De Banco. Trinity. 8. Ed. 4. m. 330.

Notts.—John Squyer, of Nottingham, merchant, was summoned by Geoffrey Pilkington, and Agnes, his wife, to give up to them a chest (cista) containing deeds and muniments relating to the manor of Aldesworth.

Robert Sallowe, enfeoffed in the manor by Thomas Bella Aqua (Bellew), of Aldesworth.

Elena.

William.

George.

Agnes Marmyon.

William.

Agnes= Geoffrey Pilkington,
the plaintiffs.

Agnes Marmyon had delivered the chest with deeds to John Squyer, the defendant, for safe custody, in 2 E. 4, at Lambecote, and John had refused to hand them over to Agnes Marmyon or to Agnes, the plaintiff, and the manors had now descended to Agnes, the wife of Geoffrey Pilkington, as heir of Agnes Marmyon, viz., daughter of William, the brother of George, the father of Agnes Marmyon.

De Banco. Mich. 8. Ed. 4. m. 153.

Wygorn.—Thomas Turberville sued Richard Turberville, of Boughton, for an illegal distress in Hillecrome.

Richard Turberville.

Marjory.

Richard Turberville,
the defendant.

De Banco. Mich. 8. Ed. 4. m. 306.

Cornwall.—William Trelaweless sued John Treris, the elder, for the manor of Great Wyrkesale, which Gilbert Haunsard, Kt., had given to John Haunsard, his son, and Matilda, his wife, and the heirs of their bodies.

John Haunsard. = Matilda.

Joan.

William.

Margaret.

William.

William.

William Ryther,
the plaintiff.

The pleadings call the plaintiff William Trelaweless in one place and William Ryther in another.

Patent Roll. 8. Ed. 4. part 1.

Ebor.—A writ "de inquirendo," issued on the petition of John Salvayn, Kt., claiming the manor of Doncaster, gives the following pedigree:—

Peter de Maulay V, son of = Margaret.
Peter de Maulay, seised of the manors of Doncaster and Mulgrave, temp. E. 2.

Peter VI.

Peter VII.

Peter de Maulay VIII.

Constance.

Elizabeth.

John Salvayn, Kt.,
the petitioner.

Patent Roll. 8. Ed. 4, part 1.

Devon.—A writ "de inquirendo," issued on the petition of William Courtenay, claiming the manor of Northpole.

Hugh de Courtenay, Earl of Devon, had given Northpole to Philip Courtenay, Kt., and the heirs male of his body, temp. Ric. 2.

Philip de Courtenay, seised Ric. 2.

John.

Philip.

William Courtenay,
the petitioner.

Philip de Courtenay had enfeoffed in the manor one Roger Markedon for his life, and Roger had been unjustly disseised by Edward Courtenay, late Earl of Devon.

Edward Courtenay, Earl of Devon.

Thomas.

Thomas, Earl of Devon, who had died at York 31 March 1 E. 4, and had been attainted 4 Nov. 1 E. 4.

In consequence of his attainder the manor had been taken into the King's hands.

De Banco. Mich. 8. Ed. 4. m. 450.

Wygorn.—Norman Wasshebourne sued Thomas Dummulton for an illegal distress in Wychynford. The pleadings give these pedigrees:—

John Wyard.

Elizabeth. = William de la Lowe.

Richard de la Lowe, living 5 H. 5, had enfeoffed William Abyndon in Wychyn-ford, who had issue Richard Abyndon.

John Power.

Margaret. = Richard Wassheborne.

Norman Wassheborne,
the plaintiff.

In a suit of Easter 2 E. 4, ante p. 23, Norman Wassheborne is styled son of John Wassheborne. The Prothonotaries or their Clerks made mistakes occasionally in Christian names in their entries on the Rolls.

A HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF PERCY FROM THE EARLIEST TIMES DOWN TO THE PRESENT CENTURY. By Gerald Brennan. Edited by W. A. Lindsay, Esq., K.C., M.A. (Windsor Herald). London (Freemantle & Co.), MCMII.

It is to be feared that Englishmen, as a rule, are far less interested in the history of the great feudal families of their native land than are their neighbours north of the Tweed. In Scotland, Douglas has always been a name to conjure with; in England, Percy, Nevill and Howard arouse far less enthusiasm. Of all the great families which this country has produced, none has a more fascinating story than that of Percy, yet its romantic history is comparatively little known to the majority of Englishmen. The late Mr. de Fonblanque's elaborate work was printed for private circulation only and has always been difficult to obtain, so that a popular history of the Percys was much needed. We, therefore, all the more regret that though the first issue of this useful series was marked by an adequate knowledge of history, by much independent research, and by good judgment, we cannot say as much for the two volumes before us. It is true that they differ in merit as in bulk; the first and far less weighty volume being marked by evident haste and numberless inaccuracies, while the second is a readable and in the main reliable record of the later history of this great historic house. The explanation and apology in the preface, no doubt, accounts in a great measure for the inferiority of the earlier portion of the work, but it cannot be ignored that the writer shows himself far more at home in Elizabethan, Stuart and Hanoverian times than in the Plantagenet period. Mr. Brennan possesses one essential qualification for the compilation of a family history intended for the general reader—he has the pen of a ready writer—indeed, he is occasionally open, as we shall presently show, to the charge of adding interest to his pages by picturesque descriptions which have no foundation in actual fact. He writes, moreover, with a strong religious bias throughout, which is objectionable in a work of this character, and which we hope will be avoided in future histories of this series. He has created for himself a number of historical bugbears—Henry VIII, Wolsey, Queen Elizabeth, Burghley and his son Robert Cecil, Walsingham and Hatton. None of these can do anything good; evil deeds and evil motives are attributed to them, which, though perhaps sometimes true enough, are for the most part far more likely to be false.

On taking up the first volume we are struck by the following passage:—"It is probable that 'Great Alan' fought under the latter sovereign [Henry I] in Normandy and France; at any rate the ancient arms of Percy,—'azure five fusils in fesse, or'—lost none of their prestige while he bore them upon his shield." If Mr. Brennan has the slightest proof that Alan de Percy bore these arms, it would go far to settle the well known controversy as to the date of the introduction of hereditary heraldic insignia, but can he adduce a spark of evidence to prove this?

The next point that claims our attention is that the question long mooted among genealogists, as to the doubtful legitimacy of Joscelyn of Louvaine, the ancestor in the male line of the historic Percys, is here entirely ignored. An instance of what we are compelled to call unjustifiable word painting occurs in the glowing passage descriptive of the battle of Shrewsbury, where Hotspur is said to have been found "with his face to the early stars and his forehead pierced by the arrow of doom." Mr. Brennan writes:—"There lay the Douglas, his great axe clutched in the grip of death." Now if this means anything at all, it must be intended to convey the impression that Douglas was found slain. History tells us, as does Sir Herbert Maxwell in the first issue of this series, that Douglas was taken prisoner in the fight, courteously treated by Henry IV, lived for twenty years longer and fell at length at Verneuil. Again, in the account of the battle of Bramham Moor, we find the following:—"But a lance-thrust pierced Bardolf's throat, and he was slain. Northumberland, bleeding from many wounds, fought valorously on, until life forsook him, and he fell beside the corpse of his fellow-outlaw." Bardolf, according to the most reliable authorities, died of his wounds a few hours after the battle, while the Earl fell on the field. When we come to the second volume we stand on firmer ground. The Rising of the North is well and accurately described, and were it not for the irritating tone of prejudice which unfortunately pervades this book, the author would enlist the genuine sympathy of every reader for the tragic story of the seventh Earl of Northumberland and his brave and noble wife. As to the mysterious death of the eighth Earl in the Tower, we cannot think that he was murdered by the contrivance of Sir Christopher Hatton. It is difficult to see how his death could benefit either Hatton or his royal mistress, and the fact that the latter at once permitted his son and successor to take possession of his estates, showing him marked favour, should acquit her of the insinuation that she had cast covetous eyes on Northumberland's lands. By far the most satisfactory portion of this work is that which deals with the career of "the Wizard Earl," and his long and apparently unjust incarceration in the Tower for supposed complicity in the Gunpowder Plot. We seem to see the man before us and realise his unhappy troubles and his wayward though never ignoble character as we have not before done. But even here Mr. Brennan repeats the absurd slander that Northumberland's wife was at the time of their marriage "nor maid, nor wife, nor yet widowe," and tells us that "her first husband, Sir Thomas Perrott, was still living, and no record exists to show that this union had ever been set aside." As Elizabeth was matchmaker on the occasion, and as scandal is nowadays busy with the name of the virgin Queen, it may be as well to clear her memory from the imputation of having encouraged bigamy among her courtiers. Sir Thomas Perrott died between the 13th and 15th Feb. 1593-4,¹ while the marriage of his widow to the Earl was probably not celebrated until 1595, for the latter in his "Instructions" to his son says—"In my Choise of a Wyfe it was long ere I made it; I had told thirty-one years ere I tooke one." He was born in April 1564.

A plaintive note rings through the otherwise interesting chapter which deals with the claims of James Percy "the trunkmaker," and Francis Percy of Cambridge, to the Earldom of Northumberland at the death of the eleventh Earl in 1670. The writer seems to think that these men were unfairly treated, but for this suspicion we see no justification. The rather wild theory that the claimants may have been descended from a mysteriously concealed elder brother of Alan Percy of Beverley, so far from being supported by the two inquisitions taken upon the death of Alan's father in 1590, is actually refuted by them. To judge by his remarks (vol. ii, p. 370) Mr. Brennan has either never seen the inquisition which he quotes, or has misread it.

Among many inaccuracies which we have observed in reading these pages are the following:—The celebrated soldier Sir John Swinton is called Sir David; Elizabeth Barton, "the maid of Kent," in both text and index appears as Burton, while Sir Harris Nicolas is always referred to as Nichols. A more serious error occurs on p. 105 of the first volume, where the wife of the third Earl is styled Baroness Poynings, Fitz Payn and Bryan. It is needless to do more than refer to the Complete Peerage under the two last of these titles. We have nothing but praise for the illustrations which adorn these volumes, and Mr. Herbert Railton's sketches are as attractive as those supplied by him for the Douglas history. The chart pedigrees, though containing many misprints, are useful, but we cannot approve the inclusion of the Smithson pedigree from Plantagenet Harrison's History of Yorkshire, without any attempt to verify step by step the statements there made.

THE GIFFARDS. By Major-General the Hon. George Wrottesley. (Reprinted from the Proceedings of the William Salt Society.) 1902.

The writer of this book has long been known as a diligent student of the public records, and a work from his pen is therefore always regarded as a rare genealogical treat by his fellow antiquaries. His history of the Giffards is the result of patient and untiring study of original documents, chiefly, but by no means entirely, ancient lawsuits; indeed, if proof were needed of the inestimable value of these records, it would be sufficient to point to this volume as an example. The author's chief purpose was to write the history of the ancient Staffordshire house of Giffard of Chillington, but he has in addition investigated with much care the pedigrees of many other families of the same surname. The theory that all, or nearly all, of these widely scattered families have a common origin is at first sight somewhat startling, but as far as the three great baronial houses of the name, the Earls of Buckingham, the Barons of Brimsfield and the Barons of Fonthill, are concerned, very satisfactory evidence is produced that this is the case. It also appears probable that the Giffards of Chillington are an offshoot of the last named stock. That the Devonshire Giffards are likewise sprung from the Giffards of Fonthill is not by any means as certain, but much that is new has been brought to light concerning their early genealogy. The exact relationship of the Chillington family to the Barons of Fonthill cannot as yet be determined, though the connection between them is indicated, as well as by other evidence, by the fact that as late as 1272 John Giffard of Chillington, in a suit brought against him by his overlord, the Bishop of Coventry and Lichfield, called to warranty the then representative of the Giffards of Fonthill, John Fitz John, claiming to hold under him. To quote General Wrottesley's words, the litigation which took place on this claim illustrates "the frequent introduction of new mesne tenures between the occupier and his lord which is often a stumbling-block to the antiquary." Notwithstanding their ancient birth, and the considerable position which they held in their own county, the Staffordshire Giffards did not cut a great figure in the world until the time of Henry VIII, when Sir John Giffard by distinguished services to that monarch and by a wealthy matrimonial alliance, raised his family to the zenith of its dignity and influence. In Elizabeth's reign the Giffards of Chillington were ardent Romanists and endured many hardships for their religion. General Wrottesley relates their sufferings in a spirit of impartiality, which is as much to be admired as it is unusual with those who have to treat of this controversial period of English history, and he has also been able to correct some errors into which Lingard and Froude have fallen. Like many of their co-religionists the Giffards were on the royalist side during the Civil War, and it was to George Giffard, a younger son of this family, that Charles II chiefly owed his preservation after the battle of Worcester. No previous writer has discovered the identity of the Mistress Giffard who was the King's hostess at Whiteladies on this occasion, and it is satisfactory to find that her true position on the pedigree is here made clear. The ancient charters printed in the Appendix to this work are sufficient of themselves to render it valuable to antiquaries, and in conclusion we can only express our regret that it should have been left to a local society to publish so interesting a book.

THE PARISH REGISTERS OF ALDENHAM, HERTFORDSHIRE, 1559—1659.
Transcribed by Kenneth F. Gibbs, Vicar of Aldenham and Hon. Canon of St. Albans, and edited and indexed by William Brigg, B.A. 1902.

Genealogists should give a cordial welcome to this carefully transcribed and excellently printed Parish Register. Aldenham has always been an important parish, containing many gentle families, and owing to its proximity to the Metropolis the entries in the register relating to Londoners are numerous. Canon Gibbs, who is responsible for the transcript and from whom alone the printed register can be obtained, has added a very interesting Appendix giving an historical account of Aldenham Place and its various proprietors, and of the ancient Grammar School founded in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, together with a list of the clergy connected with the parish. During the period with which this portion of the register deals the manor passed, by purchase, from the family of Stepney, or Stepneth, to that of Cary, and was sold in 1642 by Lucius Cary, Viscount Falkland, the celebrated cavalier commander, to Sir Job Harby, afterwards created a Baronet by Charles II. Entries are to be found in the register relating to all these families, as well as to those of Briscoe, Cade, Coghill, Coningsby, and Puckering. The seventh Earl of Rutland, then Sir George Manners, was married here in 1605-6, and a son of Lord Mohun was buried in 1653. A curious breach of promise of marriage entry is to be found on p. 99, and in 1636 occur the names of several persons who died of the pestilence. The index provided by Mr. Brigg is all that can be desired, and will be very useful. The register is rendered more attractive by several illustrations, including portraits of Henry and Lucius, first and second Viscounts Falkland, and views of Aldenham Place and the Grammar School. Canon Gibbs announces his intention of carrying the transcript to the year 1813, and we venture to suggest that when this is done, the monumental inscriptions in church and churchyard should be added.

THE EARLIEST PEERAGE ANNUAL: AN EXACT LIST OF THE LORDS SPIRITUAL AND TEMPORAL. London (Elliot Stock).

This dainty little volume is a facsimile reproduction by photography of what is supposed to be the first annual publication dealing with the personnel of both Houses of Parliament, which was issued in 1734. Its chief interest consists in the London addresses of the Lords and Commons, which are given, thus showing the localities in which the fashionable world lived in the early part of the eighteenth century. These addresses should be compared with those given in "A Peerage Directory, 1727," published in The Genealogist as long ago as 1884 (New Series, vol. i, p. 49). Mr. Fox-Davies in his preface comments upon the Earl of Abingdon's town house having been situated in Dirty Lane, "wherever that neighbourhood may have been." The euphonious locality in question is surely now known as Abingdon Street, Westminster. It is curious that though every other rank in the Peerage has been enormously increased, there are now fewer English Dukedoms than there were in 1734.

Notes and Queries.

THE HAMILTONS OF BLANTERFERME.—I only lately happened to observe in The Genealogist of October, 1899, an article by Mr. Joseph Bain, F.S.A. Scot., on "The Hamilton family and its Cadets," in which he impugns the succession of the Hamiltons of Blanterferme, or Blantyrefarm, in the parish of Blantyre, Lanarkshire, endeavouring to introduce into that succession the Rev. William Hamilton, Roman Catholic Rector of Cambuslang, and his natural sons James and Robert, because these persons in 1557 obtained two charters of certain lands in Blantyre barony which he finds recorded as Nos. 352 and 371 in the recently published Protocol Books of the Town Clerks of Glasgow. As the Hamiltons of Blanterferme died out in the male line in the year 1773, and cannot therefore now defend their own succession, I hope I may be allowed to point out that the charters to which Mr. Bain refers do not relate to the lands of Blanterferme at all, but to other lands of much less value in the parish of Blantyre, which are quite distinct. Mr. Bain does not give the description of the lands of which the Rev. William Hamilton in 1557 obtained charters in the actual words of the protocols, and, as the difference is important, I give them here. They are, "the west half of the granter's dominical lands commonly called the Mains of Blanter with half of the tower, of the fortalice, with yards, orchards, and other pertinents extending to a twenty shilling land of old extent; with half of the granter's mill of Blanter, mill lands, etc., lying in the barony of Blanter and shire of Lanark," the granter being John Dunbar, Baron of Blanter.

Dominical lands in Scotland, according to the late eminent authority, John Riddell, advocate, were lands allotted to the support of the Baron and his retainers.

Mrs. George Scott, of Blantyreferne House, who is now the representative of the Hamiltons of Blanterferme, or Blantyrefarm, writes to me that the lands of Blanterferme are designated in the title deeds as "all and whole the ten pound lands of old extent of Blanterferme, or Blantyrefarm, with biggins, yards, tofts and crofts, outfields, infields, etc.;" that no part of Blanterferme is called the Mains; and that the only lands known as the Mains are in a part of the parish called the Kirkton of Blantyre about three miles distant from Blanterferme, and connected with other lands called Priestfield.

Moreover, I find in the Great Seal Charter of the Barony of Blantyre to the first Lord Blantyre, dated 18 Jan. 1599, No. 833 as published, which also forms Protocol No. 3425 in the Protocols of the Town Clerks of Glasgow, vol. xi, "the dominical lands commonly called the Mains of Blantyre with manor place, etc.," are mentioned as separate and distinct lands from those of Blanterferme also named amongst others in the barony, and in No. 198 of the Inquisitions for Lanarkshire the lands are again mentioned exactly in the same way as distinct and separate within the barony in the retour of Walter, third Lord Blantyre as heir to his father William, the second Lord Blantyre, on 11 May 1639.

The evidence of the two charters adduced by Mr. Bain shows that the Rev. William Hamilton, Roman Catholic Rector of Cambuslang, and his natural sons James and Robert, held by charter in 1557 one half of the dominical lands commonly called the Mains of Blantyre, but in no way shows that they were ever connected with the Hamiltons or lands of Blanterferme.

HALL FAMILY OF CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—My ancestress, Mary Hall, came from England about 1630 with her husband, whom tradition calls "Mr. Nathaniel," her son John, and possibly other children. The early Church records of Cambridge, Mass., where they were located were destroyed by fire, so her husband's Christian name is not certain. The family is believed to have come from Coventry or St. Edmundsbury. The arms handed down are:—Argent, on a chevron between three columbines Azure stalked and leaved Vert, a mullet of six points Or. CREST—A talbot's head erased proper. According to Burke, these arms belong to the Hall family of Salisbury, Wiltshire. The N.Y. Library contains only a partial list of those who sailed from London between 1600 and 1700. I shall be greatly obliged for any information which may enable me to trace the earlier origin of this family.

THE VISITATIONS OF LEWYS DWNN.

The Heraldic Visitations of Wales by Lewys Dwnn are so little known to any but students of Welsh genealogy that a few words concerning that antiquary may not be out of place before I pass on to consider his works. Lewys Dwnn, or rather Lewys ap Rhys ap Owain, for Dwnn was the name of his mother's family, tells us that he was a diligent student at the feet of William Llyn and of Hywel ap Sir Matthew and of other earlier and well known Welsh heralds. Of his date of birth or death nothing is known, but his labours extend over the last quarter of the sixteenth century, and part of the reign of James I. In the first half of the nineteenth century the Society for the Publication of Ancient Welsh Manuscripts determined that Dwnn's Visitations should be, if possible, discovered and published, and the task was entrusted to several competent antiquarians, under the editorship of Sir Samuel Rush Meyrick, LL.D., F.S.A., the well known author of a "History of Cardiganshire," with the result that in 1846 two folio volumes were published. Of these, the first contains the counties of Carmarthen, Pembroke and Cardigan in South Wales, and those of Radnor, Flint and Denbigh in North Wales. The second volume begins with a small number of miscellaneous districts, some in North and some in South Wales, extending to only sixty-four pages in the printed folio; the remaining and chief portion being occupied with the counties of Anglesea, Caernarvon and Merioneth in the Northern part of the Principality. The first difficulty that Meyrick had to encounter was the discovery of the original manuscripts. This proved no easy matter. We can imagine the search made and the correspondence that no doubt took place between Meyrick, Mr. Morris, of Shrewsbury, the eminent Welsh genealogist, Lord Cawdor, Sir Thomas Phillipps, Mr. Lloyd Mostyn, M.P., and others, with the somewhat meagre result that of all Dwnn's manuscripts the only autographs that came into Sir Samuel Meyrick's hands were those relating to the counties of Carmarthen, Pembroke and Cardigan. Meyrick tells us that this volume was in the possession of Mrs. Madocks, of Glan-y-wern, in Denbighshire, who allowed him to copy it. The fact that these three counties are taken from the originals at first hand and are not mere copies of transcripts, lends a peculiar value and interest to the first two hundred and forty-eight pages of Meyrick's volume i. The remaining eighty-four pages of this volume contain copies of transcripts, said to be from original Visitations of Radnor and Montgomery, by Dwnn. With regard to volume ii, the first sixty-four pages are, as I have already said, occupied by miscellaneous descents, which appear to have been written by one Hopkin ap Einion, of Brecon, and are a compilation made about 1604, probably from various sources, including, it may be, Dwnn himself, who was then living. The remaining three hundred pages are from a transcript made in 1685 by Lewis Owen, of Peniarth, from the original then in the possession of Mr. Thomas Mostyn, of Gloddaith. The accuracy of this transcript is, however, supported by two persons, William Hughes and John Davies, who attest each page with the remark, "This page agrees with ye originall being compar^d by us." This copy, after many wanderings from its original home, came into the possession of Mr. Edward Evans, of Eyton Hall, in Herefordshire. Sir Samuel Meyrick, we see, in spite of all his enquiries and the help of Welsh antiquaries, had to put up with a series of transcripts in forming his text for the North Wales Visitation. In fact, apart from the three counties of South Wales, out of the remaining nine counties of the Principality, we have only Anglesey, Caernarvon and Merioneth, that can boast an even passable text and that merely an attested transcript. In his introduction, p. xxix, Sir Samuel Meyrick remarks as follows:—"During its (his work) being printed, the original by Lewis Dwnn, with the subscribed signatures in the handwriting of the parties, has been, through the untiring perseverance of my friend Mr. Wynne, discovered at Hengwrt, but I must mention that no energies have been wanting to ascertain what has become of all Lewys Dwnn's other manuscripts." It is much to be regretted that unique records such as these should be so constantly the subject of enquiry into their location and ownership. Perhaps some system of central registration or notification might be consented to by their fortunate possessors, who do not desire to part with their treasures into the safe keeping of an official body such as the Trustees of the British Museum or the College of Arms. As it is, such MSS. are frequently dispersed when change of ownership comes about by death or other means, and in consequence a sort of Inquisition or Domesday Survey has to be taken about twice in a century to ascertain if they are still extant and where they abide. It is more than fifty years since we last heard from Sir Samuel Meyrick of his quest, and I recently undertook another to ascertain where Dwnn's autograph Visitations now are. Meyrick found the South Wales Collection at Mrs. Madocks', at Glan-y-wern, but it is not there now. He tells us that before his book issued from the press that the North Wales Visitation was discovered at Hengwrt, but it is not there now. Where then are they? I can fortunately answer this question. The first I have discovered in a safe place, whence it is unlikely ever to wander again. It is among the Egerton MSS. in the British Museum and is described in the Catalogue as follows:—

"Egerton MS. 2,585.

"Pedigrees of Welsh families in the Counties of Carmarthen, Pembroke and Cardigan, by Lewis Dwnn, Deputy Herald-at-Arms 1586--1613, Welsh and English, Autograph. The title in Welsh, which is written on f. 8, states that the volume is the book of Lewis Dwnn, the poet of Montgomeryshire, of Bettws in Cydhewain, which he collected as Deputy Herald-at-Arms over the three Principalities of Wales and the Marches of Wales, under a patent sealed by Clarenceux and Norroy, Kings of Arms. In the first part of the MS. are interspersed some biblical, historical and mythical genealogies. The pedigrees of the families are not arranged in any order, but many of them are attested with the signatures of the heads of the several families. At the end is an index of names made in 1748. The pedigrees were edited, together with those in the following volume, by Sir Samuel Rush Meyrick, for the Welsh MSS. Society in 1846, both volumes being then in the possession of Mrs. Madocks, of Glan-y-wern, co. Denbigh. Paper ff. 388.

"On the cover is stamped the name, 'John Madocks, Esq. From J. W. 1825. Folio.'"

O Jesus, prevent error.

The three Counties of South Wales; that is to say Carmarthen, Pembroke and Cardigan;

And their family ancestry or family tribes, as they have been found in the old books of authority by the Poets, ancient Deeds and Latin Records.

The Book of Lewys Doonn,

Poet, of Montgomeryshire, of Bettws in Cydhewain on Berriew, who is Deputy Herald at Arms over the three Provinces of Wales, and in the Marches of Wales, under the Patent and Seals of Clarendieux and Norroy, two Kings of Arms, under the Great Seal, for the Southward and the Northward, for North and South Wales.

May God preserve our Gracious Queen Elizabeth in good health.

Amen. So be it.

The pedigrees are partly in tabular and partly in (Welsh) narrative form, and most are signed by the head of the family, whose descent is recorded, together with the date and a note of the sum paid to Dwnn for his labours, usually five or ten shillings. The language is an extraordinary compound of Welsh and English, for instance, "Dustus o'er pies et cwrwm," is Dwnn's rendering of "Justice of the Peace and of the Quorum"! His writing too, is very bad, indeed he apologises for it in his introduction; addressing his readers he says, "But I request of you wise and learned readers that you will not form your judgment of me by the appearance of my writing, for no one can go beyond his abilities." Nevertheless, in spite of these drawbacks, the work is one of great general accuracy, and is especially valuable by reason of the signatures of those from whom the herald obtained his information at first hand. Such evidence would in our own times be regarded as of legal validity for at least the third generation above that of the attester. Dwnn tells us that he had an official position as Deputy Herald under patent. I have made enquiry at the College of Arms and find that nothing is known there of the circumstances of his appointment or of any patent. Yet Meyrick states in his Introduction (p. xxiii) that this deputation was discovered at his instigation, after much search, by T. W. King, Rouge Dragon, among some miscellaneous papers, and that it is endorsed in a hand resembling Dugdale's, "Taken out of Wales Visitation Booke, nu 136." The reference given by Meyrick is "H 16, f. 202." It would be very interesting to know where this MS. is. Meyrick, however, had a full copy of the Patent which he gives in extenso on p. xxiii. There is one praiseworthy direction given to Dwnn by Clarenceux (Cooke) and Norroy (by his deputy Glover), and that is to carefully take down dates and full particulars of the families within the Principality and the Marches, "Omittinge all highe lynes dedvced from farre aboue all memorie, which for great part are found to be coniecturall," etc. This direction Dwnn will be found to have followed. His patent is dated 3rd February 1585. How it came about that none of Dwnn's Visitations are to be found in their proper home the College of Arms, and why no record of his appointment can be discovered, although it clearly was in existence within the last fifty years, are enigmas beyond my ability to solve. His work in South Wales is extremely full, accurate and duly attested, and the original MS. is easily accessible. For its own period it is unrivalled and superior both to Vincent and Prothero in detail in many cases. Turning from South to North Wales in my search for Dwnn's autograph of that part of the Principality, I fully expected from Meyrick's statement that Hengwrt would repay enquiry, but I found that no MSS. are now there. Peniarth I thought unlikely, as Meyrick states that a copy made by Lewis Owen, Esq., of Peniarth, from the original at Gloddaith, was not then in the possession of his descendant, W. W. E. Wynne, Esq., but had wandered to Herefordshire, whence it was lent to Meyrick for his work. However, it proved eventually that Peniarth was the right locality, and on applying to W. R. M. Wynne, Esq., Lord Lieutenant of Merionethshire, he with the utmost courtesy, informed me that the original MS. was among his valuable collection at Peniarth. Mr. Wynne is of opinion that it never formed part of the Hengwrt collection, but that it reached Peniarth through some ancestors of his family, "either the Mostyns or Williamses of Penbedw in Flintshire." As it would appear to have been at one time in the possession of Mr. Thomas Mostyn, of Gloddaith, Mr. Wynne is doubtless right in his belief. In 1859, however, the late Sir Robert Williams Vaughan bequeathed the great Hengwrt collection to his "friend and kinsman" W. W. E. Wynne, Esq., whose letter prefixed to Harl. MS. 2,299, tells us so. It will thus be seen that the whereabouts of the original Visitations for six counties has at length been ascertained, but there is reason to believe that Lewys Dwnn included the other parts of Wales in his inquiries. And it is in the hope that the attention of persons interested in Welsh genealogy may be called to this matter and further stimulated, that I have written this article. I have had the title page of the South Wales MS. photographed (full size). Any subscriber to The Genealogist who wishes a copy can obtain one from the photographer by applying to me. It may serve as a standard to test the authorship of other MSS. that may be, possibly, writings of Lewys Dwnn.

A MANUSCRIPT RELATING TO THE FAMILY OF OFFLEY.

This W^m Offley Aldermā of Chester & Father of S^r Thomas Offley had also 2 Daughters (sisters to the afores^d five brethren) bes[t]owd in marriage to men of good wealth Lynen Drapers in the Poultry, the one Mr. Jacob, the other Bowyer, they had many Children virtuously brought up & in Learning, The eldest sone of Giles Jacob was a learned scholler, & pceeded Doctor of Phisick in great love & admiraçon of the Students for his vertuous qualities & learning & was elected by the Doct^{rs} of Phisick at the request of the late Queene Elizabeth, to whom Embassad^{rs} were sent from the mighty Emperor of Russia, for one of her phisitians to attend his royall person & to minister unto him for the preservaçon of his health; And this Doctor Jacob was welbeloved of the Emperor & honored of the Muscovites.

Soe Bowyer likewise had a son by his wife who was a Famous Capitaine in the Low Countreys, greatly advanced by the state for his pollitick & Couragious attempts & his Fortunate success in atcheiving them in defence of the Gospell. These were the Grandchildren of ould Williā Offley Alderman of Chester by his later wife, whereby I gather hee was a godly vertuous & Faithfull man, one that feared god for his seed was mighty upon Earth; & the generaçon of the faithfull shalbe blessed: It is not in mans memory, neither is it chronicled (though it be worthy) that ever any heard or saw five such brethren of such hon^r worship Dignity & estimaçon in one Citty & at one tyme whereof 4 were Marchant Taylors: But now to returne to John Offley the German Brother to S^r Tho: Offley of the whole blood the 2^d son of the seven sons of William Offley to whom belonged the inheritance of the howses in Stafford. In his youthfull dayes in his rash adolescence when ignorance beare the sway, & men were ledd by blind guides, this John Offley having access to the brick house in Hackney afores^d was moved by a false Fryer, to lay out a great su^m of money for the Furnishing of a Chamber, wth costly hangings & coverings the wth other Ornament^s the Fryer prepared & so Feeding him wth vaine & false p^mises of plenty of gold & Jewels & deceiving him wth visions & pleasant apparitions put him in hope of the obteyning the Fayrie Queene as that Fabulous History of Lamwill. And this Frier put in practise such Coniuration wth terrible sights of Fire & Divells, that John Offley was forced through Feare to knock for the Fryer, as was before agreed upon, that if hee could not abyde those sights, hee should knock, so by this his Feare All his vaine hope was lost, & all his travell & Cost, & hee indebted to his M^r & Brother James Leveson whose money hee had laid forth, that he was forced to compound wth his M^r for his house in Stafford, so after y^t tyme hee wold never beleive Fryer nor their p^fession. For this Fryer in the Chappell in one end of the house did celebrate the masse & in the other end did coniure the Divell. And so this John Offley left his trade of the staple and followed his Fathers trade in the City of Chester, & was married to Alice Rogerson, the daught^r of Aldermā Rogersō W^m Offleys Daughter in law; soe that the Father married the mother, & the son the Daughter, & he p^spered in this m^rchandize & adventures, & spent his gaines liberally among his Freinds Cittizens & Aldermen of Chester, Hee entertained the Lord Ferrers of Chartley at his house a whole weeke together, hee builded a ship called the Gouldon Lyon, hee was bountifull & liberall in house keeping & charitable to the poore. Hee also travelled into Ireland, & procured him wth the Lords of the Countrey Freindship & acquaintance by catching of salmons; sett up a Tent wth a flagg on the top, to the which Tent the Lords of the Count[r]ey came & had entertain^t wth plenty of wine & shugar & biskett Cakes & hee cutt them out Jerkins & stockings of greene Kersie wth hee brought wth him thither for the same purpose; and the Lords gave him liberty to fish for salmons, where hee tooke at the Fishing, tymes, a Thousand Salmons in one tyme of the yeare; soe was this John Offley a p^rudent man and a good victualler for his Countrey, untill the tyme that his brother S^r Thomas became a purchaser of whom hee tooke Counsell & advice & used him as a surveyor. And being this [thus] recalled from his dangerous adventures both by sea & Land by the Large p^mises of his Brother S^r Thomas & espetically by the perswasion & Tears of his Loving wife Alice Offley hee came & dwelt at the Mañor howse of Madely brought his houshold & family thither wth great p^rvision of Beefe Barrelled up for the sea, & good store of wine & soe hee kept a bountifull house among the Tenents & Neighb^{rs}. And by his good experience and wisdom hee caused all the Pooles & Rugged Places to be perfect meadowing such was his Care & dilligence for his Brother & his posterity. Hee was put in trust for the Educacon of one M^r Burtons Daughters whom hee bestowed in marriage some to worshipfull gentlemen & some to men of good Livings gave them there portions & performed the last will & testam^t of his Cozen Burton & the trust that was reposed in him, His wife Alice Offley Brought him two Children that were borne at Madely Mañor the one a son the other a Daughter. The Lord Ferrers of Chartley sent his grandchild Walter Deverox to be Godfather to his son who bore the name of Walter in his Baptisme & after this Walter Offley dyed in his minority. Mary the youngest was sent to London & was marryed to one M^r Twyne a student & learned in the Law, Jane Offley the eldest was brought up in her Aunt M^{rs} Kirtons House & was marryed from thence to Mr. Gall a publick Notary in London.

Three of Mr. John Offleys Daughters were matched neare unto there parents in Staffordshire Elizabeth the eldest to one John Austin of the grange a rich Farm^r who died without issue & left her a good & sufficient annuity wth s^d Elizabeth was after marryed to one Mr. Phillip Belleott [Bellot] of Moreton in Cheshire & of her body hee had one soñ named John Belleott. Ann Offley was marryed to M^r Thomas Unwyn a man of good living of antient inheritance in Audely parish & had of her body one soñ who is a man of wisdome & Creditt & estimacon among his neighb^{rs} & in his Countrey; Ellen Offley the youngest of these three that came from Chester was a beautifull & modest maid best beloved of her parents welbeloved of her Uncle S^r Thomas Offley who would ofte tymes comend her for her wisdome good behavior & gravity who would many tymes say that shee should be his Daughter by adoption, & therefore willed his brother her Father that hee should not bestow her in marriage but by his Consent for hee wold provide for her & make choice of her husband, yet notwithstanding shee made her owne choice unknowne to parents or uncle; which tydings of her marriage to John Weston his servant when that came to the care of his M^r S^r Thomas by one of his teñents who was by at the marriage, hee was moved in great choller against them, & after being pswaded by his teñant that the knott that was done could not be undone, & that his servant was a wise man, was privy to his Counsell & secretts, sollicit^r to all Causes, had good success in them never had the Overthrow in any Cause hee tooke in hand, wellbeloved of all the worshipfull Freinds well knowne to the Reverend Judges & grave Counsell^{rs} beloved of all your Teñents well accepted in Court spirituall & temporall wth the Chancell^r & Register M^r Weston, who calleth him & accepteth him for his loving Cozen. And further by this his marrying you have bound him & his children (if god send them) to be surre pillars to your House & Posterity & upon these wise speeches S^r Thomas being pacified & knowing that hee had spoken well & truly hee answered; I know hee is wise & Discreet in all that hee takes in hand, & I will be good unto him, but yet will I use him as my servant & it shalbe no hindrance to him, For I had rather have A man wanting money, then money wanting a man, & that w^h wants of them in substance I will supply w^h he certainly had done in more ample mañer if hee had come downe into the Countrey as hee did purpose & prepare for that Journey if hee had not beene otherwise counselled to stay & tarry in London, where hee in the latter end of the s^d sumer about the last of July An^o 1582 departed this life & soe by his untymely death did not remember his God-Daughter Ann Weston Daughter of his servant John Weston & Ellen his wife & others of his servants, whom hee had thought to have Further benefited if god had not otherwise determined. This John Weston did bring againe to the Lords possession such Lands as were Concealed by Freeholders from the Lrds of the Man^r Hee had begotten of the body of his wife Ellen one Daughter as is afores^d, to whom S^r Thomas was god-father in Baptisme at Madely, & after one sonn whose Grandfather John Offley was God-Father at the Font; And now this John Offley & Alice his wife having bestowed all there children, some to god & some in marriage as you have heard & seeing there children's children, they grew old in body & mind and prepared themselves to dye unto the world, & to live unto god, & so it pleased the Lord first to take to his mercy the loving wife Alice Offley, whose death the husband sore lamented & liberally performed her Funerall being his last care & charge. After whose Death hee abandoned the pleasures & ioyes of this world & lived wth his son Weston & welbeloved Daughter, some few yeares in the service & Feare of god & in meditation of the world to come, and being five weeks sick in body but of a sound remembrance, disposed of all his temporall goods to his Grandchildren, comitted his soule to the Almighty, & the day before hee dyed hee called the Curate, to prepare for the next Day the Celebration of the Lords supper, for himselfe his children & Freinds to Communicate wth him. But it pleased god to Call him in a good & acceptable tyme for hee lived not unto the next day, but in the night before hee called for a Cup of water, & drunke thereof uttering these speeches. O heavenly Father I beseech thee accept of this my sacrifice w^{ch} I offer unto thy divine maiesty in remembrance of the death & passion of thy soñ Jesus Christ my savi^r into whose hands I comēd my spiritt unto whom wth the Father & the holy ghost be rendred all glory hono^r praise & thanksgiving now and ever wth such divine & godly words hee departed & was interr'd in a monum^t of stone w^{ch} hee had in his life tyme prepared, hee appointed by his will a stone of Alabaster to bee sett on the top thereof. And thus did this godly man depart out of this life in the Faith of Christ; & his Funerall most amply performed, & the body of him & his loving Wife Alice to rest in one Tombe in the Dust untill the Lord shall restore them gloriously in the generall resurrection. After the Death of John Offley who had the Milne & Farme at Thomas Hill at a reasonable Rate by the last will & testam^t of S^r Thomas his Brother; John Weston his son in law & Ellen his wife, contynued there house keeping there Almes to the poore in as ample mañer as before & the Rents Rack. They decayed their substance through too much liberallity, hee had many secrett enemies who envyed his Former Felicity & happie success in all that hee tooke in hand; And they examined his accompts & having noe Cause to reprehend the same by some unlawfull meanes the [they] made it away; above 50^{li} pound to his hinderance, & after being reconciled into his M^{rs} [Master's] favour; about Michalmas tearme; it pleased god to call his M^r to his mercy about the last of January next after; whose death he greatly lamented wth teares, & hee himselfe tormented with greife & sickness departed the Sum^r after, being very penitent for his sy^{ns} & lyeth burryed wth his Fathers. His sorrowfull wife Ellen Weston bewayled his Death fell into a Consumption, was visited & comforted wth Gentlewomen of great birth & worship who would by there skilfull meanes have plunged her life if it had so pleased god, but shortly after wth a repentant hart for her sin, shee yeilded her soule into the hands of her savior, wth a stedfast faith to be saved by the meritts of his passion; her body being buried wth her parents; Ann Weston the eldest child of these 2 deceased, was marryed to one Mr. Richard Mintridge, somtyme a follower of my Lord Gerrard, A man whom god hath enriched wth Temporall blessings, but much more wth spirituall graces, a man that feareth god, delighteth in his Comandmt^s frequenteth sermons, exerciseth himselfe in reading holy & devine bookes to the great Comfort of his Conscience.

John Weston the soⁿ god hath likewise blessed with wisdom & riches, & a hart aspiring to heavenly treasures which never decay.

But now that I may avoyde the note of Flattery, for I know there are no Thrasoes to be caught wth that Bayte & that no man can be Called hapie & blessed before his Funerall I leave them to the almightyes blessing beseeching him to continue these his blessings and graces in them & wth them, even to there lives end.

AMEN.

Pedigree of the Families of Newcomen and Hunnings, of co. Lincoln.

In volume v of The Genealogist (First Series), the Rev. W. G. Dymock Fletcher, F.S.A., gave an account of the Field family of Laceby, co. Lincoln, and showed their connection with the Newcomens through the marriage on the 29th April 1734 of David Field, with Mary Newcomen, the only daughter of Rev. Wm. Newcomen, by his second wife, Ann Westhorpe. I propose to trace the descendants of Edward Newcomen, the only child of the Rev. Wm. Newcomen, by his first wife, Mary Townraw.

It is only right to state that I am enabled to do this through the researches of Mr. Fletcher, who may truly be styled the historian of the Newcomen family. He, in volume vii of The Genealogist (First Series, p. 229), gave extracts from many of the Newcomen wills. He has also published in pamphlet form "The Family of Newcomen of Saltfleetby," being a reprint of an article he contributed to the reports of the Lincoln and Nottingham Architectural Society for the year 1897 (vol. xxiv, p. 145). To the article in the report, the learned Editor, Prebendary Maddison, F.S.A., added (p. 162) some notes on the family, from which I give extracts:—

"The pedigree of the Newcomens is given in four Lincolnshire Visitations. . . . The number of branches into which the race spread is remarkable, and it is still more remarkable to find that nearly all dwindled into female heirs. The senior Saltfleetby line apparently ends with the daughters of John Newcomen, living in 1634, but that line put forth a branch in Charles Newcomen, of London, which spread into Ireland, where it was adorned with a peerage and baronetcy. Both are now extinct. . . . The branch which showed most vitality is the one founded by Richard Newcomen, of Nether (Low) Toynton. . . . The senior line of the Nether Toynton Newcomens seems to have died out in Thomas Newcomen, son and heir of Samuel in 1592, but the second Saltfleetby line founded by Charles Newcomen, who married Joan Thorndike, flourished all through the seventeenth century."

I would refer to the pedigree of the Newcomen family given in the Heralds' Visitation of Lincolnshire in 1562-4 (see Genealogist, First Series, vol. iv, p. 260) and also to the two pedigrees in the 1592 Visitation (see Genealogist, First Series, vol. vi, p. 272), and point out that Prebendary Maddison doubts the correctness of the descent of Richard Newcomen, of Nether Toynton, given in the 1592 Visitation, and considers Richard Newcomen was more probably descended from Wm. Newcomen, of Saltfleetby, the younger son of Wm. Newcomen, and that he did not die as recorded in the 1562 Visitation in that year without issue.

The Hunnings, through Ann Newcomen, represent the line descended from the youngest son of Charles and Joan Newcomen.

KING ARTHUR: A REJOINDER.

I am rather amused to see that Mr. Scott-Gatty, knowing all he does of the circumstances under which my criticisms were written and rewritten, finds some of them lacking in point. A few at any rate have gone home. His misquotations are handsomely acknowledged, and of them we will say no more. But this time he has been somewhat careless in quoting me. Thus I did not charge him with misleading his readers, or with interpolating glosses and other extraneous matter into his texts; but pointed out that this had been done by the editor and translator on whom he unfortunately relied, and that he had himself evidently been misled. I never said that Gildas named Constantius and the two Constantines: merely that foreign historians would supply an outline of their careers. The date 516 I do not think I even mentioned. It was the Vita Gildæ, not I, that made Gildas a Scot. As for the legend of St. Alban, let the galled jade wince. While setting up Gildas as the authority—the sole authority—for the times in which he lived, I distinctly stated my view that, for earlier events, “he is no better authority than another.”

While upon the subject of authorities, may I suggest that Mr. Scott-Gatty would find in Mommsen's critical and scholarly edition of Gildas and Nennius more help in regard to the text than in the inferior work he cites. When Gildas represents Ambrose as on the whole victorious over the Saxons, is it respectful to cite a recent school history which asserts that “he was completely routed by them”? Indeed the authorities selected for the fifth century form a remarkable group. A single page (p. 75) supplies the following list:—

“Welsh Tradition.”
Geoffrey of Monmouth.
Nennius.
Anglo-Saxon Chronicle.
Henry of Huntingdon.

Gardiner, Student's History of England.
Malory, Morte D'Artur.
Gildas.
Bede.
Camden, Britannia.

Morant's History of Colchester must not be left out; and for dates, the margin of the Hendre Book.

One word, in passing, about Zimmer, whose name seems to be the proverbial stick to beat a dog with. As it has been flourished over me, I must mildly protest I am not frightened. There is a type of German scholarship which appeals to the saving sense of humour of the mere Briton. Far be it from me to disparage the toil or the erudition spent upon the Nennius Vindicatus; only I do not see that it helps Mr. Scott-Gatty much, for frankly the net result is to leave his author without one shred of authority, except of course for such statements as can be traced to Gildas. Heaven preserve our disjecta membra from such a vindicator.

Let us now clear away the wreckage. Half the "tentative pedigree" or thereabouts has gone by the board. With King Coel, Helen, Constantine the Great, and the rest, we have no further concern; and on these heads I may well be content with Mr. Scott-Gatty's admissions. The passage about the soboles Ambrosii, which figured originally as a probable allusion to Arthur by Gildas himself, goes too. "It does not affect my case." No indeed; but it did very materially, until Bohn's "free translation" was shewn to be a rank blunder.

The "tentative pedigree," from Maximus to Arthur, remains for us to examine; and this Mr. Scott-Gatty complains that I treated with scant consideration. Well, I will endeavour very shortly to make amends. And first be it noted that, in order to furnish Maximus with a son named Constantine, it was necessary to identify him with a certain Maxen ap Llewellyn. That identification has now been definitely abandoned; and with it goes the suggested paternity of Constantine, so that we must, in fact, begin with Constantine himself.

Now Mr. Scott-Gatty has introduced three persons of that or a similar name.

(i). The historical Constantine, a Roman officer serving in Britain, proclaimed Emperor in 407 by his legionaries after the fall of Gratian. He crossed the channel to attack the Vandals in Gaul and Spain, and upon his victory a year later was recognised by Honorius. He and his son were put to death at Arles in 411 by disaffected troops. Constans, another son, said to have been tonsured before commanding an army, was put to death at Vienne by Gerontius about the same time.

(ii). A traditional Kustennyn ap Maxen ap Llewellyn, said to have refused a crown in order to be "duke" of Ewyas Urchenfeld (a highly suspicious quarter), and direct ancestor of Vortigern.

(iii). A traditional Kustennyn ap Tydwal, said to have been a chief from Armorica, who fought successfully against Picts and Scots till treacherously slain by one, and to have had a son Emrys Wledig.

Such, for what it is worth, seems to be the core of the tradition. As usual there are accretions. Certain deeds of the historical Constantine, for instance, are attributed (or a garbled version of them is), to both the others; his tonsured son to one of them. To cling to these accretions, while rejecting the genuine tradition is to drop the substance for the shadow, like the dog in the fable. But that is what Mr. Scott-Gatty has done. In his first article he selected the father of the second, the career of the first, and the sons of the first and third, and by this composite method produced the "novelty" (the term is his own) which he again commends to our attention.

It is true he brings forward another argument for this identification, namely the supposed statement of Gildas that Ambrose was the son of a Roman Emperor, slain in the continental wars. Assuming for the moment that Ambrose was Emrys Wledig ap Custennyn Vendigaid, how very cautious Gildas is, where Mr. Scott-Gatty is so positive. No "ut novi" here; but "forte Romanæ gentis," "parentibus purpura nimirum indutis." Gildas thus claims no certain knowledge of his parentage; while the phrase "tantæ tempestatis collisione occisis" (sandwiched in between those significant particles as it is) can only be interpreted by the context. The whole passage is too long to quote, but my readers can see for themselves that these words occur towards the end of a chapter, that the whole chapter is about the Saxon invasion, so is the chapter before, and so is the chapter before that. I quite see that this interpretation may conflict with Mr. Scott-Gatty's chronology; but that is his affair.

Mr. Scott-Gatty's attitude towards the Welsh genealogies of that epoch is throughout rather perplexing. Sometimes he quotes them with respect: indeed his whole superstructure rests upon them. Sometimes again he treats them with contumely. At the few points where they impinge upon ascertained fact, they are, as he has shewn, damaged by the contact. It would be unkind to suggest that he has accepted just so much as will square with his theory, and rejected the rest. No doubt in his own mind he has some principle of criticism, some touchstone of credibility; but it has not been disclosed, explicitly or otherwise. As to the precise weight to be attached to this form of tradition, opinions will widely differ. Pedigrees such as those of Tydwal and Vortigern one may believe or disbelieve; there is little or no material for argument about them. With Arthur it is a different matter. Round his name had grown an epic or legend cycle before the date at which our earliest Welsh documents had taken the shape in which we know them. His pedigree, therefore, must be received with special caution; for so famous a hero was bound to be fitted with the most illustrious ancestry available, even as Gildas felt sure that Ambrose must be son of a Roman, and an Emperor at that. Remember also the case of Hereward.

At this point evidently I must have failed to make my argument clear, or Mr. Scott-Gatty would hardly complain that I paid no attention to his second novelty. To question whether such persons as Arthur and Uther ever existed, is surely to deal somewhat drastically with their pedigree. As for Arthur, I lean towards the view that he is probably founded on fact—though admitting that this is highly questionable. Not so with Uther. His genesis and origin are clear enough. Someone wrote, in the margin of Nennius, "Arthur map uter": the same or another hand added the translation "filius horribilis"—meaning, I suppose, "child of wrath" or "child of terror." Later writers (ignoring the translation) made Uther a proper name, and invented the title Pendragon to adorn it. It is as though a historian, finding King Charles stigmatised as a son of Belial, were to discuss gravely whether Belial was a title of King James, or whether there was an error in the royal pedigree.

As for Mr. Scott-Gatty's British dates, I have already commented on the sources from which they are derived, such at least as are not purely his own. Since their purpose was to shew probable cause for making Arthur son of Ambrose, it will be sufficient to remark that, after selecting those most favourable to his views, the result is to make Ambrose perhaps only sixty-three when he became a father—possibly (as he admits) a good deal older.

Here Mr. Scott-Gatty's anonymous friend "of undoubted high scholastic attainments" appears on the scene, to pronounce my paraphrase of a disputed sentence "arbitrary and inaccurate." The first, with all respect, it was not, since I gave reasons for taking the words as I did; nor has he condescended to specify any inaccuracy. Were the august name revealed, no doubt I should tremble: as Veiled Prophet, his scholarship must speak for itself. Not to dwell upon the engaging simplicity with which he accepts the Prefatio Gildæ as an authentic work of that writer, I must most humbly confess myself not scholar enough to see in the text the sense he desires. Let me once more quote the passage:—

usque ad annum obsessionis Badonici montis . . . , quique quadragesimus quartus, ut novi, oritur [or oritur] annus, mense jam primo emenso, qui jam et meæ nativitatis est.

This is rendered by the great man "the year of Badon Mount is the forty-fourth year," or again, "the year of Badon Mount dawns or begins the forty-fourth year; this he knows as sure as he knows the date of his own birth"; or yet again, "the year of Badon Mount, which dawns (or begins) the forty-fourth year, as I know well." The words "mense jam primo emenso" he has each time omitted, also the insignificant conjunction que; and indeed they are very awkward for him.

Now let me appeal to Mr. Scott-Gatty to shake off for one moment his exceeding modesty, and say (if his Latin be not all forgotten) what the words quique oritur annus can be but an inversion of annusque qui oritur; and then, having tried to fit in the missing clause, confess that this time his Homer has nodded. I can still see nothing in the sentence but the statement (i) that Gildas knew all about Mount Badon; (ii) that he wrote forty-three years after the battle; and (iii) that his birthday was in April. The obscurity of the passage once more I freely admit, reserving my doubts about the text. It is open, no doubt, to Bede, Mr. Scott-Gatty, and his learned friend, to propose any emendation they please; but at best their conjectures will be a sorry foundation on which to build up a new system of chronology.

MARRIAGES AT FORT ST. GEORGE, MADRAS.

The Register books of St. Mary's, Fort St. George, begin in 1680, the year of the consecration of the church. The marriages, baptisms and burials for about eighty years are bound up together in one volume, which is of parchment. The entries from 1680 to at least 1730 are apparently in one handwriting. They are, presumably therefore, copies of the originals up to that date, and there is little doubt that in some instances mistakes have been made by the copyist. All names are here given exactly as they stand in the existing registers, any probable errors being indicated by a query inserted within brackets.

The first marriage to take place within the new building was Yale's. He married the widow of Joseph Hynmers, one of the Company's servants. She was the daughter of a Mrs. Anne Elford, of London, and her youngest son by her first husband bore the name of Elford.¹ He is mentioned in the records at Madras, under date 1685, as having a passage home provided for him and his brother by Elihu Yale.

From 1680 to 1694/5 the name of the person who gives the bride in marriage is recorded. At first it is "given," etc., afterwards he is called simply "Father." In eight of the earliest marriages the names of two "bridemaids" and two "bridenmen" are added. These were not necessarily single men and women; Yale acted as bridenman on three separate occasions after his own marriage.

In 1779 occur the first signatures of the contracting parties before witnesses. No printed form for filling in the registers was used during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

A GENERAL HISTORY OF THE KEMP AND KEMPE FAMILIES OF GREAT BRITAIN AND HER COLONIES. By Fred. Hitchin-Kemp, assisted by Daniel Wm. Kemp, J.P., and John Tabor Kemp, M.A. London (Leadenhall Press, Limited).

This handsome volume has been compiled and published on the principle of "the great combine." It aims at recording the pedigrees of nearly every family bearing the surname of Kemp or Kempe throughout England, and a chapter has been added which also includes Scotland, Ireland, "the British Empire" and the United States. A scheme of this wide character has, no doubt, certain advantages; it appeals to a larger class of readers than a work dealing with the lineage of a single family, however ancient or even historic, is able to obtain, but it has its demerits as well, and more than once while perusing these pages, it has been our fate to be met at a most interesting and critical point with the remark that want of time or space has prevented the further elucidation of the matter in question. The book opens with an instructive chapter by Mr. John Tabor Kemp on the origin of the name, which he shows to have been derived from different sources, e.g. from the Anglo-Saxon cempa, a soldier, being then equivalent to Campion and Champion, while in other cases it is a place name rendered in Latin records by de Campo and de Campis, and in English by atte Campe. But Mr. Kemp goes too far in telling us that "Many Kemps and Kemples in various parts of England are met with in early documents claiming descent from the Earls of Warwick, who had the title of de Bello Campo"!; nor can we think that de campo Arnulphi, the monkish rendering of Champernown, has anything whatever to do with Arnolphus Kempe.

The more important families of the name were those settled at Ollantigh, in the parish of Wye in Kent, and Slindon in Sussex; the Norfolk Kemps, now represented by Sir Kenneth Kemp, Bart.; the Kemps of Spain's Hall in Essex, and the ancient Cornish house. There does not appear to us to be satisfactory proof or even probability of a common origin between any of these families, notwithstanding that the two first, the Kentish and Norfolk Kemps, have long borne, apparently by lawful authority, identically the same arms, the garbs being no doubt allusive to the Latin form of the name of which mention has been made above. The lineage of each of these distinct families has been carefully overhauled and many corrections made in previously printed genealogies, while in the case of the Norfolk Kemps, Mr. F. Hitchin-Kemp, according to his preface, has had unusual opportunities, for Sir Kenneth Kemp allowed him access to "great chests full of Manorial Rolls and documents ranging from the reign of King John to the present time." Unfortunately no exhaustive investigation was made among these valuable papers, nor does there appear to have been a complete search in the archives of the College of Arms. The chapters relating to the early pedigree of the Kemps of Gissing, are not a little confusing, and we must hope that the facts which have been gleaned relating to this interesting family may be followed up by a further enquiry later on. The illustrations are excellent and profuse; especially to be admired are those which have been executed from the drawings of Miss Lucy E. Kemp-Welch, an accomplished and well known artist. The coat of arms and crest, attributed by some unaccountable mistake to the Kemps of Haddington and Edinburgh, and of which a sketch is given, will at once be recognised as belonging to the ducal house of Bedford.

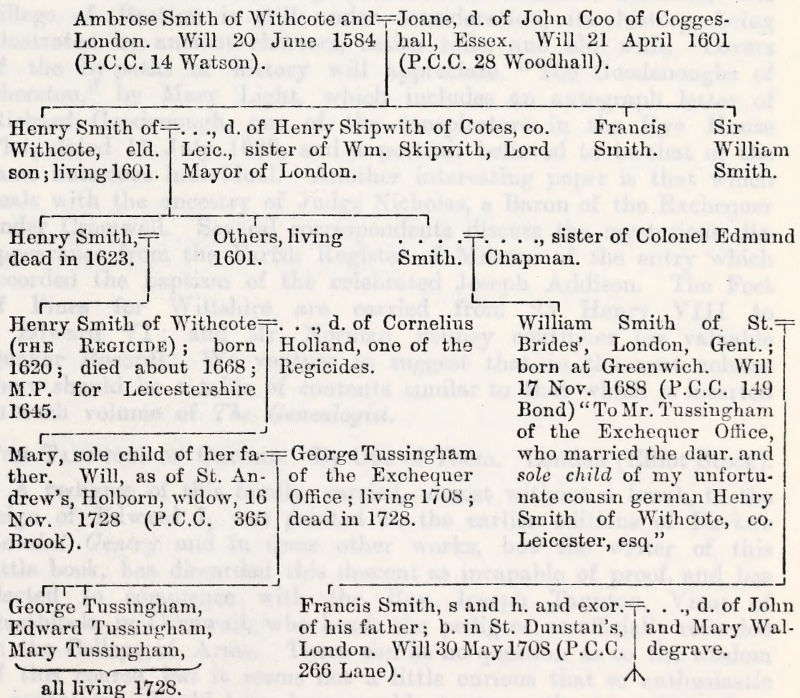

THE SMITH FAMILY. By the Rev. Compton Reade, M.A. London (Elliot Stock).

Under a title which suggests a work of fiction rather than a book dealing with genealogy, Mr. Compton Reade has actually attempted within the compass of an octavo volume of (including an index) only 280 pages, to give a popular account of the greater number of families bearing the well nigh universal cognomen of Smith. In so doing he claims to be the first to produce a popular work of genealogy giving "the lineage of the farmer or tradesman, side by side with that of the noble or squire," thus betraying that his acquaintance with genealogical literature in this country and in the United States during the last decade cannot be very extensive. Mr. Reade always writes pleasantly and his obiter dicta are marked by shrewd common sense, but to the advanced student this book will hardly be of much assistance, for as regards descents which have appeared in ordinary works of reference, it is avowedly merely a compilation, and in some cases not even the best printed account has been selected. The pedigrees inserted at first hand are either extremely modern, or for the most part, unaccompanied by evidences. The collection of tabular pedigrees from the Heralds' Visitations, though it does not pretend to be complete, is of considerable interest, and serves to show how useful a work might be compiled which should embody records relating to this most common of all English surnames.

Mr. Reade justly animadvertes upon the absurd delusion as to their ancestry which induced a London banker to assume the title of Baron Carrington, and his son to take the surname of Carrington in lieu of Smith, though they possessed no drop of the old Carington blood, but passes over without comment the even more glaring delusions of the real Caringtons themselves, firstly, that they were descended through a certain Hamo, living at the Conquest, from the Comtes de Carinton in Normandy, which Hamo gave his name to "Carinton" in Cheshire, and, secondly, that one of the family (appropriately born and bred in Gascony) in 1404, having been, as an adherent of Richard II, under attainder, not only changed his name to Smyth, but also adopted a fresh coat of arms!

By his remarks on p. 99 Mr. Reade is clearly uncertain how to place Henry Smith, the Regicide, in the pedigree of the Smiths of Withcote, and as his guess is rather wide of the mark, we append the true descent, for which we are mainly indebted to a gentleman who has devoted considerable attention to the Withcote line.

It will be observed that the above pedigree clearly proves that the Regicide left only one child, a daughter, and so disposes once and for all of the claim to descend from him (which Mr. Reade repeats on p. 118) made by the family until recently settled at Shortgrove in Essex, though some members of this line have apparently gone so far as to assume the surname of Heriz.

Many other pedigrees contained in this book provoke criticism, but, as our author reminds us, there are only twenty-four hours in a day.

WILTSHIRE NOTES AND QUERIES: AN ILLUSTRATED QUARTERLY ANTIQUARIAN AND GENEALOGICAL MAGAZINE. Vol. iii, 1899-1901. Devizes (George Simpson). London (Phillimore and Co.). 1902.

Under the careful editorship of Mr. Arthur Schomberg, Wiltshire Notes and Queries fully maintains its reputation as one of the best local publications of its kind. Mr. Edward Kite is responsible for several articles in this volume, and his "Notes on Amesbury Monastery" have produced some critical remarks from other contributors, a sure sign that they have been read with interest. Another of Mr. Kite's papers deals with "Old Lackham House and its Owners," and contains a view of the house reproduced from Dingley's "History from Marble," and a later sketch taken in 1790. Under the heading "Records of Wiltshire Parishes," the village of Bratton is still under consideration, its history being illustrated by ancient charters, assize rolls, and old wills. Lovers of the by-paths of history will appreciate "The Goodenoughs of Sherston," by Mary Light, which includes an autograph letter of Richard Goodenough, one of the conspirators in the Rye House Plot, dated 11 July 1689, and a portrait believed to be that of the same notorious individual. Another interesting paper is that which deals with the ancestry of Judge Nicholas, a Baron of the Exchequer under Cromwell. Several correspondents discuss the mysterious disappearance from the Parish Register of Milston of the entry which recorded the baptism of the celebrated Joseph Addison. The Feet of Fines for Wiltshire are carried from 23 Henry VIII to 4 Edward VI; and Mr. Norman Penney continues his valuable Quaker Records. We venture to suggest that in the next volume there should be a table of contents similar to that which is inserted in each volume of The Genealogist.

THE TAUNTONS OF OXFORD. By One of Them. London (Elliot Stock).

A pedigree of this family, carried, almost without a break, to the reign of Edward I, was printed in the earlier editions of Burke's Landed Gentry and in some other works, but the writer of this little book, has discarded this descent as incapable of proof, and has elected to commence with the Rev. Joseph Taunton, Vicar of Quethiock, in Cornwall, who heads the pedigree as officially recorded in the College of Arms. There can be no question as to the wisdom of this course, but it seems not a little curious that so enthusiastic a genealogist should have been unable to trace the immediate forefathers of a beneficed clergyman, who died as late as 1712. One member of the race has attained some distinction, namely Sir William Elias Taunton, once a well known Judge of the Court of King's Bench.

We have also received:—

COLLECTIONS OF THE SURREY ARCHÆOLOGICAL SOCIETY. Vol. xvi. This volume contains among other valuable articles, "Notes on the Manor and Parish of Woodmansterne," with a large chart pedigree of the family of Lambert of Banstead; and "Preparations by the County of Surrey to resist the Spanish Armada," the latter being contributed by Mr. A. Ridley Bax, F.S.A.

Notes and Queries.

JOHN HARRINGTON, OF KELSTON, SOMERSET.—"The Marriage Licences in the Diocese of Bath and Wells," p. 185, printed in the last number of The Genealogist, include that of the above John Harrington and an Eleanor Poslet, of Bath. Since the name of the lady is incorrect, it may be advisable to state that the marriage is recorded in the Register of this parish as follows:—

Jhon Harrington Esq^e & M^{rs} Helena Gosslett married Aug: 6: 1678.

The above Helena Gosslett was the eldest daughter and coheiress of Benjamin Gosslett, Esq., of Marshfield, co. Glouc., and was fourth wife of the above John Harrington.

FRANCIS J. POYNTON,
Rector of Kelston.

SIR RICHARD FRY, KNT.—Burke gives Joan, daughter of Edmund Beaufort, Duke of Somerset, grandson of John of Gaunt, as wife first of Lord Howth and secondly of Sir Richard Fry, Knt. The Fry monument in Membury Church, Devon, records the descent of Fry of Yarty from John of Gaunt, through Jane (wife of John Fry, of Feniton, Esq.) "daughter of Edward, Duke of Somerset, ye grandson of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, who was ye son of King Edward the Third." Evidently there is an error somewhere. Perhaps John Fry of Feniton, was son of Sir Richard Fry. As a descendant of Fry of Yarty, I should be grateful if anyone who is constantly turning over early rolls could clear up this point, or give any data touching this Fry and Beaufort marriage.

YARTYE.

RATCLIFF OF STEPNEY.—Hugh Ratcliff, "gentilman of the Mydle temple of London," as he styles himself in his will (proved by his relict at Lambeth, 28 Nov. 1531, P.C.C., 11 Thower), devises all his lands and tenements lying in the parish of "Stebenhigh" to his wife "Milesen" for life, and after to her children, one of whom, Margaret Ratcliff, married 1, John Ackland, of Ackland; 2, John Brett, of Whitstanton, Somerset. The fifth quartering on the Ackland monument in Broadclist Church, Devon, is, Arg. a bend engr. Sa., a crescent Or, for difference (Ratcliff). One writer states that Hugh Ratcliff, of Stepney, was of a younger branch of the Earls of Sussex. The crescent would seem to indicate that he was a second son. Can anyone say of what line?

YARTYE.

Le JOUR, JOWER, JEWER.—Can any reader of The Genealogist add to the following particulars of this family? In a survey of the Manor of Cattishill, in Godalming, Surrey, made in 1292 (Escheats, 20 Edward I), John le Jour is named as entitled to 10d. yearly out of the total revenue of £10 ls. 10½d. In 1297-98 Roger le Jour, of Stanewell, appears as one of the "manucaptors" for Sir Richard de Windsor, Knt., on his election as a knight of the shire for Middlesex, and in the same year, 1298, Adam le Jour, of Wouburne, fills the same office for Sir Laurence de Bluntesdon, Knt., on his becoming representative to Parliament (Vide Parliamentary Writs, temp. Edward I). In 1321 John Jour and Beatrice, his wife, and the heirs of Beatrice, release to John Lucas eighteen acres in Eynesford, Kent (Ped. Fin., Kent). On 1 May 1335 William Jour, with others, is fined on the complaint of John Morice, of Cambridge, for assault; and on 3 Aug. 1339, a pardon under the Privy Seal, at the request of Ralph de Ufford, was granted to Hugh Jour, of Burgh, "hayward" to Dame Davylers, for the manslaughter of John Sweyn, of Hayles (Vide Patent Rolls, 1335, memb. 23; 1339, memb. 27). In 1390, John Jour, of Stisted, and others, sue John Broke and Margaret, his wife, concerning a messuage, garden, and twenty-six acres of land in Newington and Southwark. In a rental of the Manor of Tongham, in Surrey, John Joure is one of the three copyholders, and the family continued there until the end of the eighteenth century. In a Manor Roll of the Manor and Hundred of Godalming, in 1483, William Jowre held land of Margaret Towersle, and John Jowre held, by copy of Court Roll, land in Shekelford (Shalford), and the name occurs in wills and Lay Subsidies in Surrey, chiefly in the Hundred of Farnham, and in Hants, while a branch settled at Easebourne and the adjoining town of Midhurst, in Sussex, in the seventeenth and early part of the eighteenth centuries. Thomas Joure held a messuage and thirty acres of land in Peperharrow before 1506, from William Brocas, by copy of Court Roll, from which Richard Pexall, the heir of Brocas, tried to eject William Joure by force (Vide Chancery Proceedings, 1553). The descendants of Hugh Jour, of Burgh, in Suffolk, continued in that county and can be traced by wills; they are found at Burgh as late as 1530, and later at Ipswich. In the Visitation of Suffolk, in 1664, Luke Jour, Jower, or Jours, entered his Arms as, Az. the sun in splendour Or, betw. three bezants. Crest—A ram's head erased Az. bezantée, armed Or, with the note, "Came out of France." The name, in course of time, has undergone many modifications of spelling, an instance of Shewer in the seventeenth century, indicates the soft pronunciation of the French Jour; even Jewerie and Jury can be identified in two or three instances.

ARTHUR J. JEWERS.

LASHAM.—Any information as to the family of Lasham, believed to have originally sprung from the village of Lasham, Hants, will be gratefully welcomed. The name occurs in The Parish Registers at Headley, Hants, in 1593, and later at Selborne, but the earliest mention of the family appears to be in Suffolk—Inquisitions, Ed. I, 1272, Babberg Hundred—one Richard de Lasham appears. Fleet of Fines, 1320—Stuston, near Eye, Suffolk, “John de Lasham and Maria, his wife,” occur. In 1323, William de Lasham, lord of the manor of Plessis (Qy. now Place Farm), Hadleigh, was seized of one messuage, seventy acres of land and fifteen acres of woodland; his heir, aged thirty, was named John. The lords of the manor of Lasham appear to have held Denham manor, Suffolk, contiguous to Eye and Stuston. The name also appears at “Reamseye,” Huntingdon, 1296, when one Stephen de Lassham and Sarah, his wife, had a grant of land made to them.

THE EARLIEST PEERAGE ANNUAL, ETC. (ante, p. 143).—In my brother's library there is a volume, with which I have been acquainted all my life, entitled, “The Peerage of England or an Historical and Genealogical Account of the Present Nobility, &c., the second edition with very large Additions and Corrections, London, Printed by G. S. for Abel Roper and Arthur Collins, at the Black Boy, in Fleet street, 1710”; it has a frontispiece consisting of miniature portraits of various Sovereigns, and at the end of each article is a rough woodcut of arms, with the blazon. Is anything known of this book, and what was the date of the first edition?

ARTHUR SCHOMBERG.

HALL FAMILY (ante, p. 144).—The Hall crest mentioned has surely some connection with the Hall arms on the monument to Robert Hall, D.D., Canon and Treasurer of Exeter Cathedral, which are:—Sable three talbots' heads erased, impaling, Arg. masonry a chief indented Sa. (Reynell). Robert was the eldest of the six sons of Bishop Jos. Hall (Bishop of Exeter, 1627-41), and married Rebecca, fourth daughter and coheir of Richard Reynell, of Creedy, Devon, and the Middle Temple, Esq.

A large number of the emigrants to New England were from Devon. Besides the family of Bishop Hall, who was not a Devonian by birth, there were other families of the name in the county. Sir Thomas Hall, of Wiltshire, married a Seymour, of Berry Pomeroy, Devon. Walter Hall, of Okehampton, Devon, was licenced to marry Joanna Reynell of the same or Honeychurch, Dec. 31, 1631.

Pedigree of Offley.

Compiled by G. C. BOWER and H. W. F. HARWOOD.

[The information derived from the Offley Manuscript printed in this volume (pp. 1-11, 83-88, 149-152, is here placed in italics.]

JOHN OFFLEY,¹ of Stafford, mar. Margery, dau. of She mar. secondly Dillarne, of Stafford. They had issue.

He mar. secondly, widow of Rogerson, Alderman of Chester.⁵
They had issue—

⁴ Not Joane as in the Offley Manuscript. See p. 225, note 2.

⁵ But the will of William Rogerson of the City of Chester, Alderman, dated 18 April, proved P.C.C. 31 May 1519 (17 Ayloff), contains legacies to "my sonne Will'm Offeley" . . . and "to my daughter Elisabeth his wif." "Will'm Offeley my sonne in lawe" is made an executor. In a pedigree, probably compiled in the eighteenth century, now in possession of Sir Offley Wakeman, Bart., the second wife of William Offley, is called daughter of R. Rogerson, and she is said to have married after his death J. Wilde. According to Ormerod's Cheshire (2nd edition, vol. i, p. 363), the inscription on, or under, William Offley's portrait at Chester calls his first wife Elizabeth Dillon, and his second Elizabeth Wright. His son Hugh (Inq. p.m., Series ii, 37 Eliz., C., vol. 243, No. 92) was seized of a messuage at Chester, "now or late in tenure of Hugh Rogers alias Rogerson, Alderman of the City of Chester," and of a messuage in Norgate Street in the said City, "now or late in tenure of Richard Wrighte." The will of David Rogers, Cit. and Grocer of London, pr. P.C.C. 1582, mentions his cousin Robert Offley, his brother Edw. Wylde, and his cousin Hughe Rogerson, Alderman; and that of his uncle John Rogers, also Cit. and Grocer of London, pr. P.C.C. 30 Dec. 1589, mentions his "coozen germyn" Mr. Robert Offley, and also Mr. William and Mr. Hughe Offley.

I. JOHN OFFLEY, of Chester (Sheriff 1544, Mayor 1553) and of Madeley, co. Staff., in Nov. 1561; living 5 Aug. 1580; mar. Alice (who died before her husband, but was living 5 Aug. 1580), dau. of . . . Rogerson, Alderman of Chester, by the second wife of his father William Offley,¹ and had issue—

1. Walter Offley, born at Madeley, died young.
1. Jane mar. Richard Gall, a public notary in London.
2. Elizabeth mar. first John Austin of the Grange, co. Staff., "a rich farmer who died without issue," secondly Philip Bellot of Moreton, co. Cest. (? son of John Bellot of Moreton, by Joan dau. of Ralph Moreton of Little Moreton), and had issue a son John Bellot.

3. Anne wife of Thomas Unwyn of Clough, co. Staff., and had issue a son.
4. Ellen wife of John Weston of Madeley, one of the Overseers of the will of Sir Thomas Offley, and had issue—
 - (1). John Weston, of Madeley, gent., aged about 56, in 1631 (Chan. Dep. Eliz.-Chas. I, $\frac{1}{2}$).
 - (2). Ann Weston, mar. Richard Mintridge "some time a follower of my Lord Gerard."
5. Mary mar. . . . Twyne, "learned in the law."

C.

MARGARET OFFLEY, eldest dau., mar. first, as his second wife, John Nicholls, father-in-law of Sir Thomas Offley. She mar. secondly Stephen Kirton, Alderman of London, and merchant of the Staple at Calais, cousin (nephew) of Sir Stephen Jennings, Alderman of London; he died 16 Aug. 1 and 2 P. and M.; bur in St. Andrew's, Undershaft; will dated 1 Feb. 1551-2, proved P.C.C. 29 Aug. 1553 (17 Tashe). She was bur. in St. Andrew's, Undershaft; will dat. 28 Oct. 1571, pr. 5 June 1573-4, P.C.C. (22 Peter). They had issue—

1. Thomas Kirton of Thorpe Mandeville, co. Northants, Common Serjeant of London, aged 16, 1 and 2 P. and M.; died 20 April 1601, bur: 21 April; mar. Mary, dau. of . . . Sadler, Alderman of London. She died 22 Feb. 1597-8, aet. 60. They had issue—

Stephen Kirton, of Thorpe, aet. 21, 1601, died 7, bur. 8 April 1607; mar. Dorothy, dau. of George, second son of Sir John Cope, of Canon's Ashby, co. Northants. She was bur. 11 April 1646.¹

2. John Kirton, "The Angell of Englishmen," died unmarried.

1. Grissell Kirton, mar., before 4 June 1553, Sir Nicholas Woodroffe,² Lord Mayor of London, of Poyle, co. Surrey; he died 18 May 1598, she died 15 July 1607. They had issue—

- (1). Sir David Woodroffe, Knt., of Poyle, co. Surrey, mar. Catherine, dau.³ of Sir John White, Knt.,

² Son of David Woodroffe of London, Sheriff 1554, by Elizabeth, dau. of John Hill of London.

sister to Mrs. Henry Offley. She mar. thirdly, Sir George Wrotesley, Knt., and died 13 Feb. 1603-4.¹

- (2). Robert Woodroffe of Alvington, co. Glouc., mar. Mary, dau. of . . . Fox, of co. Glouc., ob. s.p.
- (3). Stephen Woodroffe, of Tongham, co. Surrey, 1623.
- (1). Jane Woodroffe mar., as his first wife, John Machell, of Surrey, and had issue.
- (2). Mary Woodroffe, mar. first Harding, a rich merchant;² secondly, Sir Thomas White, Knt., of Farnham, co. Surrey, brother to Lady Wrotesley.

2. Ellen Kirton mar. Sir Richard White, Knt., of South Warnborough, co. Hants.

3. Jane Kirton, mar. before 1 Feb. 1551-2, Richard Whetell [Whethill], citizen and Merchant Taylor and Merchant of the Staple, of the par. of St. Andrew's, Undershaft.³ They had issue an only dau., Margaret Whetell, mar. first, Sir Thomas Mildmay, Knt., secondly, Sir Francis Lacon, of Kinlett, in Shropshire.

Jane Kirton mar. secondly, before 28 Oct. 1571, Dutton.

4. Anne Kirton mar.⁴ Thomas Dutton, of Sherborne, co. Glouc., Merchant of the Staple, and had issue. She died in his lifetime. He died 4 Oct. 1581; will pr. P.C.C. 6 Nov. of same year.

of London, deced.," dated 8 July 1574, pr. P.C.C. 24 Dec. 1576 (41 Carew), mentions "my dau. Katherine White, my two sons Thomas and John, my three other children, viz., John and William Allen and Margery Lightfoote; my husband Jasper Allen, my brother Richard Sodye, my sister Gibbons, Margaret Huse, my sons-in-law Lawrence Huse and John Lightfoote."

² In the pedigree of Woodruffe (Manning and Bray, vol. iii, p. 176) her first husband is stated to have been Robert Cotton.

³ Born at Sheepy Magna, co. Leic.; will dat. 30 May 1565, as "Richard Whetell, the elder," pr. 23 May 1566 P.C.C. (13 Crymes); (?) father, by a previous wife Jane, dau. and heir of Billing, of Donnington, co. Oxon., of Richard Whetell, who mar. Dorothy, dau. of John Wrotesley.

⁴ The Visit. of Glouc. 1623 states that she mar. first Sir Thomas Withers, Knt. The will of Thomas Dutton mentions his "laste wief" Anne Kirton, decd., and Margaret his then wife (who "deserved no curtesye" from him). By Anne Kirton he had two sons, William his heir (aged 20 years, 6 weeks and 3 days, 5 Dec. 1581) and a dau. Eleanor, who mar. at Sherborne, 24 Nov. 1586, Ralph Salvin, of Newbiggin. He had another dau., Anne, wife of John Warnford, of Sevenhampton, but some pedigrees make her the child of a previous wife. The writer of the Offley MS. (ante, p. 6) appears to have confused the children of Thomas Dutton with those of his son William.

ELIZABETH, or ISABEL OFFLEY,¹ 2nd dau., mar. Thomàs Blower, "a rich citizen of the Company of Drapers," of the par. of St. Dunstan's in the East, and had issue—

1. Thomas Blower, mar. a Dutchwoman, and died without issue.

2. John Blower, "died in his Prentiship."

She mar. secondly Amcotts; her will as "Elizabeth Amcottes of London, widowe," dat. 21 Sept., pr. Arch. London 29 Oct. 1576.

E.

MARGERY OFFLEY,² 3rd dau., mar. first Thomas Michell, of London, Ironmonger, "One of the richest Com'oners within the City of London," but by him had no issue. She mar. secondly, James Leveson, merchant of the Staple at Callice. They had issue—

1. Elizabeth Leveson, mar. at Wolverhampton (Sir) Walter Aston, son and heir of Sir Edward Aston of Tixall, Knt., bur. at Wolverhampton. They had with other issue—

(2). Robert Aston, Recorder of Stafford.

¹ Her first husband Thomas Blower in his will, dated 7 Nov., pr. 18 Dec. 1551 (P.C.C., 36 Bucke) desires to be bur. in St. Dunstan's, near the tomb of Alice, his first wife. The will of Margaret Kirton mentions her sister Isabel Hamcottes, and that of Alderman Robert Harding, dated 20 Nov. 1568 (P.C.C., 26 Babington), mentions "Mrs. Hamcottes, Sir Thomas Offeley's sister."

² In the Offley Manuscript she is wrongly called Joane, but the wills of her two husbands Thomas Michell and James Leveson prove that her name was Margery. The will of Thomas Michell, dated 9 Feb. 1526-7, was proved P.C.C. 12 April 1527, by the executors John Nicholls (husband of his wife's sister Margaret Offley) and Humfrey Barne. It was probably as executor of the former that Sir Thomas Offley took the active part in the administration of Michell's estate, described in the Manuscript. Shortly after her first husband's death Margery became the wife of James Leveson, son not of Nicholas, as in the Manuscript, but of Richard Leveson, and brother of Nicholas. James Leveson, in his will, dated 8 April 1545, and proved P.C.C. 28 Oct. 1547, made Margery his wife one of his executors, and desired that memory should be made upon his grave, or near it, of himself and his two wives Alice and Margery. His first wife was not daughter of Sir Rowland Hill, as stated in the Manuscript, but was clearly Alice dau. of Richard Wrottesley of Wrottesley. Alice, who was living 1518 (the date of her father's will) was the mother of three sons—Sir Richard Leveson, Walter Leveson, and Edward Leveson. Sir Richard, the eldest of these sons, in his will, dated 14 Oct., proved 28 Nov. 1560, made his "uncles" Sir Rowland Hill (his wife's great uncle) and Walter Wrottesley (his mother's brother) overseers. Richard Wrottesley, the father of Alice, in his will (of which there is an abstract printed in General Wrottesley's History of the Family of Wrottesley, p. 255), mentions his "son James Lewson."

- (1). Margery Aston, mar. Thomas Astley, of Patshall.
- (2). Jane Aston, mar. William Crompton, of Stone.
- (3). Katherine Aston, mar. first Stephen, son and heir of Sir Stephen Slaney, Lord Mayor of London 1595, secondly, as his second wife, Sir William Chetwynd, of Ingestre, Knt.¹ She mar. thirdly, Sir Edward Cope, of Canon's Ashby, Knt.; died 1646, aged 80; buried in St. Giles in the Fields.
2. Joyce Leveson, mar. 1561 John Giffard, son and heir of Sir Thomas Giffard, Knt., son and heir of Sir John Giffard, Knt., who built Chillington.² They had issue—
 - (1). Walter Giffard, of Chillington, mar. Philippa dau. of Henry White of South Warnborough, co. Hants, and had issue.
 - (2). Richard Giffard of Saredon, co. Staff., mar. (?) Elizabeth dau. of Thomas Leveson of Wolverhampton.
 - (3). Thomas Giffard ob. s.p.
 - (4). Gilbert Giffard.
 - (5). Giles Giffard.
 - (6). George Giffard.
 - (7). Gerard Giffard of Hilton, co. Staff.
 - (8). Edward Giffard.
- (1). Mary wife of Robert Brooke of Lapley.
- (2). Cassandra wife of Thomas Cassey of Whitfield, co. Glouc.
- (3). Jane wife of Sir John Dormer of Dorton, co. Oxon. She died 9 Sept. 1605, bur. at Crendon.
- (4). Ursula wife of John Wakeman of Beckford, co. Glouc.
- (5). Frances wife of Edmund Powell of Sandford, co. Oxon.
- (6). Dorothy.

THE FIRST WIFE OF WILLIAM, EARL OF PORTLAND.

At page 36 of Vol. xviii of The Genealogist (N.S.), in a communication by Mr. J. H. Round, it is stated, on the authority of G.E.C.'s Complete Peerage,¹ that William, 1st Earl of Portland, married Frances, dau. of Sir Edward Villiers by his (first) wife, Frances Howard.

The following is an abstract of the will of Frances, dau. of Sir Edward Villiers aforesaid, dated 17 July 1704, proved P.C.C., 11 March 1707-8 (Barrett 75):—

I Frances Villiers of the City of Westminster do make my last Will and Testament in form following. My body to be privately buried in the Church of the Parish in which I may die. My debts, if any, to be paid.

To my nieces Frances and Katherine, daus. of my bro. Mr. Henry Villiers, £100 apiece. The £100 per an. payable out of her Majesty's Court of Exchequer, for which tally was struck 25 March last past, to which I am entitled for life and the life of Lady Ann Hamilton dau. of George Earl of Orkney, and the survivor of us, I bequeath to my said niece Lady Ann Hamilton. The other £100 per an. out of same court for which tally was struck on the same day to which I am entitled for life and the life of Mrs. Barbara Villiers, dau. of my bro: Mr. Henry Villiers, and the survivor of us, I bequeath to my said niece Barbara Villiers.

Further to my sd. niece Barbara Villiers all my household stuff and contents of my house.

The afd. legacies of £100 apiece to be paid to my said nieces Frances and Catherine Villiers within 3 years with legal interest thereon.

Residue to my Exors in trust to pay the same to my said niece Lady Ann Hamilton, but in case my said niece shall die unmarried and before she attains the age of 21, then my exors shall pay the same to the next dau. of my sister Orkney, and so on, and in default as my sister Orkney may appoint.

One year's wages to each of my servants.

I appoint my dearly beloved sister Elizabeth Countess of Orkney and Thomas Brodrick of Wandsworth, Surrey Esq., my exors.

Signed by above Frances Villiers in presence of R. Gee, Ann Emes, Will: Sutton.

It is plain from this will that the testatrix was not the wife of the Earl of Portland.

Sir Edward Villiers aforesaid in his will, dated 8 May 1685 (P.C.C. Ent 105), mentions his wife Dame Martha (his second wife; see her will P.C.C. Brodrick 266); two sons, Sir Edward (afterwards 1st Earl of Jersey) and Henry (succeeded his father as Governor of Tynmouth Castle); and six daughters, in the following order:—

- 1st. Barbara (who mar^d John, 4th Visct. Fitz Hardinge of Berehaven).
- 2nd. Frances (as above).
- 3rd. Katherine (mar^d first James Lewis du Puissar, and secondly her cousin William, 2d son of George 4th Visct. Grandison).
- 4th. Elizabeth (the well known Countess of Orkney).
- 5th. Henrietta (mar^d John 2nd Earl of Breadalbane).
- 6th. Mary (mar^d William, 3rd Earl of Inchiquin).

Can the first wife of Lord Portland have been a (seventh) daughter named Anne as stated by Sir Egerton Brydges and in Burke's Peerage (1893), or were there two daughters named Frances?

LEWIS DWNN'S PATENT AS DEPUTY HERALD.

In the last number of The Genealogist will be found an article of mine on the Visitations of Wales, by Lewis Dwnn, in which is set forth the present location of those autographs which relate to six out of the twelve Welsh counties now existing. I further said that although Sir Samuel Rush Meyrick, in the introduction to his printed edition of those Visitations, had given a verbatim copy of the patent issued by R. Cooke, Clarenceux, and William Flower, Norroy, to Lewis Dwnn to act as their official deputy, nothing was known of the existence of the original deputation at the College of Arms, although, after much search, it had been unearthed by Gregory King, Rouge Dragon, at Meyrick's instigation, nearly sixty years ago. I am, however, glad to say that, thanks to a search undertaken by Mr. Alfred S. Scott-Gatty, York Herald, this deputation has now been re-discovered. It is a lengthy document, and as it already exists in print in Meyrick's work, which is not very difficult of access, I do not propose to occupy the valuable space of The Genealogist by reciting its terms. What is more important is the consideration of the questions—of what authority is this document? Is it the original patent, and if not, what is it? To answer these queries we must examine it carefully. It is written on paper in a legible and clerk-like hand, without alterations, emendations, or additions, and is obviously not a rough draft. It is dated Feb. 3, 1585. No signatures are attached. At the foot, in a quite different hand, are these words—"Taken out of Wales Visitation booke nu 136." On turning over the paper we find it endorsed by two entries of great importance, side by side thus—

A debitacion from
R. C. and W^m Flower for one to vyset some part of Wales.

A debitacion from me and Norroy to one to vyset some part of Wales.

These entries are both evidently the writing of Robert Cooke himself, and are in a hand differing from either of the other two referred to above. From these interesting particulars one thing is clear. This document is not Dwenn's patent itself, for it is not signed by the Kings of Arms who appointed Dwenn as their deputy. But I cannot conceive any reason why a signed and sealed patent, handed to a deputy herald as evidence "to all and singular" of his delegated powers, should be in the College at all. We may feel pretty confident that he died in possession of it, and that it shared the fate of some of his MSS. after his death. An official herald who dies bequeathing all his collections to the College might conceivably include his patent in such a bequest, but even that is not at all probable, and we know that Dwenn's actual visitations are not (at any rate now) in that institution where they should be, and there is, therefore, less reason to expect his own patent to be there, where it should not be. The nature of the document brought to light admits of no doubt. It could not be the original signed patent that passed out of the College over three centuries ago into the hands of Lewis Dwenn on his appointment, but is an official and certified copy of that patent—the official counterpart, endorsed in the actual hand of Clarenceux himself, as is clearly proved by the terms of the endorsement and the expression "by me and Norroy." This, then, is the official record of Dwenn's appointment and of the terms of reference contained in his patent, of which it is an exact and certified copy. It would be the merest pedantry to require further proof that Dwenn was properly authorised by patent to act for Clarenceux and Norroy in Wales. Such autograph Visitations properly taken, dated and attested by the head of the family concerned, are, it will hardly be denied, entitled to an official recognition beyond that accorded to mere collections of pedigrees, however excellent, that have no Collegiate authority. The main difficulty in the way of this recognition, since the important discovery of the counterpart of the deputation, arises from the fact that Dwenn's autographs are not at the College; but those at the British Museum, at any rate, are accessible to all, and photographic facsimiles can easily be obtained, so that this difficulty is not so great as it might appear. It may be observed that Dwenn, in his title page to the South Wales Visitation, records his title of Deputy Herald at Arms to Clarenceux and Norroy, under Seal. Until lately almost nothing was known of Dwenn except through Meyrick's printed work, and though a copy of the latter is to be found in the College of Arms, it was not to be expected that a mere printed book, largely in Welsh, and partly composed of pedigrees attributed to a writer of whose claims to heraldic status nothing was known, would be regarded as of any special value from the Collegiate point of view. Now, however, that the MSS. of Dwenn are partially traced and the original deputation, duly attested, discovered, it is not unreasonable to believe that Dwenn's position will in future receive a higher meed of recognition than was possible hitherto to accord him.

"Near this place is a loose brass plate with the subjoined" [inscription]:—

"Under this cell lyeth the body of CATHERINE, daughter of Thomas and Thomasin MAUNSELL (who also lie here) who died ye third day of June 1779, in the 66th year of her age."¹⁷

CAHIR CONLISH, CO. LIMERICK.

A letter from the Rev. Robert John Gabbett, dated 24 April [1869?] from Foyne Vicarage, co. Limerick, states that "In the chancel of Cahir Conlish Church was formerly a tombstone, whose fragments are now in the churchyard; on these is this inscription:—

... APHRA MAUNSELL, my dear mother, daughter of Sir William Crafford, of Kent. Here also lies the body of my deare wife, MARY MAUNSELL, daughter of George Booth, Esq., of Cheshire, and of my sister APHRA PEACOCK, and of her daughter ANN PEACOCK. Erected by me, John Maunsell, Esq., and intended for myself and for my family this 17 of October 1662."¹⁸

On 15 Dec. 1859 according to a letter of that date, from Mr. J. N. G. Atkins Davis, Mill Cottage, Woolwich, the following fragment was all that then remained, viz.:—"... nsell, my dear mothe... ford of Kent. Here a... ary Mansell, daugh... hire and of my sister Aphr... ne Pecocke. Erected by me... ded for myself and... of October 1662."

The abovenamed APHRA MAUNSELL appears to have been living 21 Sep. 1651, according to a legacy receipt of that date among the papers at Thorpe Malsor Hall, as under:—"Sep. y^e 21st 1651, Rec^d the day of the year above men^d of John Maunsell, of Thorpe Malsor in y^e county of Norⁿ, Esq., the full summe of tenn pounds sterlen... it being a legacy¹⁹ given to my late sonne Richard Maunsell, by my late brother Richard Maunsell of the Middle Temple, London, which summe I do acknowledge to have rec^d being executor to my late sonn Richard Maunsell. Witness my hand Aphra Mansell."

ENTRIES WRITTEN IN AN OLD BIBLE AT THORPE MALSOR HALL.

"This bible did belong to Anne, Lady Wray, Sir Drury Wray's Lady; since to her daughter Diana Twigge, now to her grand-daughter Anne Maunsell, who gave it to her eldest son Thos. Cecill Maunsell, who left it to his brother Archdeacon William Maunsell, who gave it to his eldest son Thos. P. Maunsell, 1815."

"My Grandfather THOMAS MAUNSELL, got the Thorpe estate 1728 and went to live there. Died 27 Sep. 1739. My grandmother died 3 April 1747, both in England."

"My father THOMAS MAUNSELL, of Clovervill, co. Limerick, Esq., was born 12 March 1704. He died 7 Oct. 1768 about 9 or 10 at night. Married 3 April 1726, Ann, 2d daughter of Rev. William Twigge, Archdeacon of Limerick; buried at St. John's, who was born 20 Dec. 1703, and died 28 April 1789, aged 85."

¹⁹ Presumably the "legacy" was merely a direction in writing, as Richard Maunsell, of the Middle Temple, died intestate in 1631; most probably the bequest was not to take effect till after the death of his wife, who survived him, and not improbably died in or shortly before 1651.

The following "Case," which is from a copy (in possession of Col. Robert Maunsell, of Limerick) of the (extremely rare) second edition, or supplement to W. W. Mansell's Family of Maunsell, etc., throws much light on this branch of the family, during the time of the ²⁰ She married (lic. Archbishop of Armagh, 4 Dec. 1764) Thomas Spring, of Dublin, and had a da. Catherine, baptised 8 April 1766, at St. John's, Limerick, who married 10 Aug. 1785 Stephen Edward Rice, and was mother of the first Baron Montegale of Brandon.

Commonwealth. It has been furnished by Robert G. Maunsell, of 71 South Mall, Cork, who himself is making collections for a more extensive history of the Maunsell family.

"COPY [OF] CASE SUBMITTED FOR COUNSEL'S OPINION re LOSS OF LOWESMORE FARM, NEAR GLOSTER, ABOUT 1646.

The Case concerning Lowesmore Farm, being a lease about twenty years yet to come 1646. John Maunsell of Thorpe Malsor in co. Northants being possessed of Lowesmore Farme in co. Gloster sold the same to Richard Maunsell of the Middle Temple Esq. his uncle, who took for his assurance a covenant for the said John Maunsell to convey it to whom he should nominate by his last will and testament or other declaration in writing.

1631 Richard Maunsell by a declaration in writing in nature of will gave Losemore farm to Dorothy his wife for life. And he willed that after her decease the children of the said John Maunsell of Thorpe Malsor and of Thomas Maunsell his brother in Ireland should have every one ten pounds out of the first rents, and that Susan, the wife of John Maunsell should have £20 per annum. The rest to be divided betwixt Robert Maunsell the son of John and one of the sons of his brother Thomas Maunsell, and by him to be nominated to be a student in the Middle Temple. Shortly after the said Richard Maunsell died John Maunsell took letters of Admⁿ and conveyed the estates in trust to perform the said declaration.

1638 the said Dorothy widow of Richard Maunsell, married Thomas Haselwood of Belton in the co. of Rutland Esq. who enjoyed the estate until it was sequestrated by the Committee of Gloucester, he being a recusant in arms against the Parliament. He, coming in to submit and make his composition, was committed prisoner to Leycester where he now remains. Thomas Maunsell died at Gloucester, and before his death nominated John Maunsell his son, now Lieutenant to Major Babington, to have the moiety of Losemore.

Query—What remedy is in this Case by address to the Parliament for the above mentioned Dorothy Haselwood, being a recusant, but hath lived in the Parliament Quarters and is impoverished by her husbands delinquency; or for John Maunsell of Thorpe Malsor in respect of his wife and childrens interest and is now Justice of Peace, Com^ttee of Accounts for Northampton and hath lost near £1,000, by the Cavaliers.

or for Lieutenant John Maunsell to whom much is due in arrears, and hath received great wounds in the Parliament Service."

¹ In this work the pedigrees have generally ceased with the extinction of the family in direct descent. An exception is made in this case as the same name was continued by the marriage of Mary Cholmeley with Nathaniel Cholmeley, of London. It does not seem known who he was, or if he claimed any real connection with the Whitby family. Sir Hugh in his will "is thankful to the Almighty Providence that from the East brought me a man of my owne family and that God has blessed his marriage with such hopeful issue to keep up my name and family." Nathaniel Cholmeley mentions in his will his brother John Cholmeley, of the City of London, Esq.

STEPHEN BACHILER AND THE PLOUGH COMPANY OF 1630.

Among the Companies formed in King Charles's time, for colonizing New England, was one, of minor importance and small success, whose real history has never been written. While attempting to present the main facts about it to English antiquaries through The Genealogist, I hope to obtain their help in tracing the reason for the Company's existence and the origin of its known agents.

The venture of the Mayflower Pilgrims in establishing Plymouth Colony turned the attention of English Puritans, of all varieties of doctrine, to New England as a fruitful field in which to plant their religious ideas. England teemed with small sects, inconsiderable in themselves, but important collectively as representing that departure from the English Church as established by the Tudors and Stuarts, which led to the Civil War and to greater independence of religious thought.

About the year 1629 there was formed, probably in London, a small body of Dissenters called the "Company of Husbandmen" or the "Company of the Plough." These names were perhaps scriptural in their allusion, for the members of the Company seem to have been merchants and artisans, rather than actual husbandmen. Who were the originators of this Company, or what was their special doctrine does not appear. Their chosen pastor was the REV. STEPHEN BACHILER, one of the most earnest, as well as one of the most unfortunate of the Puritan ministers of his day.

STEPHEN BACHILER was born about 1561, and in 1585-6 took his B.A. at St. John's College, Oxford. In 1587 he was presented to the living of Wherwell, Hants, by Lord La Warr, and for eighteen years was Vicar of that parish. A man of strong impulse and an essential Radical, he must early have embraced the Puritan doctrines, for he was, in 1605, ejected from his pleasant vicarage, probably one of the first ejections resulting from King James's Hampton Court Conference of 1604, when the King declared he would "make the Puritans conform or harry them out of the kingdom." Of Bachiler's family and early history, as of his life from 1605 to 1630, little is known. Tradition says he fled to Holland, to escape the persecution by the English Bishops, of which Winthrop's History speaks. This association with Holland may not have been because of religious persecution, for some of Bachiler's children lived there; but a search in the church and town records of Flushing and Middelburg reveals nothing concerning the sturdy old Puritan. The children of Stephen Bachiler, as far as known, were—

1. NATHANIEL, born about 1589. A merchant of Southampton; married Hester Mercer of Southampton, sister of Peter, Paul and Rev. Francis Mercer, and of Jane (Mercer) Pryaulx, wife of Capt. Peter Pryaulx of Southampton. Nathaniel Bachiler left children, Nathaniel (who settled in Hampton, New Hampshire), Anne (married Daniel du Cornet of Middelburg, Holland), Stephen, Francis and Benjamin.

2. DEBORAH, born 1591; married Rev. John Wing (son of Matthew of Banbury, Oxon), first pastor of the Puritan Church at Flushing, afterwards minister of the Puritan Church at the Hague, Holland, died in 1630, ancestor of the Wings of Cape Cod.

3. SAMUEL, born about 1592, Minister in Sir Charles Morgan's regiment in Holland. Called to be minister in Middelburg in 1622, but declined. Author of "Miles Christianus," published in 1625.

4. STEPHEN, born about 1594. Matriculated at Magdalen College, Oxford, 1610.

5. THEODATE, born 1598; married Captain and Councillor Christopher Hussey of Hampton, New Hampshire—perhaps a relative of Christopher Hussey, Mayor of Winchester in 1609, 1618 and 1631.

6. ANNE, born 1600; married [John?] Samborne, probably of the Hants family of that name. A widow in 1631, living in the Strand in London. Her children settled in Hampton, New Hampshire.

It has seemed to me that Stephen Bachiler, always a loyal Hampshire man, never could have left for long that county which the associations of his early life had endeared to him. It is certain that in 1622 he was living on a small property of his own in Newton Stacy, but a mile from his old parish of Wherwell; and in the State Papers of 1635 (Domestic Series) we find a petition from Sir Robert Paine, Church Warden of Barton Stacy, Hants, to the effect that some of his tenants, "having been formerly misled by Stephen Bachelor, a notorious inconformist, had demolished a consecrated chapel at Newton Stacy," etc.

But while Bachelor was living in Hampshire and preaching the Puritan faith, the Company of Husbandmen was forming, and they conceived the plan of sending a band of settlers into New England to propagate their ideas. We may believe that, hearing of Bachelor's fame, they asked him to become their pastor; and, though seventy years of age, he at once seized the opportunity and cast in his lot with theirs. His friend John Winthrop was then arranging for his own settlement in New England, and Bachelor doubtless dreamed of establishing there his Colony of Husbandmen, in an Arcadia of religious freedom. Sir Ferdinando Gorges was the principal figure in the "Council of Plymouth," and was one of King James's grantees of vast estates in the New World. To Gorges the Plough Company turned, and on June 26th, 1630, they obtained by patent a tract of land, the best description of which is given as follows in an Abstract of Title prepared in 1686 by George Turfrey, attorney for the heirs of Col. Alexander Rigby:—

"The Earle of Warwick and Sir Ferdinando Gorges, for themselves and the rest of the Councell of Plimouth by indents dated 26 June the 6 year of the raigne of Charles I, grant unto Bryan Binckes, John Dye, John Smith, and others their associates two Islands in the River Sagedahock near the South side thereof about sixty miles from the sea, and also a tract containing forty miles in length and forty miles in breadth upon the South side of the River Sagedahock, with all Bayes, Rivers, Ports, Inletts, etc., together with all Royalties and Privileges within the precincts thereof."

The terms of this patent were broad, and, as in other cases, infringed on later grants, causing much litigation. A literal interpretation of the Plough Patent would include a large and valuable tract in South-Eastern Maine, taking in the present city of Portland. Armed with this authority the Company bought a small ship, equipped it with ordnance and provisions, and sent its first load of colonists to the new province. Ten or twelve of the "Company of the Plough" formed this little band. They probably reached the Sagadahock in the winter of 1630-1, and found the land wild and sterile. Disheartened at the prospect, they made a feeble attempt at settling there, but after a few weeks or months they gave up the idea, and embarked again in their little vessel for the more fertile and prosperous settlements near Boston. The first record of them is in Winthrop's History, dated July 6th, 1631:—"A small ship of 60 tons arrived at Natascot, Mr. Graves, master. She brought ten passengers from London. They came with a patent for Sagadahock, but, not liking the place, they came hither. Their ship drew ten feet, and went up to Watertown; but she ran on ground twice by the way. These were the Company called 'The Husbandmen' and their ship called The Plough." Thus far the original entry in Winthrop's journal; but a later hand (perhaps his own in after years), added this opprobrium,—“Most of them proved familists and vanished away.” That they were “familists” in the offensive German sense, we have no proof except this entry, but perhaps this term may give a clue to the special religious organization which should have bound the Husbandmen together but did not. Their small ship, The Plough, after visiting Watertown, dropped back to Charlestown, started thence for the West Indies, but returned after three weeks, “so broke,” Winthrop says, “she could not return home.”

Thus the summer of 1631 found the first colonists of The Plough in the Massachusetts Bay, their ship worthless and their ideas of settlement abandoned.

In the meantime the Company in London, imagining that all had gone well with their brethren in New England, went on vigorously with the work. Stephen Bachiler threw all his influence into the scale, and enlisted some of his Hampshire parishioners and adherents as possible members of the Company. His efforts at this time may have produced the grant of arms referred to in Silvanus Morgan's “Sphere of Gentry” of 1661, one of the most rare and fantastic of early heraldic works. This author says that the arms, “Vert, a plough in fesse; in base the sun rising, Or,” “appertain to Stephen Bachelor, the first pastor of the Church of Ligonía in New England; which bearing was answerable to his profession in plowing up the fallow ground of their hearts, and the Sun, appearing in that part of the World, symbolically alluded to his motto ‘Sol Justitiæ Exoritur.’” It is worth noting that Morgan in the same volume devotes some space to a handsome plate of the arms of the London Pryaulx family, Bachiler's connections. Among the prospective members of the Plough Company probably brought in by Bachiler was a near kinsman, RICHARD DUMMER, of Bishopstoke, Hants, son of John Pyldrin als. Dummer, of Swathling, Hants, who was a wealthy yeoman or gentleman. A man of substance, Dummer's name gave strength to the Plough Company.

For some unexplained reason the Company in London had not heard by March, 1632, of the failure of their first colony, and we find them pushing the work and straining their narrow fortunes to make it a success. Bachiler had sold his lands in Newton Stacy and invested the proceeds in his new venture. Early in March the second party of Colonists left England, part in the Whale, which reached Boston May 26th, 1632, bringing Richard Dummer, Nathaniel Harris, John Smith (son of Francis Smith, a miller), Anthony Jupe, Ann Smith (wife of John Smith who came in The Plough) and her daughter, and Nathaniel Merriman, son of George Merriman of London. The William and Francis, which left London March 9th, 1632, and reached Boston June 5th, 1632; brought among its sixty passengers Stephen Bachiler and his wife, his grandchild, Nathaniel Bachiler, his three Samborne grandchildren, and several of his Hampshire adherents. It also brought a shipment of Company goods, as will appear later, and two more Company men, Thomas Payne of Sandwich, and John Bannister, a Yorkshireman. Bachiler brought with him a letter from the London Company, which I print in full as giving minute particulars of the Colonization.

Grace, Mercy and Peace be multiplied forever.

CHRISTIAN BRETHREN: MR. CRISPE, JOHN CERMEN, JOHN SMYTH AND THE REST OF OUR SOCIETY:

We, as members of the same body send greeting in the name of our Lord and Saviour, hoping and wishing your health as our own; and as at this time we all are, thanks be unto God. Many things we have to write you of but our time hath been so taken up with forwarding, helping and providing things fitting for these our brethren that are now to come unto you that we shall not possibly experience or put that to ink and paper which we desired; we hope that they will relate to you anything material that we fail to write.

And first let us not forget to remember you of your and our duty, that we return humble and hearty thanks unto Almighty God, that hath filled the heart of our reverend pastor so full of zeal, of love and extraordinary affection towards our poor society. Notwithstanding all the opposition, all the subtle persuasions of abundance of opposers that have been stirred up against us partly through self-love not affecting the general servitude and partly through that untimely breach of our brother Cerman, yet he remaineth constant,—persuading and exhorting,—yea and as much as in him lyeth, constraining all that love him to join together with this society. And seeing the Company is not liable to bear his charge over, he hath strained himself to provide provision for himself and his family, and hath done his utmost endeavor to help over as many as he possibly can, for your further strength and encouragement. And, although it may be if he had stayed one year longer you might have been better provided to have received him, yet through his great care of all your good he will by no means stay longer from you. O let us not forget this unspeakable mercy of God towards us. We hope the Lord will make him an especial instrument to unite you all in true love to God and unto one another; which will be our strongest walls and bulwarks of defence against all our enemies. And we hope you will not forget to show your love unto him and to take notice of the charges he is now at, and to appoint for him and his, as he shall desire, such shares and parts of shares as shall belong unto his for the charges; and that his man-servant and his maid-servant may be received as members of the Company and have such shares or parts as in that case provided for every member. As for his neighbors that now come with him, they promise all to join with you, but because they do desire first to see how you agree together in love they are not joined to our body; and the Lord of his mercy grant that there may be no occasion on your parts but they may join with you. Mr. Dummer's promise is also to join with you if there be any reason for it. The Lord unite you all together; then shall you put to shame and silence many that do now shamefully rise up against us.

Thomas Juge hath also sent you a pledge of his own coming in due time,—his eldest son, upon his last £20 in goods and moneys dispersed for the Company's use. There is also Nathaniel Harrese which we have sent you upon a new adventure of £10 by his father, who is now a Sargeant of the Roale and a member of the Company. There is also John Smyth, son of Francis Smyth, miller, upon a new adventure of £10 by one John Asten, millman; and there is Nathaniel Merreman upon the adventure of Petter Wouster, being now made up to £10; all which being members of the Company according to their years and abilities, we desire you to receive them and employ them. Two of them are very able to work and we hope you will find them willing. We desire that they should be put to it according to their abilities, and the other two also according to their strength we desire they should be employed. There is also Ann Smith, our brother John Smith's wife and her daughter; she, being encouraged by Mr. Dummer's promise to give her her passage in part, hath resolved to go unto her husband, whom we cannot deny, and have put her upon the old adventure of Mr. Dummer for herself and her daughter.

All these are coming in the Whale with Mr. Dummer; they are all furnished with bedding and apparel very sufficiently, and, being all able to labour, we hope will be helpful to the Company. There is also one Thomas Payne of Sandwige, experienced in the making of salt, which hath brought in £10 and is coming in the William and Francis whom we desire you to receive as a member of our company; only, in regard that he hath a wife and four small children, which he desireth to be transported 12 months hence,—we have only conditionally received him,—that if between this and that time you do find that he will not be a more help unto the Company than his charge will be hinderance, and if he cannot bring in £20 for his wife and children, that then, he having worked one year for his passage the Company shall give him back his £10 again and so let him shift for himself.

Some provision for these we have sent you; what provision you also want we desire you to take of Mr. Dummer and send us over your commodities, that we may pay both for that and some old debts which we have made hard shift for unto this time. Pray neglect not but by what messenger soever Mr. Thomas, master of the William and Francis doth send over his letters to have his freight paid let us by the same messenger if not before receive some goods from you, for we were constrained to make use of the tonnage money of 20 passengers to pay old debts, until a certificate be sent over.

The goods you shall receive in the William and Francis that is the Company's is—

4 hogsheads pease, which cost, cask and all ...	6	5	0
The cask is marked with two plows marked on one head, whereas all other goods have one plow on each head.
And 12 yards of broadcloth at 5s. 6d. comes unto ...	3	6	0
200 yards of list at 7s. 6d. per 100 (which list we thought it may be good to make Indian Breeches or blankets of; I pray send word if it be a commodity worth sending more of) ...	15	0
1 fries coat, 1 pr. breeches ...	19	0

These goods are packed up into hogsheads amongst some of Mr. Bachiller's goods and some things of Thomas Jupe which he hath sent upon his particular adventure; so soon as you can sell them there is to the value of £10 ad mone (sic) as you will see by his particular letters. Mr. Harding hath sent also a parcel of commodities upon his particular, as by his letter you shall receive directions.

We have sent you notice by Mr. Allerton, and we hope you have long since received it, that we have had much to do about our patent; and that there was one Bradshaw that had procured letters patent for a part (as we supposed) of our former grant; and so we think still, but he and Sir Ferdinando think it is not in our bounds. He was frustrate of his first purpose of coming over, but is now joined with two very able captains and merchants, who will set him over, and we suppose will be there as soon as this ship if not before. We cannot possibly relate the labour and trouble we have had to establish our former grant; many rough words we have had from Sir Ferdinando at the first and to this hour he doth affirm that he never gave consent that you should have above 40 miles in length and 20 in breadth and saith that his own hand is not to your patent, if it have any more. So we have shown our good wills and have procured his love and many promises that we shall have no wrong. We bestowed a sugar-loaf upon him of some 16 shillings' price, and he hath promised to do us all the good he can. We can procure nothing under his hand, but in our hearing he gave order unto Mr. Ayres to write unto Captain Neale of Pascatoway, that Bradshaw and we might be bounded, that we may not trouble each other; and hath given the Captain command to search your patent; what it is you have under my Lord's hand and his. This controversy must be ended between yourselves and such governors of their Pemaquid as they have appointed.

We have given Sir Ferdinando this reason why we desired so large a patent,—because that the greatest part of it was not habitable, being rock, where no man could live; and he answered that we should doubt not but he allowed enough for us all, and in the best part of it, according to our desire; but if we should have as much as we say they have granted, then do we include divers of their former plantations, which they never intended. We shall pray to God to direct you and to help you; this business doth require the assistance of all of you to join together in one; we hope the Lord in mercy will so dispose of it.

We have sent in the Whale—

70 stone of ocum at 10d. and the cartage	...	2 19 8
3 cwt. of cassel, all charges is	...	1 14 0
1 firkin of flour of 5 pecks and a firkin of pease		14 0

There is also a poor Yorkshire man;—his name is John Banester,—he hath made such extraordinary moan to come over that Mr. Bachiler and Mr. Dummer have had compassion upon him and paid for his passage. If you think that you will be able to receive him, and do so for the good of it, we do then desire you to let him be the Company's servant, and put him to such employment as you think good, and upon such conditions as you think fit.

Goodman Tamadge and his wife take it very unkindly that you should keep his malt and not let his son have a small quantity of plateware at his request, to be paid at return. How you will answer this unkindness we know not; we do desire you to give no occasions for such unkindness. Here is now the people themselves come unto you we assure you they be very honest plain downright-dealing people; if they find you loving and kind and upright towards them, then will you have their company,—if not I pray consider you will not only lose them, but wonderful discouragement it will be to others for time to come.

It may be upon first view you may suppose them to be a charge, in regard the men look aged and the children young but and by the next ship you will receive our account for the whole year; and so the Lord protect you and defend you for ever and ever.

Your loving brethren,

JOHN DYE
THOMAS JUPE
GRACE HARDWIN
JOHN ROACH.

The Massachusetts Colony Court had already (October 18th, 1631), ordered that "there should be taken out of the estate of Mr. Crispe and his Company the sum of £12 ls. 5d., and delivered to John Kirman as his proper goods, and that the whole estate be inventoried, whereof the said John Kirman is to have an eighth part." On the arrival of Dummer and Bachiler, the Court further directed (June 5th, 1632) "That the goods of the Company of Husbandmen shall be inventoried by the Beadle, and preserved for the use and benefit of the said Company." We may imagine from this that Crispe, Bryan Binckes, Peter Johnson, with the other one or two of the original emigrants of The Plough ship had held together in Boston until Dummer and Bachiler came over. But now the whole matter was discussed, the assets of the Company turned over to the Courts, and Crispe probably started back for England to acquaint the London members with the failure of the Colony. On July 3rd, 1632, three orders were entered by the Court—first, that John Smith (the younger, son of Francis) be apprenticed to Rev. John Wilson; second, that Bryan Binckes and Peter Johnson should bind themselves in £10 that they should not depart out of Massachusetts without leave from the Governor (Winthrop), and should be ready to attend upon the Court when called, to account for the Company's goods in their hands; third, that John Smith should likewise be bound in £10 to be accountable for the Company's goods remaining in his hands.

Dummer and Carman settled in Roxbury, under Rev. John Eliot. Bachiler and his little flock established themselves in Lynn; Binckes and Johnson went to Virginia; and the next record of the Company appears from the following letter, apparently signed by all the London members and sent as soon as Crispe had reported the condition of affairs:—

London, Dec. 1, 1632.

TO THE RIGHT WORSHIPFUL GOVERNOR OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Grace, mercy and peace be multiplied.

RIGHT WORSHIPFUL SIR:

Whereas there has come over from New England of late divers reports of the harsh dealing of Master Dummer against our loving brethren, Bryan Binckes, Petter Johnson and John Smyth, in that he hath not only taken from them that which was left them for their maintenance, by the Company, but also retained that which we sent; and do keep in their hands all that there is left of the Company's and retain it, contrary to that order that we sent over by Master Allerton. And whereas we have received, the day before the writing hereof one letter from John Smyth which doth for the main part justify that which we have heard, and also another from Master Bachiller not denying the same; and having received encouragement by divers that there is justice to be had, we therefore appeal to you for justice.

There is other letters also sent in this ship, which were written three weeks before this, wherein we did by all the power that we have command them to deliver our goods back again to be disposed according to the order of the Company. But being now certified that Bryan Binckes and Petter Johnson are gone to Virginia according to the Company's order, we desire you that whatsoever there is left of the Company's estate should be there sold and returned into England either in bills of exchange or in merchantable notes, unto John Dye, dwelling in Fillpot Lane, or unto John Roach, Grace Harding or Thomas Juppe, dwelling in Crooked Lane.

These things that are there of the Company's to our knowledge are these,—

cables and anchors,—which stand us here in England
little less than	160 0 0
There is also a parcel of . . . izion sent by Mr.
Allerton	30 0 0
A parcel of pease	13 0 0
And a parcel of broadcloth and a coat and list	5 10 0
And a parcel of platewares, of Thomas Juppe's own particular adventure	11 16 8
And a parcel of Master Harding's goods	16 0 0
There was also a parcel of the Company's goods
vetaced by one Muzze	10 0 0

There is much other goods there of the Company's which we cannot give you notice of. We desire you to call John Smyth to account. By his own letter he hath £20 worth of the Company's estate which, although we desire not that it should be presently taken from him, because we pity his poor estate, yet we refer it unto your wise consideration to order it to be disposed towards the payment of Master Bachiller if you see fit, unto whom we do owe £60; it was something more, but the rest we have laid out for him in his freight to the value of £7. We therefore desire that he should be paid £60.

There is goods also to the value of £40, as we are informed, that Master Dummer hath taken from Bryan Binckes and Petter Johnson. There is also the old ship and divers debts owing us which we desire you to call John Smyth to account for. And for as much as there is owing £200 by the Company in London upon bond upon our security, and is yearly a great burden unto us, we desire you therefore that our goods may not longer be there retained; for the debts due upon bond the Company's goods must pay; although we lose all, let them not dishonour God and disgrace religion.

There hath been a great deal of complaint and much evil surmizing about the dealing of our brethren departed to Virginia; but we wish we may have no worse from thence; we have fair account and good reason for what they did; and for profit or loss, God's will be done. We hope that that part of the estate carried away to Virginia will be as well improved for all the company, according to their proportion as they will improve their own that do so surmise of their brethren; time will try all things.

We desire you further to take notice that when Master Bachiller doubled his adventure and made it £100 it was upon condition that we and Master Dummer should do likewise; we did double our adventure, yet after some further consideration, Mr. Dummer sent his money into the hands of a friend that would not deliver it to us without bond to pay it again. Now, Mr. Dummer promising as well as we to double his adventure and to have a part of the loss (if it so fall out) as this enclosed letter will testify, being the letter of his own hand, sent with the money, we desire to refer ourselves to you there to judge what is fit for him to have. If to venture it as we are constrained to do, then at the end of the term of years we shall be accountable; at the least we think he should bear a part of the loss as well as we. We hope you will be pleased to take this pains for us to put an end to this controversy that is a greater grief unto us than all those other crosses that have befallen us.

There was in all £1,400 of joint stock; of this but the value of £250 carried to Virginia, according to your prising when you paid Carman. We leave all to your Christian wisdom; the Lord direct you. And so we rest:

Your Christian friends, for ourselves and the rest of the Company of Husbandmen,

JOH: ROBINSON	JOH: CRISPE
DANL. BINCKES	JOHN ROACH
ROGER BINCKES	GRACE HARDWIN
NATH'EL WHETHAM	THO: JUPE
HENRY FFOWKES	JOH: DYE

BRYAN KIPLING.

The "Harsh dealing of Master Dummer" here referred to probably means that he had, to secure the investment of himself and Bachiler, seized on the patent and what assets the Company had. No Court proceeding appears to have followed the receipt of this letter, but probably Winthrop's justice and wisdom arranged an equitable division of the property.

Bachiler had, in the fall of 1632, come under the displeasure of the Court for some heresies of doctrine. He soon found the Massachusetts Puritans were as rigid in their tenets of religion as the English Church, and they ordered that he "forbear exercising his gifts as a pastor" temporarily. Early in 1633 this prohibition was removed and on June 3rd of that year we find him writing to Winthrop as follows to protest against an unjust seizure of part of the Company's goods.

TO THE RIGHT WORSHIPFUL, MY VERY LOVING FRIEND AND OUR GOVERNOR, AT HIS HOUSE IN BOSTON, THESE:

The Wisdom of God's spirit direct and guide you in all your affairs, now and forever. Amen.

RIGHT WORSHIPFUL AND MY LOVING FRIEND, MR. GOVERNOR:

I have sent you this enclosed letter from our Company at London to that part of our Company which was then supposed to be here the last year, to certify to you that the four hogsheds of pease (which are assigned to my brother Wilson in the right of the youth that is with him) do no way belong to him, but to me and the rest of our Company,—and, to speak the truth, to me only and properly, by reason of the Company's debt to me which all that I have (by your favour) seized on will not countervayle my debt by a great deal, in case I could sell the goods presently, which I know not how long they will lie and (be) worse and worse before they may be any satisfaction to me.

The goods which are looked after for the boy came not in the ship wherein these pease came, but, as I take it, in the Whale, if any were sent. Beside these pease, coming with my goods in the William and Francis (the ship wherein I came) were the 12 yards of cloth mentioned in the letter, and 200 yards of list, etc. I paid both for the tonnage of them to the shipmaster and for the carrying of them from the ship to New Town; the cloth also and the list, I took into my keeping and wear of it. And, wrapping up the letter with many others, forgot to seize upon the pease till within these 8 or 9 days, when, reading over the letter for some cause or other occasion, I lit upon that passage which mentioneth the pease and the cloth of list, etc., whereupon I demanded of my wife, "What became of these pease mentioned?" She answered,—“Certainly they are the pease which lie unowned at New Town,” whereupon I sent to compare the marks of the letter with the marks upon the pease hogsheds, and found them perfectly to agree; and there understood that the pease, for want of an owner, were, by your authority, committed to my brother to be disposed of in right of his servant; and that this day, being the third of this fourth month, my brother sent me this message, that, forasmuch as these pease were assigned to him by the authority of your Worship and the Court—though he saw the contents of this letter—he would sell them and stand answerable for the money that they yield.

My request is therefore unto you that, forasmuch as the pease do clearly appear to be no goods of the boy's, but to belong to our Company and that I lay claim to them as to the rest, not in respect of my adventure, but for the debt of near an hundred pounds which I lent the Company in as good gold as can be weighed with scales; and that I paid both for the tonnage and freightage of them; and only through forgetfulness left them thus long; and divers other considerations of reason which I forbear for tediousness to urge; that you would be pleased to prevent the withholding of them from the right owners,—at least to stay the sale of them, forasmuch as I have even disposed of part of them and the residue are exceedingly wanting in mine own congregation, who, upon the understanding of the business thus coming to light, have been earnest with me for them, and I have accordingly granted their requests.

There being equity in all that I require, as I trust will appear upon the sight of that passage in the letter, I trust I shall not doubt of your uprightness toward me, and between my brother and me, whose care for his servant I do much approve, though I cannot see the means which he useth to recover his servant's doubtful goods to be so right as I could wish. For my part, were it my case, as it is his, I should easily yield upon the sight of such evidence as I conceive doth appear, that the goods can no way belong to him.

One thing more; whereas I understand that you put apart the last day of this week for inquiry of God to discover a great and difficult secret, we will, by God's grace, assist you upon that day in like manner. And thus, with my loving service and Christian respect unto you; with mine and my wife's hearty salutations to your blessed and beloved yoke-fellow, I cease any further to trouble you, and rest at your service and commandment in Christ, His most unworthy servant,

STEPHEN BACHILER.

Sir,—I understand since the writing of my letter that it is conceived that the goods of the boy came wholly or in part to me,—which if it may but probably appear, I will make 7 fold satisfaction; verily it is not so. Neither did I (but my wife) meddle with mine own goods; and my wife saith from Mrs. Smyth of Watertown that the boy's father and an uncle of his or some such friend, did venture £10 into the Company with the boy. So that I cannot conceive how any such goods should be ex . . . d; but for my part I claime them and these goods belonging to our Company.

No further mention of the Plough Company appears on the Massachusetts Court Records, except that on April 7th, 1635, Captain Traske was ordered "to pay to John Kerman out of the estate of the Company of Husbandmen the sum of £24 11s. 5d., being the remainder of the eighth part given by the Court to Kerman," it being noted that if the total assets of the Company failed to equal £250, Kerman was to make restitution.

Dummer took an active part in the affairs of the Massachusetts Colony. He was an adherent of Sir Henry Vane, and in 1636 was "disarmed" for his espousal of the Antinomian ideas of Anne Hutchinson, and moved to Newbury. All this time Dummer seems to have held the Plough Patent, but in 1638, when he returned to England to bring to America his brother, nephew and niece, he took the patent with him, and, we presume, delivered it to the remaining members of the Company. In a petition to the Massachusetts General Court in 1683, Jeremy Dummer stated that "his father, Richard Dummer, was wholly intrusted with the Plough Patent and the management of sundry concerns relating to the same, by virtue of a power derived from the patentees; and thereafter (in 1638) the said Patent being ordered home for England, the patentees granted him 800 acres and more, laid out at Casco Bay."

Between 1632 and 1638 the terms of the Plough Patent were discovered by George Cleeve, an ambitious man who early settled on Casco Bay. He found that the original patentees had abandoned the colony, and thereupon induced them to sell their grant. The Commonwealth party was then dominant in England, and Gorges was in disfavor. A Puritan Commander, Alexander Rigby, purchased the Patent, and in 1643 appointed Cleeve as his Deputy-Lieutenant of the Province of Lygonia.

This transaction is thus described in the Abstract of Title above referred to as drawn up by Turfrey:—"John Dye and John Smyth, Thomas Jupe and others, survivors of Bryan Binckes and others their associates, do on the 7 of April, 1643, grant unto Alexander Rigby of Rigby in Lancashire, the said Province of Ligoniam, etc. The said Alexander Rigby makes several leases and grants of several parcels of land within the said Province of Ligoniam; and expends valuable sums of money; and draws up constitutions which were on the 30 of July, 1644, confirmed by the Earl of Warwick and others, by which Alexander Rigby and his heirs and assigns are appointed Presidents of the Province of Ligoniam."

Cleeve attempted to enforce these claims upon the Casco settlers and to attach Bachiler and Dummer to his cause by asking the former to become pastor of the settlement on Casco Bay; but he met with determined opposition from the Massachusetts authorities, who desired control of the whole Province of Maine. The case was appealed to England, and the result appears thus in Turfrey's Abstract:—"There arising some difference as to bounds between Alexander Rigby and John Gorges, son and heir of Sir Ferdinando Gorges, the same was heard by the Earl of Warwick and the then Commissioner for settling affairs of foreign plantations, and they did, by deed in writing, 27 March 1646, adjudge that the title of the Province of Ligoniam was in the said Rigby and his heirs and all the inhabitants were commanded to submit to the government and jurisdiction of the said Rigby."

Continued opposition was made, and resulted in much litigation, until the whole Province of Maine was granted to Massachusetts in 1686. This finally wiped out the Plough Patent, which disappears from view. Ill success seems to have been the fate of most of the companies formed for colonizing New England. Chalmers and Egerton, in their Histories of British Colonies dwell at some length on this fact. Gorges' and Mason's colonies likewise failed, so that the luckless Plough Colony had abundance of company in its misfortunes.

Having thus recited the history of the Patent, let us turn to the individual members and colonists of the Company and trace what little is known of them.

We left Bachiler in Lynn, where he set up a church for himself and the few adherents who had followed him to the New World. Here he found his daughter Theodate and her husband, Christopher Hussey, who had come to America in 1631. After four years of conflict with the Bay authorities, Bachiler moved to Ipswich and then to Newbury, having "laid down the ministry." At Newbury were his kinsmen Dummer and Hussey, and others from Bachiler's part of England; and after two years this stout old Dissenter, at the age of 80 conceived the idea of starting a plantation of his own a day's march further north. Accordingly, in 1638-9, the plantation was begun, and in 1639, at Bachiler's request and in honour of the English city of Southampton, it was called Hampton. Among the new settlers were many Suffolk men, and one of these, Timothy Dalton, A.M. of St. John's College, Cambridge, was chosen as Bachiler's assistant. Open conflict resulted between these two men, both able and obstinate. The culmination of the whole matter was a charge of immorality made, in 1641, against Bachiler. This charge—so difficult to disprove, so easily made—was probably without real foundation, but it resulted in Bachiler's excommunication. He was opposed to the existing authorities, was a man of great ability and iron will, outspoken and passionate; they feared him, and wreaked their vengeance on him. Immediately he was urged by two other parishes to become their pastor, but he refused to go until, by public trial, he was vindicated. Writing to Governor Winthrop late in 1643, he said:

"I see not how I can depart hence" (that is from Hampton, to accept one of the calls he had received, to Casco and to Exeter), "till I have, or God for me, cleared and vindicated the cause and wrongs I have suffered of the church I yet live in; that is, from the Teacher, who hath done all and been the cause of all the dishonor that hath accrued to God, shame to myself, and grief to all God's people, by his irregular proceedings and abuse of the power of the church in his hand,—by the major part cleaving to him, being his countrymen and acquaintance in old England. My cause, though looked slightly into by diverse Elders and brethren, could never come to a judicial searching forth of things, and an impartial trial of his allegations and my defence; which, if yet they might, I am confident before God, upon certain knowledge and due proof before yourselves the Teacher's act of his excommunicating me (such as I am, to say no more of myself), would prove the foulest matter,—both for the cause alleged of that excommunication, and the impulsive cause,—even wrath and revenge. Also, the manner of all his proceeding throughout, to the very end, and lastly his keeping me still under bonds,—and much worse than here I may mention for divers causes,—than ever was committed against any member of a church. Neglecting of the complaints of the afflicted in such a State,—wherein Magistrates, Elders, and brethren all are in the sincerest manner set to find out sin, and search into the complaints of the poor,—not knowing father, nor mother, church nor Elder,—in such a State, I say,—in such a wine-cellar to find such a cockatrice, and not to kill him,—to have such monstrous proceedings passed over, without due justice,—this again stirs up my spirit to seek for a writ ad melius inquirendum. Towards which the enclosed letter tendeth, as you may perceive. Yet if your wisdoms shall judge it more safe and reasonable to refer all my wrongs (conceived) to God's own judgment, I can submit myself to be overruled by you. To conclude,—if the Apostle's words be objected, that this is thanksworthy if a man for conscience' sake shall endure grief, suffering wrongfully,—and therefore I ought to endure, without seeking any redress or justice against the offender,—I profess it was more absolutely necessary so to suffer, when the Church had no civil power to seek unto, than in such a land of righteousness as our New England is."

This public hearing was denied him, and though his excommunication was soon withdrawn, he left Hampton, broken down with the weight of his persecutions. As an evidence of the respect in which he was held, he was just before this chosen referee in a dispute between Trelawney and Cleeve as to boundaries in Maine. The Rev. Robert Jordan, writing to an English friend about the trial, says:—"Mr. Stephen Bachiler was, I must say, a grave, reverend and a good man; but whether more inclined to justice or mercy, or whether carried aside by secret insinuations, I must refer to your own judgment. Sure I am that Cleeve is well nigh able to disable the wisest brain." Considering that this letter, written July 31st, 1642, is that of the defeated party, and that Jordan was well placed to know what his real character was, a year after the slanders against him, there could be few testimonials more convincing.

Bachiler settled in Portsmouth and contracted an unfortunate third marriage, at the age of 86, with a woman of 40. He soon discovered the character of this adventuress, and prayed for a divorce, which the Massachusetts authorities with great injustice denied.

After twenty years of life in New England, Bachiler found himself, at the age of 90, poor and dishonored. His effort to seek peace in America from the persecutions of the Bishops had brought him renewed conflict with a bitter and bigoted sect. His house, library and goods, had been destroyed by fire. The Plough Company, from which he had hoped so much, failed and cost him a large sum of money. He was linked to a woman whose immorality had been proved in Court, but from whom he could not obtain a divorce. He determined to return to England and end his days there, and left America in 1654 with his grandson Stephen Samborne. Tradition says he died at Hackney in 1660.

Returning to the other members of the Plough Company, the following record gives in alphabetical order the names of all whom we know to have been of that connection, and recites all that is found concerning them.

AUSTEN, JOHN. An English "millman." Apparently a member of the Company. Sent over John Smyth the younger in 1632.

BANISTER, JOHN. "A poor Yorkshire man"; sent in William and Francis, 1632, by Bachiler and Dummer.

BINCKES, BRYAN. Perhaps an original patentee; certainly a colonist in The Plough in 1630. Went to Virginia in 1632. Probably a brother of the two next mentioned, perhaps a London man (the name is found in London Registers).

BINCKES, DANIEL. Signed the second Company letter printed above.

BINCKES, ROGER. Signed the second Company letter printed above. (Query. Is he the Roger Binckes who was a Paymaster in Cromwell's army?)

CARMAN, or KERMAN, JOHN. An original colonist on The Plough, 1630. Settled in Roxbury, and was deputy to Massachusetts Court, 1635 and 1636. Moved to Hempstead, L. I. Obtained from the Massachusetts Court one-eighth of the Company's goods.

CRISPE, JOHN. An original member and patentee. Came over in The Plough 1630, and returned in 1632 to England. Signed the second Company letter printed above. (Query. Was he the John Crispe, a relative of Sir Nicholas Crispe, who was afterwards a merchant adventurer to Africa?)

DYE, JOHN. An original member and patentee; but never came to America. A London merchant, living in Philpot Lane near the headquarters of the Virginia Company. Signed both the Company's letters printed herein. Probably the John Dye, whose name appears in the Registers of St. Thomas the Apostle. Mentioned in will of Nicholas Jupe, 1653.

FLOWKES, HENRY. Signed the second Company letter printed above.

HARDWIN, GRACE. An original member. Signed both Company letters printed above. A wax-chandler, living in Crooked Lane. He and his wife are mentioned in will of Mildred Hitch.

HARRIS, NATHANIEL. Sent to New England in the Whale, 1632, by his father, "a Sergeant of the Rolle and a member of the Company." No further record.

JOHNSON, PETER. An original colonist on The Plough, 1630. Went to Virginia in 1632.

JUPE, ANTHONY. Son of Thomas Jupe. Came over in the Whale, 1632. Lived in Boston with his uncle, Captain Robert Keayne, founder of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston. Mentioned in will of his uncle, Nicholas Jupe of London, 1653, and in the will of Capt. Keayne.

JUPE, THOMAS. A London merchant, living in Crooked Lane ; perhaps of the Cornwall family of Jope. Signed both the Company letters printed herein. Married Grace, sister of Captain Robert Keayne of Boston. Sent his son Anthony to New England in 1632. At their father's death all three children of Thomas Jupe came to live with their uncle, Capt. Keayne.

KIPLING, BRYAN. Signed the second Company letter printed above.

MERRIMAN, NATHANIEL. Son of George Merriman, of London, cooper. Came to New England on the Whale. Moved to Wallingford, Conn., and became a prominent settler there.

PAYNE, THOMAS. Of Sandwich, Kent. A salt maker. Came in William and Francis, 1632. Settled in Lynn, Mass.

ROACH or ROCH, JOHN. Signed both the Company letters printed herein. Lived in Crooked Lane.

ROBINSON, JOHN. Signed both the Company letters printed above.

SMITH, JOHN the elder. An original colonist on The Plough, 1630. Wife Ann and daughter came on the Whale, 1632. Vanishes among the many other Smiths.

SMITH, JOHN the younger. Son of Francis Smith, miller. Came on the Whale, 1632. Servant to Rev. J. Wilson in Watertown.

TALMAGE, WILLIAM. An original colonist on The Plough, 1630. Son of Thomas Talmage, of Hants, and nephew of John Talmage, of Newton Stacy, Hants, probably a parishioner of Stephen Bachiler. Settled in Roxbury and Lynn, Mass.

WHETHAM, NATHANIEL. Signed the second Company letter printed above.

WOOSTER, PETER. A member of the Company ; sent Nathaniel Merriman to New England in 1632.

THE GENEALOGIST'S GUIDE. By George W. Marshall, LL.D., Rouge Croix Pursuivant of Arms. Privately printed for the Author by Billing and Sons, Guildford, 1903.

In his preface to this the latest edition of the Genealogist's Guide, the author justly claims that it has been accepted by the public as a useful work of reference. He might with truth have added that no practical genealogist can afford to be without it. To anyone who desires to compile a family history it is indispensable that he should know how far others have travelled on the same road, and as printed pedigrees are often hidden away in the most unlikely tomes, a pioneer of some sort is an absolute necessity. It is exactly here that the Genealogist's Guide supplies a want which until its first appearance had long been felt. A word of caution may not come amiss. There is a danger that the student of genealogy may learn to depend too entirely on a work of this character, and shirk the task of searching independently for himself the calendars of our great public libraries, tiresome and confusing as they too often are.

By a curious omission the fact that this is the fourth edition does not appear either on the title page or in the preface. To those who have been in the habit of frequently consulting the third edition it is a relief to find that the cumbersome supplement, nearly as large as the book itself, has been incorporated into the body of the work, a manifest improvement. The Guide now contains upwards of 87,000 references to pedigrees, which will give an idea of the labour involved in its compilation. Dr. Marshall adheres to his rule of including all books dealing with pedigrees which have three generations in the male line, good, bad, or indifferent, making no attempt to point out which are worthy of attention and which are the reverse. This is as it should be, for after a very short experience the student learns to appraise at its true value a work which treats of a family in which he is himself interested.

The list of printed Parish Registers has been omitted from this edition, having been separately printed by the Parish Register Society.

It is a matter of some satisfaction to us to observe that nearly every one of the 871 pages of this most useful Guide contains a reference, and often many references, to The Genealogist.

BLAKE FAMILY RECORDS, 1300 TO 1600: A CHRONOLOGICAL CATALOGUE WITH COPIOUS NOTES AND GENEALOGIES OF MANY BRANCHES OF THE BLAKE FAMILY. First Series. By Martin J. Blake, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. London (Elliot Stock).

Ireland is not fruitful in records, and certainly County Galway is not the most likely spot in that "distressful" country from which to expect a treasure trove such as that which has here been carefully calendared. All the more welcome to antiquaries therefore will be this valuable and hitherto little known collection, and it is to be hoped that advantage will be taken of the owner's generous offer to allow the whole of the documents to be printed in extenso by the Irish Historical MSS. Commission. In the meantime he has done wisely to calendar them and thus call attention to their interest and importance. The whole collection, which has always been preserved in the same family, ranges over six centuries, the present series dealing only with the earlier portion. It consists of documents of a varied character—grants of land, mortgages, marriage dispensations and marriage settlements, wills, awards of arbitration and some ecclesiastical mandates and appointments to benefices. Attention is drawn in the preface to the fact that we have here several probates of wills granted by the Court of the Archdiocese of Tuam much earlier in date than those to be found in the Irish Public Record Office. The dispensations are often curious, and are a peculiar feature of Irish records. Mr. Blake has added explanatory and historical notes, and at the end some Blake pedigrees reprinted, with additions and corrections, from Burke. These include the lineage of the Lords Wallscourt and the baronets of the name. The volume is illustrated with photographs of the more important documents contained in the calendar. No index has been provided.

THE FIRST REGISTER BOOK OF THE PARISH OF OLD BUCKENHAM IN NORFOLK, 1560 TO 1649. Transcribed, Edited and Indexed by Walter Rye. Norwich (Agas H. Goose).

Mr. Rye's account of the condition in which he found this record is truly deplorable. He tells us that quite a third of the paper has rotted away from exposure to damp, and that a great part of the writing is perfectly illegible. It is not the least of Mr. Rye's many services to genealogy that he should have preserved to future generations what remains of this register book, and have run the probable risk of pecuniary loss in so doing. We know not if episcopal transcripts are in existence for this parish, and if so whether they have been consulted, but it is hardly likely that so obvious a means of solving difficulties in deciphering the register should have been neglected by so experienced a genealogist as Mr. Rye. During the period in question several gentle families had their habitation in Old Buckenham, notably the Knyvetts and Prestons; and in addition to these, among the names to which "gent.," "clerk" or "Mr." are attached we find Bentley, Brewster, Bunne, Downes, Harrison, Jolly, Pope and Wright. There are at least two omissions from the index—Agas on p. 73, and Ingram on p. 29. Under the heading "1631 (?)," occurs the following entry, "Jacob . . . gent., buried 9 March." This probably relates to Jacob Preston, who is stated in the Preston pedigree in Burke to have died in 1630, and to have been buried at Old Buckenham.

THE BOOK OF MATRICULATIONS AND DEGREES: A CATALOGUE OF THOSE WHO HAVE BEEN MATRICULATED OR ADMITTED TO ANY DEGREE IN THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE FROM 1851 TO 1900. Cambridge: at the University Press, 1902.

The first official calendar of the University of Cambridge was published in 1787, and recorded all degrees conferred to that date from the year 1659. Successive registraries have continued the list of graduates to 1884, when the late learned Dr. Luard, whose kindness and accessibility are still gratefully remembered by many, issued his Graduati Cantabrigienses. The present volume partly overlaps Dr. Luard's calendar, for it ranges from 1851 to 1900, but it is far more comprehensive, as it contains not only graduates, but also all persons who have matriculated at the University during the past half century. Another change for the better has been made in printing the names in English instead of Latin, a concession which has almost become a necessity since surnames are now so frequently given at baptism. The calendar has been edited by the Rev. J. F. E. Fanning, M.A., under the superintendence of the present learned registry, Mr. John Willis Clark. Genealogists must continue to regret that there is still no printed record of the admissions to all the Colleges at Cambridge, giving the parentage of the scholars, as does Mr. Joseph Foster's monumental Alumni Oxonienses.

THE DIGHTONS OF CLIFFORD CHAMBERS, AND THEIR DESCENDANTS.
By Conway Dighton. London (Elliot Stock).

There is much to interest the reader in this little book, especially that part of it which relates to the career of (Richard) Henry Dighton in India during a momentous period in the history of that country. The genealogical particulars are, however, given in a somewhat confusing manner, and would have been greatly elucidated by a tabular pedigree. At the end of the work there are some extracts relating to the name of Dighton from the Parish Register of Clifford Chambers, and a pedigree of the closely allied family of Dormer of Ascott and Rousham, the latter place being, by the way, spelt throughout Rousham. The illustrations include views of the old family mansion at Clifford Chambers, and portraits of members of the family. One of the latter represents Lieut.-Gen. John Dighton, E.I.C.S., 1761-1840, an officer of some distinction, and father of (Richard) Henry Dighton, to whom reference has been made above.

Notes and Queries.

SIR RICHARD FRY, KNT. (ante p. 214).—The facts of this enquiry are as follow. There certainly was a Richard Fry who married Joan Beaufort. His will was proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury (Holgrave, 18). It is dated 21 June 1504; he desires to be buried in the cemetery of the Friars Minors at Stanford (sic); he gives all his property moveable and immoveable (but no mention of what or where) to "Dña Johanna 'uxor mea,'" whom he appoints his executrix in conjunction with Robert Beckenfalbe and James Ajors "cognatum meum." The will was proved by said Johanna, relict and executrix, on 19 Oct. 1504. No title such as Sir or Knight is mentioned, nor any children.

So far as I have been able to investigate the matter there is nothing whatever to connect this Richard Fry with any particular family, whether of Devon or elsewhere, and what he had to do with the Friars Minors of "Stanford" is unknown. Stamford in co. Lincoln is probably intended, as this place had a cell of the Friars Minors.

Richard Fry is further mentioned in the Rolls of Parliament, vol. vi, p. 454, in a Bill dated 7 Henry VII (1491-2), to give Thomas Lovel the guardianship of Edmund, son of Thomas, late Lord Roos, which said Thomas had been attainted, 1 Edw. IV, and his estates forfeited. At the end of this Bill is a saving clause to various persons, among them to "Richard Frye, squier, and Jane his wife another daughter of said Duchess" [of Somerset].

Sir Richard Fry has been a puzzle for many years, for as far back as 1859 a gentleman in Notes and Queries (2nd series, vii, p. 129) asked for information concerning him, but unsuccessfully. After quoting the Parliamentary Roll above mentioned, he states that his name occurs as a guest at Thornbury Castle, Gloucestershire, during the feast of the Epiphany, 23 Henry VII (6 Jan. 1508), a description of which is given in Archæologia, xxv, p. 323, under the article "Household Expenses of Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham." We do indeed find a Richard Frye mentioned there, with three servants, but it can hardly be the same as the one now under discussion, since the date of these festivities is 1508, or some four years after the death of our Richard Fry.

Further references I have come across are as follow. In the Calendar of Letters and Papers, Foreign and Domestic, of the reign of Henry VIII, vol. i, p. 47, grant 347, there is a grant, 27 July 1509, to Joan Lady Howethe, widow of Richard Frye, daughter of Eleanor, late Duchess of Somerset, of certain lands in Worcestershire and elsewhere. And in vol. iii of same series, part i, p. 15, there is a grant, No. 55, in Jan. 1519 to Sir William Tyler of these same Worcestershire lands lately held by Joan, Lady Howeth, deceased (died 11 Aug. 1518), wife of John (sic) Frye.

Mention of our Richard Fry is also to be found in "Letters and Papers, Richard III to Henry VII" (Roll Series, vol. xxiv), vol. ii, p. 87, at a meeting at Calais in 1500 between Henry VII and the Archduke Philip of Austria (afterwards Philip I "le beau," King of Spain), where, quoting Harleian MSS. 1757, fo. 361, it says, "Hereafter ensueth the names of such Lords, Knights and other gentyls being about the King at his meeting with the Archduke of Austrige," and among the "Squyers for the body" will be found Richard Frie.

In Nichols' "Collectanea Topographica and Genealogica" are printed some tables of pedigrees shewing relationship among many of the nobility and gentry and the Blood Royal, compiled about the year 1500 (Harl. MSS. 1074, fo. 286), and in table xi will be found "Jane (daughter of Edmund, Duke of Somerset), first wedded to the Lord Howth of Ireland and after to Fry."

Respecting the Lady Joan Beaufort, she was the second daughter of Edmund Beaufort (grandson of John of Gaunt) and Eleanor, daughter of Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick. She married first Robert St. Lawrence, Lord Howth, Lord Chancellor of Ireland (1483-1486), who died in 1486, and secondly (said to be in 1489) Richard Fry, and she died 11 Aug. 1518, burial place unknown to me.

Above are the facts of the case, but they do not prove that Richard Fry was ancestor (either direct or collateral) of the Frys of Yarty. It must be remembered also that the tablet in Membury Church was erected as recently as 1742, by directions contained in the will of Frances Fry, daughter of the last heir male of this branch of the Devonshire Fry family, and therefore is by no means to be considered as proof of the connection with royalty it seems to imply. Possibly such a tradition had been current in the family, but as far as I have been able to examine the actual facts there is nothing to prove it.

I shall be as delighted as "Yartye" to find further information concerning this Richard Fry, and hope additional references will be found. Possibly an inspection of documents relating to the Friars Minors (or Franciscans) at Stamford might reveal something.

THE EARLY DEVEREUX PEDIGREE.—The following occur as witnesses to charters in Mr. J. H. Round's Calendar of Documents preserved in France :—

- [702] Charter of Richard, Duke of Normandy. A.D. (?) 1026.
Walterius vicecomes.
- [716] Charter of Robert, Count of Mortain, and Almodis his wife. A.D. 1087—1091. On the part of the Count, Robertus Guauterides.
- [233] Charter of Henry, Count of Eu. A.D. 1107. Guillelmo filio Walterii.

The first of these, Walterius vicecomes, is probably the Walter Evrus of the Book of Lacock (Cotton Coll. Brit. Mus.).

The second, Robertus Guauterides, I take to be Robert de Ebrouis, who was dead in 1130, when his son and heir Reginald claimed his lands in Cornwall (Pipe Roll, 1130).

The third, Guillelmus filius Walterii, is, I suggest, William de Everous (d. in 1110), whose wife, Helewys, was of kin to Walter de Laci. He occurs in Domesday Book (Heref and Glouc.). R. de Ebrouis (whom I suppose to be Richard) occurs also in Domesday Book (Norf., vol. ii, p. 222, in dorso), as does Roger de Ebrouis, subtenant of William de Scobies, who held in Herefordshire. These I consider to be sons of William, the ancestor of the Earls of Essex and Viscounts Hereford. The pedigree is given in Blount of Orleton's collection of Hereford Families, A.D., 1675.

HISTORY OF THE FAMILY
CO. STAFFORD.

BY MAJOR-GEN. THE HONBLE. GEORGE WROTTESLEY.

Supplement to "The Genealogist."

WILLIAM POLLARD & Co. LTD., PRINTERS, NORTH STREET.
1903,

In the case of forfeited estates one-fifth was reserved for the support of the families of the owners. All who had been in the personal service of the King and were bound to attend him, were paid at the lowest rate, viz., one-tenth.

An act of pardon was passed on the 24th February 1653, which freed from sequestration all estates not sequestered before the 1st December 1651.

An act of 31st October 1653 empowered all Recumbents to contract for two-thirds of their estates, which had been forfeited for religious opinions. By this act they were to pay four years' value of their estates and one-third of their personality.

There appears, however, to have been a considerable amount of favouritism, and those who had friends on the two Committees fared very much better than others.

On the 22nd March 1653 the Committee on the Advances of Money gave an order that the estate of the Earl of Birmingham at £2,000, but that the Earl had been informed that his estate was only worth £1,745 and his debts were £4,120, his assessment was discharged and he paid nothing.

History of the Family

OR

Wrottesley, of Wrottesley,

Co. Stafford.

An informant gave the following particulars respecting Mr. William Ward, of Hinley, co. Stafford, the rich goldsmith, who had purchased the wardship of the Dudley heiress from James I. He was a son of William Ward, a reputed owner of Hinley, co. Stafford, which had cost him £30,000. He had lent the King £400 or £500, had given £300 to have his son made a Baronet and £1,500 to have him made a Peer and Justice of the Peace. This last item was probably correct for the date of the Barony of Ward is 1644. He was a noble, loyal Ward, was married to the Dudley heiress, and an information was laid against him that he had been taken prisoner in Dudley Castle when it was surrendered, and his estate had been sequestered.

No farther proceedings were taken in these cases and it is difficult to resist the conviction that there was favouritism or bribery which affected the decisions of both Committees.

One of the most remarkable cases was that of Walter Asley, of Patshek. An information was laid against him and his son Richard on the 2nd December 1651, which stated that Walter¹ was a disaffected Papist who had made his house a garbidge for the King in 1644 and 1645, and had sent two of his sons with horses, arms and money to

² He had, however, in compound for his estates in 1646 at three years' purchase, having sat in the Assembly at Oxford. In 1648 his fine was fixed at £1,000-17s. 10d.

³ Incorrectly called William Asley in the information.

In the case of forfeited estates one-fifth was reserved for the support of the families of the owners. All who had been in the personal service of the King and were bound to attend him, were fined at the lowest rate, viz., one-tenth.

An act of pardon was passed on the 24th February 1652, which freed from sequestration all estates not sequestered before the 1st December 1651.

An act of 21st October 1653 empowered all Recusants to contract for two-thirds of their estates, which had been forfeited for religious opinions. By this act they were to pay four years' value of their estates and one-third of their personalty.¹

There appears, however, to have been a considerable amount of favouritism, and those who had friends on the two Committees fared very much better than others.

On the 28th July 1644, the Committee for the Advance of Money assessed Sir Hervey Bagot, of Field and Blithfield, at £2,000, but on the 9th June 1648, on proof that his estate was only worth £1,745 and his debts were £3,120, his assessment was discharged and he paid nothing.²

An informer gave the following particulars respecting Mr. William Ward, of Himley, co. Stafford, the rich goldsmith, who had purchased the wardship of the Dudley heiress from James I. He stated that William Ward was the reputed owner of Himley, Dudley and other manors in co. Stafford, which had cost him £30,000. He had lent the King £400 or £500, had given £500 to have his son made a Baronet and £1,500 to have him made a Peer and Justice of the Peace. This last item was probably correct, for the date of the Barony of Ward is 1643. The son Humble, Lord Ward, was married to the Dudley heiress, and an information was laid against him that he had been taken prisoner in Dudley Castle when it was surrendered, and his estate had been sequestered.

No further proceedings were taken in these cases and it is difficult to resist the conviction that there was favouritism or bribery which affected the decisions of both Committees.

One of the most remarkable cases was that of Walter Astley, of Patshull. An information was laid against him and his son Richard on the 2nd December 1651, which stated that Walter³ was a disaffected Papist who had made his house a garrison for the King in 1644 and 1645, and had sent two of his sons with horses, arms and money to the King's army, and that Richard Astley was a Captain in the King's garrison at Dudley in 1643-44-45. On the 10th April 1655, the County Committee reported that an information had been laid in 1651, but no proceedings had been taken under it, and as the cause was not depending on the 10th February 1654, it was pardoned by the Act of Oblivion. Mr. Astley was therefore to be restored to the full possession of his estates.

² He had, however, to compound for his estates in 1646 at three years' purchase, having sat in the Assembly at Oxford. In 1649 his fine was fixed at £1,004 17s. 0d.

³ Erroneously called William Astley in the information.

Henry Grey, the brother-in-law of Sir Walter Wrottesley, likewise escaped sequestration. An information was laid against him in July 1650 that he had maintained a garrison against Parliament at his house at Enville, and in 1643-44 was in arms for the King and was at the fight at Stourton Castle. Henry Grey's cousin, Lord Grey of Groby, the regicide, was one of the Committee for compounding, and apparently had stopped all proceedings against his relative.

There were many other cases where the men who actually bore arms against Parliament were treated with more leniency than those who maintained a neutral attitude, thus:—In 1650 an information was laid against Colonel John Lane, of Wolverhampton, who had served three years as a Colonel for the King and had commanded the King's garrison at Stafford, but no proceedings were taken in his case. On the other hand his father, Thomas Lane, of Bentley, who never bore arms, had to compound for his estates.

In the same way Hervey Bagot, of Park Hall, co. Warwick, a son of Sir Hervey Bagot, who had been in arms for the King, escaped sequestration, whilst his father, who never bore arms, had to pay a fine of one-third. It is possible, however, that in these cases, both Lane and Bagot had been serving in garrisons, which had surrendered upon terms. Richard, another son of Sir Hervey Bagot, who commanded the garrison at Lichfield, had been killed at Naseby in 1645.

Another remarkable case was that of Sir Richard Prince, Sir Walter's relative, who had married Mary Wrottesley in 1618, see p. 294. In his petition to compound he stated that he had been imprisoned at Shrewsbury when it was a garrison for the King, owing to his affection for Parliament, that his son and heir was a Colonel in the service of the Parliament and had been slain in battle, and that he had paid his one-fifth and one-twentieth. Notwithstanding these circumstances, he was forced to compound. His composition was fixed at one-tenth and amounted to £1,400, but on the 16th September 1647 his Fine was reduced to £750 on his undertaking to discharge his son's debts. On the 18th December 1650, Rochley (Wrottesley) Prince and Susan Prince, two of his children, were allowed one-half of some property in Bettisfield, co. Flint, which they had purchased in 1644, and which had been sequestered with the rest of their father's estate.

Other interesting cases were those of Dugdale and Ashmole. William Dugdale, who is styled Chester Herald, of Shustoke, co. Warwick, had his estate sequestered because he went to Oxford and was there at the date of the surrender. He paid £168 in 1646, on a composition of one-tenth. In 1650, an information was laid against Elias Ashmole, Gentleman. It states that he was a Gentleman of the Ordnance for the King in 1647, and was a very dangerous person, speaking against the Parliament. He had married the widow of Sir Thomas Mainwaring, by whom he had £600 a year or more. No proceedings appear to have been taken in this instance.

Summarising the contents of the Composition Papers, it appears that the Protestant landowners who actually fought for the King were twelve in number, these were:—

Sir Edward Littleton	Lord Ward of Dudley
Henry Grey of Enville	John Lane of Hide ¹
Thomas Broughton	Sir Thomas Wolrich, Bart.
Walter Noel of Hilcot	Sir Henry Griffiths of Wichnor
William Brereton	Randolph Egerton, and
Thomas Pershouse	Richard Cresswell, of Perton. ²

The Roman Catholic landowners who took up arms for the King were:—

Walter Astley of Patshull and two sons	Sir William Peshall of Canwell and two sons
Francis Biddulph ³	Oliver FitzWilliam of Ipstones
Thomas Coyney of Weston Coyney	Thomas Leveson of Wolverhampton
Philip Draycote of Painsley	Thomas Whitgreave of Moseley
Walter Fowler of St. Thomas	Lord Aston of Tixall and two brothers
Ralph Sneyd of Keele	Sir Richard Fleetwood of Calwich
Peter Giffard of Chillington, his eldest son Walter Giffard of Marston, and three younger sons	William FitzHerbert of Swynerton, and
Sir Richard Weston ⁴ and his son	Francis Harcourt of Tanton.

The landowners who attempted to maintain a neutral attitude and whose estates were sequestered upon various pretences, were:—

² In addition to these, Mr. Sleight in his "History of Leek," mentions William Trafford of Swithamley as one of those who took up arms for the King.

³ His father, John Biddulph of Biddulph, died in November 1642, after the commencement of the war.

Sir Hervey Bagot of Field and Blithfield	Sir Walter Wrottesley
Sir Richard Leveson of Trent-ham	Lord Paget of Beaudesert
William Ward of Himley	Sir Thomas Leigh of Hamstall Ridware
Matthew Okeover of Okeover	John Whorwood of Stourton
Walter Chetwynd of Ingestre	Sir Edward Vernon of Hilton
Thomas Kinnersley of Loxley	Richard Brereton
Thomas Lane of Bentley	Sir Edward Moseley of Rolston
Sir John Skeffington of Fisherwick	Henry Vyse of Standon
Sir Robert Wolseley	Richard Pershouse of Reynolds Hall
Sir Richard Dyot of Freeford	Simon Montfort of Bescot and
William Comberford	Walter Grosvenor of Bush-bury.

There were also some Roman Catholic landowners, who from age and other causes, were not in arms for the King, and whose estates were sequestrated. These were:—

Sir Walter Heveningham, of Aston	Walter Brook of Lapley
John Biddulph of Biddulph	Viscount Stafford
Thomas Coyney of Weston	Peter Macclesfield of Maer, and
Coyney	John Giffard, of Whiteladies.

The above lists account for fifty-eight out of the ninety-eight landowners, who had to find cuirassiers or light horse in 1634,¹ and who may be said to be fairly representative of the landed interest in the county. The remaining forty must have been active adherents of Parliament. Deducting, therefore, the Roman Catholics, who were twenty-three in number, we find that of the Protestant landowners, twelve served the King actively, twenty were neutral, and forty served against him, proportions which will probably astonish those readers who derive their impressions of the political feeling of the day from current histories.²

There is little else to record respecting Sir Walter Wrottesley. In 1642, at the commencement of the troubles, he placed all his property into trust, with power to the trustees to pay his debts and raise portions for his children. His trustees were:—Sir Richard Lee, of the Lee, co. Salop, Baronet, Edward Littleton, Kt., Humfrey Mackworth, Leicester Devereux, John Dyckins, John Byrch and Alexander Wightwyke. The property conveyed consisted of the manors of Wrottesley, Tettnall Clericorum, Butterton, Woodford,

In 1654 his eldest son Walter was married to Margaret, the eldest daughter of Sir Thomas Wolrich, of Dudmaston, co. Salop. The marriage settlement was dated 20th September.¹

It does not appear to have been a very advantageous marriage from a pecuniary point of view, and was probably a love match. Sir Thomas Wolrich had fought for the King, but had afterwards been allowed to compound, having laid down his arms before the 1st March 1645. His composition at two years' value of his estate amounted to £730.

Sir Walter died in 1659. He made three wills, of which copies were formerly at Wroottesley. His first will, which was made in 1634, the year after he succeeded to his property, names his daughters Elizabeth and Mary, his sons Hugh and Edward, and his brother William.

The second will was dated 1647, and mentions:—

My oldest sonne Walter, my daughter Elizabeth, my daughter Mary now wife of Edward Littleton, Esq.,² my daughter Dorothy Wroottesley, my daughter Anne Wroottesley, my daughter Jane Wroottesley, and my three younger sons Edward, Richard and John, and Dame Mary my wife, who is to dwell after my decease att Woodford Grange if she shall desire it, or to have for her dwellinge the Gate Howse of my howse att Wroottesley, with the longe new buildinge thereunto adjoyninge (excepting) my chamber and study over the Gate howse which extendeth to the garden before the Parlour windowes which my will and mind is that my said sonne Walter and his heires shall have and use at his wyll and pleasure, with free ingresse egressse and regresse to and from the same. And that my said wife shall alsoe have the Gallery and the roomes over the Kitchen entrye, pantrye and Buttrye where shee, her children and maides of late have used to lye, and one other roome within her chamber and the joint use of the bleaching Plott end of the Kitchen and some convenient place for a Buttrye garden, and stable roome, and to have the use of all such goods and furniture as shall bee in the said Gatehowse and new buildinges and other the rooms aforesaid att my decease soe long as shee shall live sole and unmarried.³

His last will was dated 16th June 1659 and was proved in London on the 14th of January 1660-61, by Mary Wrottesley, his widow and executrix. He left all his household goods and chattels to his wife for the discharge of his legacies and the education of his three youngest daughters Dorothy, Anne and Joane, so long as she should remain his widow. After her death or remarriage, the same were to be held by his youngest son John Wrottesley and his said three daughters, in augmentation of such small portions and meanes which testator's eldest son is to pay and allowe to them, and to be equally divided amongst them or the survivors of them. And whereas he had settled his lands upon Walter, his eldest son, and made provision for the future livelihood of Edward Wrottesley his second son and his two eldest daughters Elizabeth and Mary, he bequeathed to them 5s. a piece in money. After some further bequests to his servants and the poor of Wolverhampton and Tettenhall, he desires "my noble kinsman Leicester Lorde Viscount Hereforde and my dearly beloved unkle Sir George Devereux, Knight," to be overseers of his will.

Sir Walter was buried at Tettenhall on the 8th November 1659.¹

Of the children mentioned in the three wills,

Walter succeeded him at Wrottesley.

Hugh predeceased his father and was buried at Tettenhall on the 23rd March 1640-41.¹

Edward, the third son, was baptised at Tettenhall on the 19th January 1633-34.¹ He married Martha, daughter of Sir Thomas Hewett, of Shire Oaks, co. Notts.² Walter, son of Edward Wrottesley, of Shire Oaks, gentleman, matriculated at Wadham College 19th March 1674-5,³ aged twenty, but appears to have left no issue.

Richard, the fourth son, was baptised in the chapel at Wrottesley on the 28th February 1637-38,⁴ and the Tettenhall Registers record his burial at Tettenhall on the 11th September 1655.

John, the fifth son, was a merchant in Portugal. An interesting report on the English trade with Portugal in 1673, is to be found in the Dartmouth MSS., printed by the Historical MS. Commission, vol. iii, p. 27. In this report John Wrottesley is named amongst the leading English merchants at Port-o-Porto. The trade is said to have been very lucrative, and many of the merchants had made large fortunes.

Of the daughters—

Elizabeth married Sir Francis Wolrich of Dudmaston, co. Salop, the second Baronet,¹ and son of Sir Thomas Wolrich, the old Cavalier.

Mary married Sir Edward Littleton of Pillaton Hall,¹ the second Baronet, and ancestor of the present Lord Hatherton.

A note by Gregory King,² at the end of the Visitation Book of 1663-4, says that—

“The three younger daughters of Sir Walter Wrottesley were thus married—

3. Dorothy³ to Ambrose Grey of Whittington, co. Stafford, her half uncle, viz., son of Ambrose Grey of Enville, by his second wife.

4. Anne to Monsieur Francis de la Rue, a Frenchman.

5. Jane to Mr. John Adams, fifth son of William Adams of Longdon, co. Salop.”

The pedigree of Wrottesley in this Visitation is dated Wolverhampton, 8th April 1663, and is certified by Sir Walter Wrottesley, the second Baronet, but he does not mention the last three marriages; the first, in fact, would not be a legal marriage, according to the Canonical Laws. A Visitation of Shropshire in the possession of the Earl of Bradford at Weston-under-Lyzard, states that Jane Wrottesley married John, a younger son of William Adams of Longdon, and left a son who was called Wrottesley Adams, and that the arms of Adams were—Ermine, three lions passant, Blue. These arms are of interest as they appear to be a variant of the arms of Giffard of Brimsfield, and it is not unlikely that this family of Adams of Longdon descended from that Adam de Cromba, or Croom, co. Worcester, who was a Giffard (see “The Giffards,” vol. v, New Series, Staffordshire Collections, p. 74).⁴

ARMS OF SIR WALTER WROTTESELEY, BART.

On the dexter side—Or, three piles, Sable, a quarter Ermine, for Wrottesley.

On the sinister side—Barry of six, Argent and Azure, with a crescent, Or, for cadency (Grey of Groby).

² Gregory King was the clerk of Sir William Dugdale, who made the Visitation of 1663.

³ Dorothy was baptized in the Wrottesley Chapel on the 7th December 1637 (Codsall Register). All the marriages and baptisms celebrated in the Wrottesley Chapel are recorded at Codsall, owing probably to the fact that the Codsall minister officiated at them.

⁴ If this surmise is correct it is very probable that George Adams of Sambrooke, co. Salop, the ancestor of the Earls of Lichfield, was a member of the same family, and a lineal descendant of the Giffards of Brimsfield. The family of Sambrooke bore—Ermine, three cats a mountain passant guardant in pale, Sable.

SIR WALTER WROTTESELEY, SECOND BARONET, 1659-86.

From this point, it is proposed to deal with the family history in a more summary manner.

Sir Walter, the first baronet, was succeeded by a son of the same name, who, it has been shewn, married, in 1654, Margaret, the eldest daughter of Sir Thomas Wolrich, of Dudmaston, co. Salop. His life appears to have been entirely uneventful, the most important incident of it, so far as the fortunes of the family were concerned, being the purchase of the manor of Perton and Trescott. This manor intervened between Wrottesley and the other possessions of the family in Womborne, Trysull, and Woodford, but up to this date it had not been possible to obtain an undisputed title to it. After nearly 200 years of legal strife between the families of Stafford of Hoke, Dudley, and Leveson, it had been finally decided by a deed dated 2nd February 1652, that "in order to allay all contentions respecting the manor Sir Richard Leveson of Lilleshall, Knight of the Bath, should hold Perton and Trescott for his life, and that it should revert, after his death, to Lord Dorset and his heirs."¹ Lord Dorset was the heir presumptive of Sir Richard through his grandmother Mary Leveson. In 1664, after the death of Sir Richard Leveson, the manor was sold by Richard Sackville, Earl of Dorset, to Sir Walter Wrottesley.

In 1673, he lost his wife, Margaret Wolrich. At this date she must have been under forty years of age. She was buried at Tettenhall on the 9th October.²

In 1675, Sir Walter was appointed, by Letters Patent, one of the Crown Trustees for the administration of an annual sum of £451 6s. 7½d. granted by the King for the benefit of the Pendrell family and of the widow and descendants of Francis Yates, who had assisted in the concealment of the King at Boscobel in 1651. The other trustees were Richard Congreve of Stretton and John the eldest son of Walter Giffard of Chillington. John Giffard was the last survivor of the three trustees, and the trust is now administered by his heir and legal representative, Walter Courtenay Giffard of Chillington. Shortly after the issue of the Letters Patent, the trustees executed a power of attorney, authorizing George Lea to receive the rents specified and to pay them to the Pendrells and descendants of Francis Yates. This deed, which was formerly at Wroottesley, was signed by all the Pendrell family mentioned in the Letters Patent. Of these one only, Mary the widow of Richard Pendrell (trusty Dick), was able to write her name. William Pendrell signs with his initials, W.P.; the three others, John, Humfrey and George Pendrell, all sign with a cross. In view of the various spellings of this name it may be as well to mention that Mary signs her name as Mary Pendrill.

Sir Walter died in 1686. When he certified to the Wroottesley Pedigree at the Visitation of 1663 he described himself as thirty-two years of age. He would be therefore fifty-five years of age at the date of his death. In his will, which is dated the 30th October 1685, he described himself as "Sir Walter Wroottesley of Purton in the county of Stafford," and as the house at Wroottesley was rebuilt by his son and successor, it was probably in such a state of decay at this time as to be uninhabitable. Most if not all of the ancient manor houses in Staffordshire were timber framed, and if the main timbers decayed there was no resource but to pull them down.

He bequeathed to his eldest son Walter, on whom he stated that he had already settled a plentiful estate in lands, his lease of the tithes of Trescott Grange, which he held of the Vicars Choral of Lichfield, and also the farm of Trescott Grange which were lately purchased of John Finch, Esqr., and Sarah his wife, to be held by him and his heirs male in tail in the same way as his manor of Wroottesley and his other lands were settled upon him. To his daughter Anne he left £1,000, to be paid her on the day of her marriage, or on reaching the age of twenty-one, which should first happen. To his son Harry 5s. and no more, because he had received already £1,300. To his son Gray Wroottesley £1,000. To his daughters Ursula and Anne, all the furniture in the house at Purton; and the rest of his goods, chattels and money to his son Walter.

The will was proved in London on the 24th June 1686.

Of the sons and daughters of Sir Walter, Henry died unmarried in 1726.¹ Gray likewise died unmarried in 1692, when letters of administration of his effects were granted to his brother, Sir Walter Wroottesley, the third baronet.² Ursula, the eldest daughter, married Thomas Crompton, Esq., of Stone Park, co. Stafford, by whom she had an only daughter, Elizabeth, who died unmarried.¹

SIR WALTER WROTTESLEY, THIRD BARONET, 1686-1712.

Walter, son of Walter Wrottesley of Wrottesley, co. Stafford, Baronet, matriculated at Magdalen College, Oxford, on the 18th March 1675-6, aged seventeen. He was therefore born in 1659.

In 1678, when only nineteen years of age, he was married to Eleanora, the daughter of Sir John Archer, Kt., of Coopersale, co. Essex, one of the Justices of the Common Pleas. The marriage allegation was dated 28th June 1678, and was to the following effect:—Walter Wrottesley of Wrottesley, co. Stafford, Esqr., bachelor, about twenty, with consent of father, Sir Walter Wrottesley of the same, Baronet, and Mrs. Eleanora Archer of Coopersale in the Parish of Theydon Garnon, co. Essex, about eighteen, with consent of father, Sir John Archer, Kt., of St. Clement's Danes, Middlesex.²

In the marriage settlement made on this occasion Sir Walter Wrottesley, the father, conveyed to trustees for the benefit of the young couple, saving his own life interest, his manor of Wrottesley, a moiety of the manor of Oaken, the manor of Tettenhall Clericorum, the manor of Tresley and Seisden, the manors of Wombourne and Orton, Woodford Grange and Perton and Trescott, all his lands in Wrottesley, Oaken, Oaken Park, Codshall, Billbroke and Wightwike, the tithes of Wrottesley, Oaken, Codshall, Billbroke, Wightwike, Wombourne, Swindon, Orton and Chaspell, co. Stafford, a forge called the Heath forge in Wombourne and Orton, and the tithes of Perton and Heath forge. Sir John Archer on his part settled a sum of £6,000 upon Walter and Eleanora and their issue.³

Eleanora died in January 1693-4 when only thirty-three years of age,⁴ and shortly after her death Sir Walter married Anne, the daughter of Mr. Justice Burton of Longnor, co. Salop.⁵ About the same time he pulled down the old hall at Wrottesley, filled up the moat, and built a new house upon the same site¹ None of the accounts or correspondence respecting the new house were preserved at Wrottesley, but from intrinsic evidence there can be no doubt of its having been designed by Sir Christopher Wren. It was built of red brick with stone dressings, and the details of the stone work correspond in all respects to those of Chelsea Hospital, which had just been completed by the same architect. The double architrave to the windows, the stone quoins, and the block cornice were the same as those of the Hospital. In the case of some of the windows and doors there was a change in the design of the architrave, a torus moulding having been introduced into it, and the same variation is to be found at Chelsea Hospital.

As originally designed the house must have been a handsome building. The great banquetting hall or saloon was 43 feet in length, 28 feet in width, and the same in height, running through two stories, and with two tiers of windows. At the west end there was a minstrel gallery, to which access was obtained from the main staircase. The latter was a very fine feature in the house, occupying a space of 26 feet by 20 feet, with a massive oak balustrading and dado. At the back of the house were open cloisters formed by arches springing from columns. These extended the whole length of the house between the wings, and were 88 feet in length and 16 feet 6 inches in width. Above the cloisters there was a gallery of the same dimensions, lighted by seven windows, divided by mullions and transoms, in which were some ancient coats of arms in colored glass, which had been taken out of the old house. Dr. Wilkes, the antiquary, writing about the year 1740, says, "At Wrottesley is a most magnificent house with stables, outhouses, gardens, etc., begun by this young gentleman's grandfather² and tis a great pity they are not finished according to the original design." In a note, added about fifty years later, Dr. Wilkes says, "The house was built about 100 years ago in the style of King William, of brick with white stone cornices in the form of an H, large and commodious but not handsome." Between these two dates the aspect of the house had been completely changed, all the characteristic features of it having been obliterated by the eighth Baronet. The dormer windows had been removed from the roof, the cloisters bricked up, and the great gallery which was the glory of the house had been destroyed to obtain additional bedrooms. It was at this date also that additional flues were cut in the walls of the house, one of which, by communicating with the woodwork of the floors, was the cause of the destruction of the house by fire in 1897.

The tradition in the family is that the house was built from money which Sir Walter obtained with Elianora Archer, and this is likely to be true, for the Archer arms were impaled with those of Wrottesley in the pediment on the front of the house, though his first wife had been dead several years before the building was completed.¹

During the rebuilding of the house Sir Walter lived at Somerford, which he had bought from the mortgagees of John Somerford,² and he died there in 1712,³ aged fifty-three.

His will was dated the 14th November 1707, and was proved at London on the 18th March 1712-13 by Dame Anne Wrottesley, the relict and executrix. It states:—

“ Imprimis, whereas I did some short time after the death of my first wife, grant an annuity or yearly rent charge of seven hundred pounds to be issuing and going out of all and every my manors, messuages, lands, tenements and hereditaments that I was then seised of in the County of Stafford during the time of my naturall life upon trust for the maintenance and raising of portions for the younger children of my said deceased wife, whereby considerable portions and provisions have been, and will be raised for them for their respective preferments; and therefore I do give and devise to my eldest son Mr. John Wrottesley and to all and every of my younger children by his mother, that shall be living at my decease, the summe of twenty shillings a piece to buy them respectively mourning rings to wear in remembrance of me. Item, I give and devise all and every the messuages, lands, tenements and hereditaments whatsoever I have purchased or am in any way intituled unto either in law or equity in the Parish of Brewood in the County of Stafford unto my loving wife the Lady Anne Wrottesley and her assigns for and during the term of her naturall life, and from and after her decease I give and devise the same unto my son Walter Wrottesley and his assigns for and during the term of his natural life without impeachment of or for any manner of waste, and from and after his decease to the use and behoof of such person and persons and for such estate and estates as I have caused the mansion house called Somerford Hall wherein I now live, to be settled unto, and my will is that the said messuages, lands, etc., by me purchased as aforesaid of William Challoner, Edward Jellicoe⁴

Item, I give, desire and bequeath unto my dear and loving wife the Lady Anne Wrottesley all the rest and residue of my personall estate whatsoever, and I do nominate constitute and appoint her sole executrix of this my last will and testament, and desire her to perform the same in all things."

A codicil was afterwards added in these words:—

"I revoke that part of my will wherein I leave my daughter Henrietta and my son Hugh each of them a small legacy amongst my first wife's younger children, and leave them but a shilling a piece each, and I desire to be buried in Brewood church or churchyard where my now wife intends to lye buried, and I desire my Funerall may be as private as possible, only eight gentlemen bearers to be invited." Dated 24th March A.D. 1711.

His second marriage had been the cause of many dissensions in the family.

Sir Walter's children by his first wife were—

Walter, who died young in 1686.¹

John, who succeeded him as fourth Baronet.

Elleanor, who married William Eyre, and who succeeded to Coopersale on the death of her uncle, John Archer.

Mary, born 4th March 1691-2. She died unmarried in 1711.³ By her will, which was dated 1710, she bequeathed money which had been left to her "by her grandmother Archer" and her "uncle Archer" amongst the following relatives, viz., "my brother

To complete the story of the Somerford property. It appears that in 1694 the manor of Somerford, with the capital mansion and lands in Somerford, Horsebrook, Stretton and Brewood, late the estate of John Somerford, Esq., Robert Miles, and Roger Ward, were settled by Fine and Recovery on Dame Anne, the wife of Sir Walter

² After some bequests to his brother, Sir John Wrottesley, and his sister, Elizabeth Wrottesley, the will proceeds:—

"Item my books which I have with much care, trouble and expense collected, and the value of which I judge to be £2,000, I give to my said brother Sir John Wrottesley in trust only, that the same shall go along with the inheritance of the Wrottesley estate, and what may be further necessary to be done in order to settle it in that manner, I do desire my said brother will take care of."

The library consisted of over 8,000 volumes, and contained many rare editions of the classics and a complete series of the ancient chronicles of Great Britain, many of which were in black letter and original editions. The library also contained many volumes of rare tracts, and news letters of the seventeenth century, a fine copy of De Brie, a folio Shakespeare, the original edition of Sir Walter Raleigh's travels, and every antiquarian work of note which had been printed up to 1725, the date of Hugh Wrottesley's death.

The will was dated 1722 and proved in 1725. A deposition of two witnesses at the end of the will states that he died on the 26th June 1725.

Wrottesley, Bart.¹ She, by will dated 27th July 1729, devised the same to her daughter Anne, the wife of Thomas Hutchinson, Esq., of Owthorpe, co. Notts, her brother Thomas Burton of Longner Hall, co. Salop, and Peter Meyrick of the Bank of England, Esq., in trust to sell the same, and it was sold in 1734 for £5,400 to Robert Barbor, Esq., of the Inner Temple.¹

The son, Walter Wrottesley, appears to have died before his mother. He married a Miss Craig and left a son Thomas, who married in 1733 his cousin Elizabeth, the daughter of Sir John Wrottesley, the fourth Baronet.² Thomas left no issue, and in his will, which was dated 29th September 1733, he devised to Magdalen Craig, spinster, and to her heirs, his manor of Coven in the parish of Brewood, and his lands and tenements in the said manor and townships of Coven, Bishbury, Penford, Aspley and Somerford. This estate was conveyed to Robert Barbor, Esq., of the Inner Temple, for £3,550.¹

Dame Anne Wrottesley was buried at Brewood on the 10th of July 1732, having survived her husband for more than twenty years. The courtly Vicar of Brewood describes her in his Register as "The Honorable Lady Anne Wrottesley of Somerford, widow."³

SIR JOHN WROTTESELEY, FOURTH BARONET, 1712-26.

Owing to the loss of the "Family Bible" by the fire of 1897, I am unable to state the year in which this Sir John was born, and the only note I have taken respecting him from the Wrottesley muniments is that he was married in 1703 to Frances Gray (sic), younger daughter of the Honble. John Gray. Assuming that he was of age at the date of his marriage he would have been born about 1682. His parents were married in 1678.

In 1708, during the lifetime of his father, he was elected member for the county in conjunction with Henry Paget, afterwards Earl of Uxbridge. At this period, the Whig interest greatly preponderated owing to the victories of Marlborough, but before the next election, in 1710, the tide had turned, the Whig Ministry had been dismissed, the Tories had a majority, and John Wrottesley lost his seat.

³ Brewood Registers. The Gentleman's Magazine states that she died on the 1st of July 1732.

According to Wotton "Sir John was a gentleman of strict honor and justice, and highly valued by the county for which he was chosen a representative in 1708."¹ The same authority informs us that he married Frances, daughter of the Honble. John Grey, of Enville, Esquire, the third son of Henry, Earl of Stamford, by Catherine, his second wife, the daughter of Edward, Lord Dudley and Ward, by whom he had five sons, John, who died in November 1723;² Charles, who died in 1724,³ both in their minority; Sir Hugh, Sir Walter, and Sir Richard, who were successively Baronets, and five daughters. Of these:—

Hugh, the third son, succeeded as fifth Baronet, but died in his minority in 1729, when letters of administration of his effects were granted to Dame Frances Wrottesley, his mother.⁴ He was succeeded by his next brother

Walter, the sixth Baronet, who died a minor two years afterwards. He was buried at Tettenhall on the 28th of February 1731-2.⁵

Frances, the eldest daughter, was born on the 16th of October 1711,⁶ and married, first, Heigham Bendish, Esq., of East Ham, Essex,¹ and secondly, in 1756, Dr. Wilkes of Willenhall, the well known antiquary.⁶

Elizabeth, the second daughter, was born on the 5th of November 1713,⁷ and married her cousin Thomas Wrottesley,⁸ the son of Sir Walter, the third Baronet, by his second wife. After his death she married Francis Stuart of Wolverhampton, by whom she left issue.⁴

According to the author of "Staffordshire and Warwickshire, Past and Present," he was born 16th March 1690-91, and educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, and married Rebecca Manlove, of Lees Hill, Abbots Bromley. "In 1756, being a widower, he married Mrs. Frances Bendish, sister of Sir Richard Wrottesley, Bart. He died in 1760, aged seventy, and his widow died at a very advanced age in 1798. He was an eminent physician and a diligent and inquisitive lover of antiquities." His collections are now in the William Salt Library at Stafford.

Henrietta, the third daughter, was born on the 25th of November 1715,¹ and married Theodore William Inge, Esq., of Thorpe Constantine, co. Stafford.²

Dorothy or Dora, as she is named in the Codsall Register, was born and baptised at Wrottesley 8th May 1723.³ The Tettenhall Register records her burial on the 12th of August 1742. She is described in it as "Dorothy, the daughter of Lady Wrottesley; of Purton." Probate of her will was granted to her mother in 1743.

Mary was born and baptised the 12th of October 1725.³ She was living in 1762, at the date of her mother's will, and apparently died unmarried.⁴

Sir John Wrottesley was buried at Tettenhall on the 1st of November 1726.⁵ His will was dated 1725, and probate was granted of it in February 1726-7. He names in it "my uncle Harry Wrottesley," "my wife Frances," "Anthony Collins, Esqr., and my sister Elizabeth, his wife."

After the marriage of Sir Richard Wrottesley, his mother Frances, Lady Wrottesley, took up her abode at the old Manor House at Perton, and must have lived to a very advanced age, for the Parish Register of Tettenhall records her burial on the 1st April 1769, four months only before the

² She has raised a monument to herself by the memorial she put up in Lichfield Cathedral to Lady Mary Wortley Montagu. Mrs. Jameson, in her "Romance of Biography," writing of this monument says:—

"In Lichfield Cathedral stands the only memorial ever raised to Lady Mary. It is a cenotaph, with Beauty weeping over the loss of her preserver, and an inscription of which the following words form the conclusion, 'To perpetuate the memory of such benevolence, and to express her gratitude for the benefit she herself received from this alleviating art, this monument is erected by Henrietta Inge, relict of Theodore William Inge, and daughter of Sir John Wrottesley, Bart., in 1789.' One would like to have known the woman who raised this monument."

Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, who introduced inoculation into England, as a remedy for smallpox, was the aunt and probably the godmother of Lady Mary Wrottesley, the wife of Sir Richard Wrottesley, and was therefore connected with Henrietta Inge. It is not unlikely that the numerous deaths in the Wrottesley family of this date proceeded from smallpox, for the ravages of the disease at this period were quite terrific.

Mrs. Jameson says, in the work above mentioned, that "when Lord Petre, who is consecrated to fame in the Rape of the Lock, as the ravisher of Arabella Fermour's hair, died of the smallpox at the age of three and twenty, just after his marriage with a young and beautiful heiress, his death caused a general sympathy, and added to the dread and horror inspired by this terrible disease, eighteen persons of his family having died of it within twenty-seven years." This took place in 1711.

death of her only surviving son Sir Richard. Her will, which was dated 16th April 1762, mentions "my son Sir Richard Wrottesley and his son John," "my granddaughter Mary Wrottesley," "my daughter Wilkes," "my daughter Stuart," "my daughter Inge," "my daughter Mary," and "my grandson William Inge."¹

SIR RICHARD WROTTESLEY, THE SEVENTH BARONET, 1732-69.

Sir Richard, who now succeeded to the Baronetcy, was born on the 12th of April 1721,² and was the fifth and only surviving son of the fourth Baronet. The mortality in the family had been so great, that at the date of his marriage in 1739, he was the only male representative of it left alive.

He matriculated at St. John's College, Oxford, on the 31st of August 1739, aged eighteen,³ and in the same year he married Lady Mary, the second daughter of John, first Earl Gower, by his first wife, Lady Evelyn Pierrepont, the daughter of the Duke of Kingston.⁴ This marriage brought him into close connection with all the great Whig houses which had been paramount in England ever since the accession of the Hanoverian line. The eldest daughter of Earl Gower was married to John, the fourth Duke of Bedford, who played a prominent part in the political history of this period, and was first cousin to William, the fourth Duke of Devonshire, whose mother was a Russell. Earl Gower himself was a man of some political eminence. He had been appointed Lord Privy Seal in 1742, and had twice acted as one of the members of the Regency, during the absence of George II on the Continent. He was created an Earl in 1746 and died on 25th December 1754.

Dr. Wilkes, the antiquary, describing Wrottesley about 1739, writes:—

"Sir Richard, the present owner of the estate is a minor, but a young gentleman of fine parts who 'tis hoped may live to be an ornament to his family and country (sic). He is the seventh of the family who has enjoyed the Honour in about 12 years, his father and two elder brothers all dying in a short space of time."⁵

In 1742, when Sir Richard came of age, a postnuptial settlement was made of the Wrottesley estate, and Lord Gower settled £10,000 upon his daughter.¹ In the reign of George II this sum would have been considered a large fortune for a daughter.

In 1747, through the interest of his brother-in-law, the Duke of Bedford, Sir Richard was elected M.P. for Tavistock, and was re-elected in June 1749, after his appointment as one of the Principal Clerks in the Board of Green Cloth.² In 1754, for some reason which has never been explained, Sir Richard threw up his seat in Parliament and his post in the Royal Household and entered into Holy Orders.

Up to this point this history has been based entirely upon documentary evidence, but we have now reached a period when oral traditions may be produced in aid of it; and I propose to introduce into it some stories of Sir Richard told to me by his grandson, the late Rev. Charles Wrottesley, the Rector of Knoyle. According to my informant, Sir Richard was a hot-headed youth, who from inability to control his temper, became involved in quarrels which in an age of duelling, led to more than one personal encounter. One of these was a duel à outrance fought with swords in a sawpit, in which, curious to relate, neither party was injured. After Sir Richard had entered the Church and been appointed one of the Royal Chaplains, the story of this duel reached the ears of his royal master, and the fact of one of his Chaplains having been engaged in such an affair so tickled the royal fancy, that it was made a constant subject of badinage on the part of the King, in reply to which Sir Richard could only plead that "After all, sir, nobody was hurt." He became a Royal Chaplain in 1763. Another story told of him is connected with the rising of "45." When the Pretender reached Derby the excitement in the Midland Counties was intense, and Sir Richard as a staunch Whig and Hanoverian, armed his servants and tenantry, and at the head of a body of Yeomanry set out to join his father-in-law, Lord Gower, who was raising forces in the north of the county. They had not gone far, however, before they were recalled, news having been received of the retreat of Prince Charles Edward's army. His Jacobite and High Tory neighbours, the Giffards and Astleys, on hearing of this, invented a story that Sir Richard and his "army" had never gone further than the old Bull Inn, which was the first public-house on the road and less than a mile from Wrottesley, where according to their account, all Sir Richard's levies had stopped to

"liquor up" and could not be prevailed upon to go any further.¹

Sir Richard appears to have been a favourite at Court, for at the commencement of the new reign his eldest son John was appointed one of the King's Pages, and on the formation of the household of the Queen, at the time of the marriage of the King with the Princess Charlotte of Mecklenburgh Strelitz, his eldest daughter Mary was appointed one of the Maids of Honour. In April 1765 he was promoted to the Deanery of Worcester, at that date a very valuable ecclesiastical benefice. On taking Orders he obtained the degree of M.A. at St. John's, College, Cambridge, and on his promotion to the Deanery he took the degree of LL.D.²

The letters of George Selwyn and his contemporaries occasionally mention members of the family at this date. One from George Williams,³ dated from Crome, 19th of October 1764, says :—

"I met the Wrottesleys in the middle of the town, and let me tell you a Maid of Honor's face at Worcester is no very common spectacle. I have seen you in spirits at a London face, though it was that of the ordinary at Newgate."

This is in allusion to George Selwyn's well known fondness for attending public executions.

On the 28th of October 1765, he writes again to George Selwyn :—

"The dinner at Sir Richard Wrottesley's was not a bad one; the jumble between leather and prunella would have entertained you. The Maid of Honor is at Blenheim, and I suppose e secretis in this paper controversy and as she is retained for the house of Trentham she breathes not peace; you would have pitied Lady Mary, sick, and as like Taaffe as it is possible, though at the same time well bred, and in every action discovering a superiority to the savages she was encompassed with. The Bishop was as usual all sketch and outline in his discourse, said you had lost a great opportunity of not appearing with your sword-bearer before H.R.H.," etc.

The controversy mentioned in this letter is doubtless the attempt of the King to get rid of the Grenville administration. He had dismissed them, it is supposed on the advice of his mother, but not being able to form another administration, he had to take them back.

Sir Richard held his Deanery for four years only, for he died 20th July 1769.¹ At the date of his death he was only forty-eight years of age, and if he had lived longer, with his favour at Court and his political connections, he would probably have risen to higher ecclesiastical preferment.

His will was dated in 1764 and probate of it was granted in 1769. It is curious that he makes no mention in it of his wife. His daughter Mary was made sole executrix, and the guardianship of his daughter Harriet, who was under age, was left to the Duke of Bedford and Earl Gower.²

Mary Wrottesley died intestate on the 17th of December 1769, before the estate had been administered. Letters of administration were therefore granted "to Dame Mary Wrottesley, widow, the lawful mother of the Hon^{ble} Mary Wrottesley, spinster, deceased."³

Sir Richard left an only son John, who succeeded him, and five daughters. Of these the eldest, Mary, was born on the 22nd of November 1740,⁴ and was appointed Maid of Honour to Queen Charlotte in 1761. She is mentioned upon more than one occasion in the letters of Lady Sarah Lennox. On the 24th December 1762, Lady Sarah writes to her friend Lady Susan Fox Strangways:—

"Miss Wriottesley (sic) is so pert upon the Duke and Duchess of M., Lady Bolingbrokes being favorite to the Queen, and upon Mr. Calcraft intending to marry her (which is my sister's intelligence) that her head is turned, and she is a thorough fine lady as ever I saw."⁵

The allusion here must be to the marriage of Mary Wrottesley's cousin, Lady Caroline Russell, to the Duke of Marlborough, which took place in August of this year. Lady Bolingbroke was the sister of the Duke and one of the Ladies of the Bedchamber.

In May 1765 there was a rupture between the King and the Grenville and Bedford party. On the 13th June of that year Lady Sarah writes to Lord Holland:—

² The guardianship was released by deed to Dame Mary Wrottesley, her mother, in 1770 (Wrottesley Muniments). There is no evidence of any quarrel between Sir Richard and Lady Mary. The latter was in bad health and the will was drawn up apparently under the supposition that the testator would survive his wife, but as always happens, when a speculation is made on the future, the unexpected occurred, and Lady Mary survived both her husband and her daughter.

⁵ Letters of Lady Sarah Lennox, vol. i (1901). Lady Sarah always uses the word "pert" in the sense of "proud." Thus she speaks of a lady being pert at the birth of a son and heir.

"I came to town yesterday, and find all the Bedfords most prodigious glumpy, particularly Lord Gower. The King is still sulky and I find everybody expects a change immediately."

Ten days later she writes again to him:—

"It is impossible to know any news, for Miss Wriothesley, who has just been, says that the King's manner to all her friends is exactly the same that it has been for this fortnight past, and as nobody can know what passed between the King and Mr. Pitt either Wednesday or to-day, the fidget they are in is not smoke, you may imagine (sic)."

As Pitt refused to take office, not wishing to supplant Grenville, who was his brother-in-law, the King was obliged to take his old Ministers back.

Some witty verses, written by Lord Delawarr on resigning his office as Vice-Chamberlain to Queen Charlotte on his promotion in the army in 1766, gives us a glimpse of the dull and decorous Court of Queen Charlotte. They were addressed as a farewell to the Maids of Honor:—

Ye maids who Britain's Court bedeck,
Miss Wrottesley, Beauclerk, Tryon, Keck,
Miss Meadows and Boscawen,
A dismal tale I have to tell,
This is to bid you all farewell—
Farewell, for I am going.

No longer shall we laugh and chat
In the outer room, on this and that Until the Queen shall call.

Our gracious King has called me now,
Nay, holds a Stick¹ up too I vow,
And so God bless you all.

No longer shall I now be seen
Handing along our matchless Queen,
So generous, good and kind;
While one by one each smiling lass
First drops a curtesy as we pass,
Then trips along behind.

Farewell, my good Lord Harcourt too,
What can alas, your Lordship do,
Alone among the maids.

You must soon assistance ask,
You'll have a very arduous task
Unless you call for aid.

Great is the charge you have in care!
But yet my pretty maidens fair,
His situation's nice.

As Chamberlain we shall expect
That he sole guardian will protect Six maids without a Vice.

It would appear by this that "the six maids without a vice" had more gracious manners than the maids of Queen Elizabeth, who were described by Cecil, as "virtuous as small beer, and as sour."

The Carlisle Correspondence mentions the engagement of Mary Wrottesley to Admiral Keppel, the famous Naval Commander, afterwards Lord Keppel. This was in 1768, but her health gave way, and she died in 1769, aged twenty-nine.¹ Lord Keppel died unmarried in 1782.

At Wrottesley there is an excellent portrait of her taken after she became Maid of Honor, by Sir Joshua Reynolds.² Without being what is called a beauty, she has a countenance which is decidedly prepossessing.

Frances, the second daughter, was born in 1743¹ and occurs in the letters of Lady Sarah Lennox as "Fanny Wriotsley."³ She married in 1769, as his second wife, Captain afterwards Admiral Hugh Pigot, brother of the unfortunate Lord Pigot, the Governor of Madras, and died in 1811, leaving two daughters.⁴

Elizabeth, the third daughter, was born 21st October 1745,¹ and was married on the 24th June 1769 to Augustus Henry, the third Duke of Grafton. The Duke at this date was First Lord of the Treasury and Prime Minister. He had been previously married to a daughter of Lord Ravensworth, but they had been separated in 1765, and the marriage was dissolved by Act of Parliament in March 1769. In his autobiography the Duke writes:—

"On the 24th June 1769 I married Elizabeth, the third daughter of Sir Richard and Lady Mary Wrottesley whose merit as a wife, tenderness and affection as mother of a numerous family and exemplary conduct thro' life, need not be related to you."⁵

The Duke resigned the Treasury in January 1770, but took office again as Lord Privy Seal in the following year in Lord North's administration. He is, however, best known to historians through the attacks upon him in the Letters of Junius. One of these addressed to the Duke and dated the 30th May 1769, thus apostrophises his forthcoming marriage:—

"Marriage is the point on which every rake is stationary at last, and truly my Lord you may well be weary of the circuit you have taken, for you have now fairly travelled through every

In a political point of view, this union is not imprudent, the favor of princes is a perishable commodity. You have now a strength sufficient to command the closet," etc.

The allusion in the last two sentences, of course, is to the connection of Elizabeth with the house of Russell. Gertrude, the popular Duchess of Bedford, was her aunt, and her marriage took place from Woburn Abbey.¹

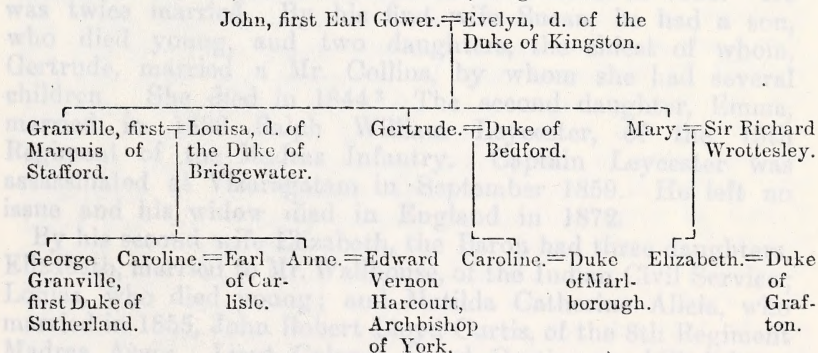

Five months after the marriage, the Dowager Countess Gower writes to Mrs. Delany:—

"The Duchess of Grafton I'm told is not in the least degree intoxicated with her preferment, and I believe it, for the Duchess of Bedford says, 'She wants dignity,' which implies she wants insolence."²

At the date of the marriage the Duke was thirty-four years of age and Elizabeth was ten years younger. They had several children, most of whom eventually married, and their descendants must now be very numerous. For these, however, I must refer the reader to Burke's Peerage.³

The Duke died in March 1811. His wife survived him for eleven years, dying on the 25th May 1822, in her seventy-seventh year. In her latter days she formed an interesting link with the past, for my father frequently visited her in her house in London, and she had opened a Court Ball in 1771, by dancing a minuet with the Duke of Gloucester.¹

Granville, the first Marquis of Stafford, by his second wife, the daughter of the Earl of Galloway, had issue:—Granville, the first Earl Granville; Georgiana, married to the Earl of St. Germans; Charlotte, married to the Duke of Beaufort; and Susan, married to the Earl of Harrowby; all of these, as well as Caroline, the Duchess of Marlborough, would be first cousins of Elizabeth Wrottesley, the Duchess of Grafton.

Dorothy, the fourth daughter of Sir Richard Wrottesley, was born on the 15th of October 1747, and married in 1780 Christian, Baron von Kutzleben, Minister to the Landgrave of Hesse-Cassel.² Horace Walpole alludes to this marriage more than once in his letters to the Countess of Ossory. On the 14th July 1779 he writes:—

"I met Miss Wrottesley this evening at my niece (sic) Cholmondeley's and she told me Mr. Dunning had found a flaw in the settlements and that they must be drawn again."

On the 23rd September 1780 he writes again:—

"Miss Wrottesley's £5,000 will purchase a princely Turnippery, but I doubt even that or a Baron will indemnify her for the capital she quits, and yet £5,000 will soon, I believe, buy a principality in England."

Horace Walpole was very desponding at this date over the political outlook; England being at war with America and half of Europe.

The Baron of Kutzleben had issue by Dorothy Wrottesley, a son William, who entered the military service of the East India Company, became Lieut.-Colonel of the 44th Regiment of Madras Infantry, and died of fever in India in 1836. He was twice married. By his first wife Susan, he had a son, who died young, and two daughters, the eldest of whom, Gertrude, married a Mr. Collins, by whom she had several children. She died in 1844.³ The second daughter, Emma, married in 1836 Ralph William Leycester, of the 19th Regiment of the Madras Infantry. Captain Leycester was assassinated at Vizaragatam in September 1859. He left no issue and his widow died in England in 1872.

By his second wife Elizabeth, the Baron had three daughters, Elizabeth, married to Mr. Wallhouse, of the Indian Civil Service; Louisa, who died young; and Matilda Catherine Alicia, who married in 1855, John Robert Lloyd Curtis, of the 8th Regiment Madras Army. Lieut.-Colonel Lloyd Curtis was killed by a fall from his horse at Singapore, on the 4th March 1869. By his wife Matilda Catherine Alicia, he had two daughters and one son. Of these children the only survivor is Elizabeth Harriet Kutzleben Curtis, now living in London.¹

Harriet, the fifth daughter of Sir Richard Wrottesley, was born on the 1st January 1754, and, like her sister Mary, became Maid of Honor to Queen Charlotte. She married in 1779, Colonel, afterwards General, William Gardiner, brother of Luke, Viscount Mountjoy² and died on the 8th December 1824.³ Her daughter, Gertrude Florinda, married in 1803, the Hon. Charles Tollemache, by whom she had, with other issue, Maria, Marchioness of Ailesbury,⁴ one of the best known and most popular of the "grandes dames" of the Court of Queen Victoria.

At Wrottesley there is an excellent portrait of Sir Richard, painted by Gainsborough; in this he is represented in clerical costume and powder. At Enville there is another portrait of him, painted when he was a young man, in the velvet frock coat and peruke of the reign of George II.

SIR JOHN WROTTESELEY, THE EIGHTH BARONET, A.D. 1769
TO 1787.

John, the eighth Baronet, was born at Wrottesley on the 22nd of December 1744,⁵ and succeeded his father Richard in 1769. As he was an only son, the representation of the family in the male line was reduced again to a single member. As a youth he had served as Page of Honour to the King, and as usual in such circumstances, on reaching the age of sixteen years, obtained a commission in the Army. Shortly after the formation of the household of Edward Augustus the Duke of York, a younger brother of the King, he was appointed his Equerry, and in the Edgeworth Memoirs there is an amusing description of some private theatricals at Sir Francis Delaval's house, in which the Duke and his Equerry played the leading parts in Rowe's tragedy of "The Fair Penitent," the Duke playing Lothario the Seducer, and John Wrottesley the part of Altamont. This dreary play, which is in blank verse, would have been forgotten long ago, if it had not been for the cant phrase of "the gay Lothario" which is taken from it. The parts of Calista and Lavinia were played by Lady Stanhope and Lady Mexborough, and the Stage Manager was the famous Macklin.¹ In 1767 he accompanied the Duke in his foreign tour, and was present at his death at the Palace of Monaco on the 17th of September in the same year.

The London Gazette of the 29th September states :—

“On Sunday last Captain Wrottesley arrived from Monaco with the melancholy account that H.R.H. Edward Augustus Duke of York and Albany died at that place on the 17th instant about 11 a.m. of a malignant fever.”

A letter in the correspondence of George Selwyn and his contemporaries gives additional particulars of the Duke's illness and death, derived no doubt from his Equerry; it says :—

“H.R.H. ordered that Captain Wrottesley should bring the news to England, and in what method it should be disclosed. The Captain was first to wait on M. Le Grand of Spring Gardens and with him to go to Leicester House, and then to Gloucester House, and having communicated the event to the Duke his brother, to proceed to their Majesties, submitting it to the King and Queen in what manner and by whom it should be imparted to his royal parent.”²

In the same correspondence it is stated that :—

“The Duke was taken ill immediately on his arrival at Monaco, having travelled from Toulon. H.R.H. had danced rather too much at the Chateau of a person of fashion, and set off for Toulon, three or four leagues distant, in a very strong perspiration. The Gentlemen of the train, Colonels Morrison and St. John and Captain Wrottesley, earnestly represented to H.R.H. the necessity of his remaining where he was.”

This was on the 29th of August. With our present knowledge of zymotic diseases, it is not necessary to look for causes of the Duke's illness. He evidently died of typhoid fever, which, until recent years, was more or less endemic in the South of Europe. Horace Walpole states that “he died with a heroism becoming a great Prince. Before he died he wrote a penitential letter to the King (though in truth he had no faults but what his youth made very pardonable), and tenderly recommended his servants to him.”³

and the King, the poor Duke added with a faint smile, "And then you will go and marry Fanny Courtenay."¹

The Duke's remains were brought to England, and the funeral took place in Westminster Abbey on the following 3rd of November.

At the General Election of 1768, John Wrottesley was returned as Member for Newcastle-under-Lyme, no doubt by the Gower interest, for Lord Gower at this date was a member of the Government and Lord President of the Council in the administration of the Duke of Grafton. On the following 5th of July, he took the Chiltern Hundreds, and was elected member for the county in place of George Harry Grey his cousin, who had succeeded to the Earldom of Stamford. The other member was Sir William Bagot, who had represented the county since the year 1754. This general election was signalised by the return of Wilkes for Middlesex, and the tumults and riots which arose from it.

His father died in the following year, and on the 7th of June 1770,² Sir John married Frances the second daughter of William Viscount Courtenay, of Powderham Castle, by his wife Frances, daughter of Heneage Earl of Aylesford. His eldest son John was born in the following year, and another son Henry in 1773. At the time of her marriage Frances was one of the Maids of Honour to Queen Charlotte.

Owing to his post in the Royal Household and subsequent entry into the Army Sir John had never matriculated at an University, but on the 8th of July 1773, Oxford conferred upon him the Honorary Degree of D.C.L.

At the General Election of 1774, he was again returned as a member for the county, the other member being Sir William Bagot. It was in this year that the troubles arose in America, and the tea chests were thrown into the harbour at Boston. The battle of Bunker's Hill was fought on the 17th June 1775, and the Guards were ordered to America in the following year.

At this date Sir John Wrottesley was Captain and Lt.-Colonel in the first Battalion of the Guards. They sailed from Spithead on the 12th of May, and arrived off Staten Island on the 12th of August and took part in all the operations under Sir William Howe in 1776, which led up to the capture of New York and Rhode Island. Full descriptions of all these actions were sent home by Sir John to his wife. New York was captured on the 15th of September and the Battle of Whiteplains was fought on the 28th of October. During the winter of 1776-7 the Guards remained at New York.

By the scheme of operations which had been arranged in London for the following year, Sir William Howe was to have co-operated with General Burgoyne by an advance to the North up the Hudson River, but the orders to this effect never reached him,¹ and Sir William embarked his army in July 1777 and went southwards to the Delaware River in order to take possession of Philadelphia. The Battle of Brandywine was fought on the 11th September, and Howe occupied Philadelphia on the 26th. The Guards formed part of the forces engaged in these operations.

In the following year (1778) negotiations were opened with the Americans with a view to an accommodation, and the Earl of Carlisle, who had married Lady Caroline Leveson-Gower, Sir John's first cousin, was one of a Commission sent out from England to offer terms to Congress. At this date, however, France had declared war with Great Britain, and the Americans would listen to no terms which did not recognize their independence.

Sir William Howe had been successful in all his operations up to this date, but an outcry had been raised against him in England that he had not followed up his advantages against the enemy with sufficient vigour, and the ministry at home wrote to him in a tone which shewed plainly that they had lost all confidence in him. Under these circumstances, he asked to be relieved, and the command of the forces in America fell to Sir Henry Clinton, who was in many respects inferior in ability to Howe. In fact, anyone who has seen the condition of an English army after a disembarkation from a sea voyage, without any means of transport for its ammunition, sick, or provisions, will be surprised at the extent and success of the operations which had been undertaken by Howe. The troops under his command, who were aware of his difficulties, were indignant at the slight placed upon their General, and a triumphal ovation was accorded to him upon his departure. This was naturally distasteful to members and supporters of the Government, and Lord Carlisle gives the following description of it in a letter to his wife, dated from on board the "Trident," River Delaware, 21st June 1778:—

"I forgot to mention the (I don't know what to call it) that was given to Sir W. Howe. I fear it was a very foolish business, though I believe it owed its birth to our relative Sir John

Wrotsley. He gave me a long description of it, but I understand there is one sent to England which is to appear in the papers, which will save me the trouble of endeavoring to recollect the particulars. I only know there were triumphal arches, and that General Washington was within 24 miles of them, and that Lord Howe saluted Sir William Howe, and Sir William Howe saluted Lord Howe, and that it cost £4,000.¹

An account of this Fête was sent home by Major André in a letter from Philadelphia dated 23 May 1778, but it does not appear to have been published before it was printed in the Lady's Magazine of August 1792. Major André calls it a "Mischianza" or Variety of Entertainments, and his account of it seems to justify Lord Carlisle's opinion of it. It took place on the 18th of May, and Sir William Howe embarked for England on the 24th. The managers were Sir John Wrottesley, Colonel O'Hara, Major Gardiner, and Major Montresor, the Chief Engineer. Part of the entertainment consisted of a Tournament, in which six Knights of the "Blended Rose" fought six Knights of the "Burning Mountain." After which there was a grand procession, the whole concluding with a ball and fireworks. André in this letter speaks of the "universal regret and disappointment which the Army felt on the approaching departure of Sir William."²

Lady Mary Wrottesley, the mother of Sir John died on the 30th of April of this year,³ and the latter obtained leave to return to England. On the 10th of July Lord Carlisle writes from New York:—

"Sir John Wrotsley goes home in the packet that sailed yesterday, his situation is enviable, and except he should be taken by the Americans and brought back to Boston, he ought to be the happiest man in the world."

Sir John was one of the most popular men in the county, and after the elevation of Sir William Bagot to the Peerage was returned at the head of the poll in every election in which he took a part. This popularity was in a great measure owing to the openness and candour of his disposition, but he had the defects of his qualities, and they were accompanied by a frankness of speech which often made him enemies, and which must have been extremely inconvenient at this juncture to Lord Carlisle. On the 21st of July the latter writes:—

³ Annual Register. She was buried at Tottenhall on the 9th May 1778 (Tottenhall Register). "Lloyd's Evening Post," 1st to 4th May 1778, has "30th April. The Honble. Mrs. Wrottesley in Charles Street, Berkeley Square, mother to the Duchess of Grafton and also to the present Miss Wrottesley, one of the Maids of Honour to the Queen."

"Sir J. Wrotsley sailed in the 'Grantham' Packet about three days ago, and by this time is perhaps in the hands of the enemy. If he was taken by the Turks, instead of the Americans or French, it would do him no harm, for the vulgar notion is, that they cut out the tongue of those they make their prisoners, and the operation in every sense would be lucky for our relation."

It was plain from Sir John's letters home at this date, that he considered the further prosecution of the war to be hopeless; he points out in them that we only held the country within the line of our outposts, that the actual provisioning of our troops depended on the fleet, and that if we lost the command of the sea for even a limited period, the troops would starve or have to surrender. In fact he anticipated exactly what befell Lord Cornwallis in 1781, but it may easily be conceived how inconvenient the utterance of such sentiments would be to the members of the Commission who were negotiating at this time with the Americans.

Sir John Wrottesley's commission as Captain and Lieut.-Colonel of the First Regiment of Foot Guards was dated the 10th November 1770. He became Third-Major on the 23rd April 1779, with the rank of full Colonel in the Army, Second-Major in 1781, and First-Major on the 18th March 1782, when he came into the command of the First Battalion. On the 20th November 1782, he was gazetted Major-General in the Army, but according to the custom of the day he still remained in command of the First Regiment of Foot Guards, and so continued till the year 1785 when he was appointed Colonel of the 45th Foot.

On his return to England, after having served in command of a battalion of Guards at the seat of war, Sir John was considered an authority on American matters, and spoke frequently in the House. In November 1778, in the debate on the Address, he stated:—

"He could not give his approbation to further war with America, all that could be done, had been done. If 50,000 Russians were sent, they could do nothing. He thought that New York, Rode Island and Halifax should be garrisoned, and the rest of the Army brought away."

He concluded his speech by reprobating the terms offered to the Americans by the Commissioners.

On Dunning's motion in 1780 against the influence of the Crown, which was carried against the Government by a majority of 18, Sir John voted with the ayes. After this Parliament was dissolved, and Sir John was returned for the County, again at the head of the poll.

Nevertheless, in 1781, after news had been received of the surrender of Cornwallis, he spoke against Sir James Lowther's motion for putting an end to the American war. In his speech he said that he had come to the House with the intention of supporting it, but after what had fallen from Lord North he would vote against it. It was thrown out by a majority of 41.

During the recess, however, fresh disasters occurred. England had lost the command of the seas, Minorca had fallen, and all the West Indian Islands had been taken by the French, with the exception of Jamaica, Barbadoes and Antigua. Shortly after the meeting of Parliament in 1782 the Government majority had become so much reduced that Lord North resigned at the end of March.

The division which upset the Government took place on the 15th of March, on a motion by Sir John Rous, for a change of Ministry. On the 16th of March Selwyn writes to Lord Carlisle, "Gilbert voted with us. Sir John Wrottesley against us. Lord Trentham went away."

During the existence of the Coalition Ministry he was in opposition, but this administration was dismissed by the King on the 18th of December 1783, and a new Government was formed by William Pitt on the following day, which was joined by Earl Gower.

At the General Election of 1784 Sir John was returned for the third time as member for the County at the head of the poll; his colleague on this occasion was Lord Lewisham. He had been returned as a supporter of the Government, but his allegiance was sorely tried when Pitt proposed a tax upon coal in his first financial statement. In a speech which Sir John made on this occasion he professed himself a friend to ministers, but earnestly exhorted the Chancellor of the Exchequer (William Pitt) to abandon the intended tax on coal, which would go near to ruin the manufacturers of Staffordshire.¹ In the following week Pitt announced his intention of renouncing the tax and substituting another for it. Sir John then rose—

"And returned his thanks to the Rt. Honble. Gentleman for what he had just said and acknowledged the very handsome manner in which he had conducted the business. He added that he had received several letters from his constituents full of alarm, as soon as they had heard of the proposed tax and he had not the slightest doubt but that the alarm would have spread throughout the Kingdom if the Rt. Honble. Gentleman had persisted in his intention."²

In the same sitting of Parliament Sir John moved that the fines levied in Staffordshire for non-compliance with the

Militia Act should be applied towards building a new County Gaol. This was vehemently opposed, on the ground that it would be a reward instead of a punishment to the County, and after a somewhat acrimonious discussion, Pitt interposed and moved that in order to remove any doubt about the proper application of the money, a bill should be brought in to compel the receivers of the fines to pay them into the Treasury. This was approved, and Mr. Pitt and Sir John Wrottesley were ordered to prepare a bill for this purpose and to bring it up.¹

From this point I have nothing further to relate respecting him. He died on the 23rd April 1787 at the early age of 43, and was buried at Tettenhall on the 4th of May following.²

There is a picture of him at Wrottesley taken as a young man in the uniform of the Foot Guards. During his service in America he had been on terms of intimacy with the ill-fated Major André, who was hanged as a spy by General Washington in 1780. André was Deputy Adjutant-General of the English Forces under Sir William Howe, and an accomplished draughtsman and artist. Amongst his sketches which have been published is a blank profile cutting of Sir John Wrottesley, taken at Philadelphia in 1778.³

By his wife Frances Courtenay, who survived him, Sir John had five sons and three daughters. Of these—

John, the eldest, succeeded him as ninth Baronet.

Henry, the second son, was born at Wrottesley on the 25th October 1772,⁴ and was King's Scholar at Westminster, and elected to Christ Church, Oxford, on the 22nd of June 1791. He obtained the degree of B.A. in 1795 and M.A. in 1798. He was appointed Cursitor in Chancery in 1795, was called to the Bar in 1798, and made a Commissioner of Bankruptcy in 1799. In 1810, probably through the Gower interest, he was elected M.P. for Brackley, and represented that borough continuously until his death on the 17th of February 1825.⁵

He was an easy and fluent speaker, and as he confined himself to speaking only on questions with which he was well acquainted, such as legal matters, charitable trusts and such like, he was listened to with attention, and his speeches have been reported in Hansard.

At the commencement of his parliamentary career he was a decided Liberal. In 1812 he spoke against the bill brought in by the Perceval ministry to inflict the death penalty on persons convicted of destroying stocking and lace frames; the minority which voted with him consisted of 17 only, but it contained the names of Romilly, the two Barings, Whitbread and Bankes.

He spoke also strongly in favour of the reform of prisons, and for Sir Robert Peel's motion for a Committee on the employment of children in manufactories. He also spoke in favour of Brougham's motion for a Committee on the education of the lower classes.

After the session of 1816 he appears to have deserted his party and supported all the measures of Addington's ministry. In February 1817 he spoke in favour of the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act, which was proposed by the Government for the suppression of the destruction of mills and machinery by an organised conspiracy, and in 1821 he voted against Lord John Russell's motion for a reform of Parliament. He was a very popular member of society, and the friend and associate of the wits and dandies of the day. He is mentioned on more than one occasion in the Letters of George Selwyn. He died unmarried on the 17th of February 1825, aged 53.¹

Hugh, the third son, was a Lieut.-Colonel in the Bengal Establishment of the East Indian Company. He was born at Wrottesley on the 23rd July 1782,² and married, in 1811, Miss Emma Matthews, by whom he had a son Hugh, who died unmarried in India, and a daughter, Maria Catherine Charlotte, who married Robert Faithfull Fanshawe, the fifth son of the Rev. Charles Fanshawe of Denney, Hall, Essex.³ Robert Fanshawe had issue a son, Hugh Arnold Wrottesley Fanshawe, who entered the East Indian Telegraph Service, and is now living.

Charles, the fourth son, was born at Wrottesley on the 8th of July 1783.⁴ He matriculated at Christ Church on the 23rd April 1801, and obtained the degree of B.A. in 1805 and M.A. in 1808. He was elected Fellow of All Souls in 1808 and Proctor of the University in 1816, and obtained the degree of B.D. in 1817. In 1820 he became Rector of East Knoyle, co. Wilts, and remained there till his death on the 17th of February 1848. He was never married, and as he spent most of his holidays at Wrottesley, it is from him that I have derived the anecdotes of his father and grandfather, which have been introduced into this history.

Edward, the fifth son, was born at Wrottesley on the 19th of October 1785,¹ and entered the Royal Navy. He rose to the rank of Commander, and died at Newfoundland 29 July 1814, whilst in command of H.M.S. "Sabine," to which he had been appointed on the 3rd of October 1812. He married at Gibraltar, Anne, the daughter of the Rev. Thomas Tringham, and had by her an only son, Edward John Wrottesley, who was born at Oaken 9 November 1814, and matriculated at University College, Oxford, on the 23rd of May 1833. He passed out with Honours in 1837, and in the following year was ordained, and from 1841 to 1861 was Perpetual Curate of Tettenhall. He was presented to the Vicarage of Brewood by the Dean of Lichfield in 1863, and became Rural Dean in 1885 and Prebendary in 1895.² He married in 1847 Mariana Eugenia, daughter of John Jeffreys, Esq., of Fynone, and died on the 19th of January 1901, aged 87, leaving a son and a daughter. His mother, Anne, survived her husband for nearly 40 years, dying on the 15th May 1853. His son Francis John Wrottesley, now Vicar of Denstone, Staffordshire, was born in 1848, and married in 1876, Agnes Mabel, daughter of Frederic Freeland, Esq., and has three sons now living, Francis Robert, Lieut. R.N., born 1877, Edward Algernon, born 1879, and Frederic John, born 1880. The daughter, Anna Caroline, married the Rev. Edward Salt, Rector of Standon, Staffordshire, and has issue.

Of the daughters of Sir John Wrottesley, the eldest Fanny was born at Wrottesley 12 Dec. 1773,¹ and died unmarried in 1814.³

Charlotte, the third daughter, was born on the 7th of October 1779.¹ She was twice married, her first husband, the Rev. John Hellyer, died in 1823, and three years afterwards she married Rear-Admiral Gordon. She left no issue by either marriage.

Louisa, the fourth daughter, was born on the 24th of November 1780,¹ and was appointed Maid of Honour to Queen Charlotte, being the third member of the family who had held the appointment. She died unmarried on the 11th of May 1842, at apartments in St. James Palace, which had been granted to her on her retirement.²

Mary, the fifth daughter, died in childhood on the 8th of January 1788.²

Frances, the mother of Sir John, after the marriage of her son, lived at the dower house of the family at Oaken, and died there on the 24th February 1828. The Annual Register of that year says:—

“At Oaken near Wolverhampton in her 80th year The Hon^{ble} Frances, relict of Major-General Sir John Wrottesley, Bart., M.P. for co. Stafford, eldest sister to the Dowager Countess Rosslyn, and aunt to Viscount Courtenay, the late Lady Charles Somerset, The Countess of Lisbon (Lisburne), Lady George Thynne, The Countess of Mountnorris, the late Lady Robert Somerset etc. She was the third daughter of William first Viscount Courtenay by Lady Frances Finch, daughter of the second Earl of Aylesford. Her Ladyship was a Maid of Honour to Queen Charlotte and was married to Sir John Wrottesley on the 7th of June 1770, who died in 1787, and by whom she had the present Baronet, four other sons, and four daughters.”

SIR JOHN WROTTESELEY, THE NINTH BARONET, AND FIRST BARON WROTTESELEY, A.D. 1792—1841.

John, the ninth Baronet, was born at Wrottesley on the 25th of October 1771.¹ At the date of his father's death he was aged fifteen years and four months. As he wished to follow his father's profession, an Ensign's Commission was purchased for him in the 35th Foot, in the same year in which his father died. Up to this time he had been brought up at Westminster School, but on obtaining a Commission he was sent to a well known military tutor of the day, M. de Pignerolles of Angers. This was the same military school at which the Duke of Wellington received his early training, and there was formerly at Wrottesley a letter from M. de Pignerolles to Sir John Wrottesley, dated 1788, in which the writer mentioned that M. Perigaut, the banker, had informed him from Paris that his (Sir John Wrottesley's) son was to pay 200 louis yearly, as Mr. Wesley did, but this was not enough, "Mr. Wesley had no servant and your son has one."¹ Arthur Wesley's first Commission was dated the 7th March 1787. Sir John Wrottesley's Commission was dated the 24th September in the same year, but there was a difference of nearly two years in their respective ages, for Arthur Wesley (as the name was then written) was born on the 1st May 1769.

On the 25th June 1790, Sir John was transferred as a Lieutenant from the 35th Foot to the 29th—the Worcester-shire Regiment of Foot, and joined the regiment at Dover Castle.

War being expected with Spain, and the Admiralty being short of Marines, the regiment was sent to Portsmouth, and on the 23rd July of this year, 194 men were put on board H.M.S. "Egmont," 74 guns, for service afloat.

On the 21st September Lieut. Sir John Wrottesley embarked on board the same ship to relieve Lieut. Saunders, ordered to head-quarters. On the 15th of November the detachment was transferred to the "Royal William," and soon afterwards discharged. The regiment shortly afterwards returned to Dover Castle.

On the 15th February 1791, the regiment took the Windsor duty, Lord Cathcart being in command. In July 1791 they were encamped at Egham Wick, and were inspected by the King. In the summer of 1792 they were encamped on Caesar's Camp at Aldershot.²

On the 26th of February 1793, Sir John was promoted to a Captaincy, and exchanged into the 16th Light Dragoons.³ In January of this year, the French Convention had declared war against England and Holland, and a British force, commanded by the Duke of York, landed at Ostend in April and joined a body of Dutch troops, which were put under the command of the Duke. The 16th Light Dragoons formed a portion of the Duke's army, and Sir John was present with his regiment at the siege of Valenciennes, and the other operations which resulted in the expulsion of the French from Flanders. In August the Duke, at the head of the British and Hanoverian troops, formed the siege of Dunkirk, but owing to the action of the Austrian army, which failed to cover the operations, was forced to raise the siege, leaving all his heavy guns in the possession of the enemy. On the 28th of April 1795, Sir John obtained a majority in the 32nd Foot, but by this time he had taken a distaste for the military profession, owing to the countless blunders committed by the Allies in 1793 and 1794, and he threw up his commission¹ and commenced the life of a country gentleman at home. He had come of age on the 25th of October 1792, and had entered into possession at the same date of considerable property after a minority of six years. On the 23rd June 1795, he married in London by special licence Lady Caroline Bennet, the eldest daughter of Charles, the fourth Earl of Tankerville.² On the 2nd March 1799, he was elected member for the City of Lichfield, vice Lord Granville Leveson-Gower, who had accepted the Chiltern Hundreds. At this date, Lichfield returned two members to Parliament, and the sitting member was Thomas Anson of Shugborough, who was created Viscount Anson in 1806.

In the autumn of 1800, serious riots occurred owing to the high price of bread. In many parts of the country, and especially in Birmingham and Wolverhampton, fierce attacks were made on the persons and property of bakers and other tradesmen dealing in corn. Sir John Wrottesley took the part of the latter, and incurred from this cause the enmity of the lower classes in Wolverhampton and the black country, and a large mob of colliers and others marched to Wrottesley with the intention of breaking his windows and perhaps of doing further mischief. Sir John rode out to meet them, and fortunately came across them before they reached the house, and by his speech so far pacified them that they desisted from damaging his property. Adverting to the disturbances which had taken place in Wolverhampton and Birmingham, he pointed out to the leaders of the mob that the only effect had been to force the bakers and dealers in grain to close their establishments and to increase the scarcity and dearness of bread.³ His conduct on this occasion appears to have attracted the notice of the Prime Minister, for Mr. Pitt wrote to him on the 28th of October 1800 asking him to move the Address to the King at the next sitting of Parliament. In his letter the Minister dwelt at length on the high price of corn and the importance of taking measures to reduce it.¹

Parliament met on the 1st of November. Sir John Wrottesley's speech on moving the Address occupies three or four columns of the Parliamentary History. As might be expected, he lays great stress in it on the importance of non-interference with the course of trade and of protecting the dealers in grain from the attacks of a misguided multitude.

On Pitt's resignation in 1801, and the accession of the Addington Ministry, Sir John went into Opposition, and spoke frequently in Parliament. On the 7th of March he moved for a Committee to enquire into the conduct of Ministers, and the inadequate measures taken at the time of the insurrection in Dublin of July 1800, and the murder of the Chief Justice, Lord Kilwarden. There was a majority of 96 in favour of Ministers, but all the leaders of the Whig party voted for the motion, and the minority list contained the names of Grenville, Leveson-Gower, Whitbread, Wilberforce, Windham, Grey, Canning, Morpeth, Sir Francis Burdett, and Lord Henry Petty, afterwards Marquis of Lansdowne.

In April 1804, Pitt moved a vote of censure on Ministers for their insufficient measures of defence, and Sir John spoke and voted in favour of it. On a division the Ministerial majority fell to 37. His opposition to Ministers, however, never took a factious form, for when Sheridan moved the rejection of the Additional Forces bill, he supported the Government and voted in favour of it. In the same Session he spoke in favour of Wilberforce's bill for the Suppression of the Slave Trade.

be fed upon potatoes like the native Irish. Several scurrilous lampoons were printed in Staffordshire, in which he was christened "Potatoo Jack," and the mob had filled their pockets with potatoes, intending to break his windows with them. I have been told, however, on credible authority, that it was not so much Sir John's eloquence on this occasion as an invitation to the mob to go to the back of the house for a drink of beer, which saved the situation.

Pitt resumed office in 1805, but died shortly afterwards, and at the General Election of 1806 Sir John lost his seat for Lichfield, the successful candidate being Mr. Venables Vernon, afterwards Vernon-Harcourt. He remained out of Parliament till the 23rd July 1823, when he was returned for the County in place of Sir John Fenton Boughy, who had died; the other member was Edward John Littleton, afterwards created Lord Hatherton.

It was during this interval that he established the bank at Wolverhampton in conjunction with Mr. Francis Holyoake, the head of a long established firm of solicitors in that town. The bank drew on Hanbury's in London, and appears to have been a very successful undertaking so long as it was in the hands of the original partners. Its establishment coincided with the great "boom" in the iron trade, produced by the invention of the Hot Blast, and the bank by its advances materially assisted in the development of the industry and made large profits. From 1822 to the end of 1833 the bank was carried on by Sir John Wrottesley and Mr. Francis Holyoake. In 1834 Sir John retired from the partnership and the bank was carried on by Sir Francis Goodricke, Bart., and Mr. George Holyoake down to the time of the sale of it to the Midland Banking Company.¹

¹ The rise and fall of the Holyoakes would afford material for a romance. A Mr. George Holyoake, a member of an old yeoman family of co. Warwick, was practising as a solicitor in Wolverhampton in the early part of the eighteenth century, and died in 1769. He was succeeded by his nephew Francis Holyoake, who married Elizabeth the sister of Mr. Thomas Pearson (Pershouse) of Tettenhall, and died leaving his business and a considerable fortune to his nephew Francis Holyoake, the son of his brother Thomas. The last-named Francis married Dorothy the daughter of Robert Lyttelton, and the niece and eventually sole heiress of Philip Lyttelton, of Studley Castle, Warwickshire, who represented a younger branch of Lord Lyttelton's family. By her he had several children; the eldest of these, Francis, was born in 1797, and by his skill as a sportsman so ingratiated himself with Sir Harry Goodricke, a well-known sporting Baronet, that the latter left him the whole of his fortune. The author of "Silk and Scarlet" describes Francis Holyoake as the finest rider across country of his day. Quoting Dick Christian, who had been Huntsman of the Quorn, and was describing his former master, Sir Harry Goodricke, he says "Mr. Holyoake and him first met on the moors, then Sir Harry came to Ketton, and after that they two took stables at Melton together. He was a strong, resolute man on a horse, but couldn't ride like Mr. Holyoake. He was first man at one time, was Mr. Holyoake, for a 20 minutes thing, to see him ride Brilliant, my word!"

Sir Harry Goodricke died in the prime of life, and was the last of an ancient family. This took place in 1833, and by his will Francis Holyoake came into possession of Ribstone, in Yorkshire, and assumed the name of Goodricke. His rise was now rapid. In February 1835, during the short-lived administration of Sir Robert Peel, he was made a Baronet, and in the same year entered Parliament as member for Staffordshire in the place of Mr. Littleton, who had been raised to the Peerage. The fortune so lightly won was as lightly lost; all the landed property was sold before his death,

On his return to Parliament in 1823, at the age of 52, he occupied a somewhat unique position. As an old soldier who had seen service in the field and commanded a regiment of Militia, he spoke with effect on most military questions; as a man of large landed property (1,500 acres of which he farmed himself), he was a recognized authority on all agricultural matters; whilst as head of a successful banking business in the Midlands, he was brought into close connection with the commercial classes. It may be easily conceived, therefore, that he occupied a position of some eminence in the House, and I have been informed by the late Lord Hatherton, who was his colleague for many years, that owing to the independence of his character and the soundness of his judgment, no private member was held in higher esteem in the House, but, he added, that although he spoke frequently in the House and was always listened to with attention and respect, he never became a really fluent or easy speaker. At the date of his re-entry into Parliament, Lord Liverpool's Ministry was still in power.

In the Session of 1824 he advocated the introduction of a decimal coinage. His plan was to coin a double shilling and to make it the equivalent of a hundred farthings. He shewed that the effect would be merely to add 4 per cent. to the value of the penny and farthing. The motion was opposed by Mr. Wallace, the Master of the Mint, on the ground that the inconvenience to the general public would far outweigh the benefit of the measure to the commercial classes. The proposal obtained very little support, and Sir John withdrew his motion.¹

In the following Session he voted in favour of Sir Francis Burdett's Bill for the relief of the Roman Catholics; the majority for it in a very full House, on the third reading, was 21, but it was thrown out by the Lords.

and he eventually died a poor man. He married in 1827 Elizabeth, the sister of Mr. George Payne, of Sulby, a well-known man on the turf, and who occupied for many years a leading position in sporting circles. By her he had a large family, including three sons, but these all died without leaving any issue, and the title is now extinct. The only memento of the family now left is, appropriately enough, the well-known covert in the Melton Hunt called Goodricke's Gorse.

The younger brothers of Sir Francis likewise rose to positions of some local importance. Thomas served in the Army, and was for many years Master of the Albrighton Hunt; he married Charlotte, daughter of the Rev. Charles Whitmore, and left a son, Thomas, now in Australia. George, the partner in the Bank, married a daughter of Sir George Pigot, of Patshull, and was J.P. and Deputy-Lieutenant of co. Salop, but before his death he had dissipated a considerable fortune, and left his family in impoverished circumstances.

In 1826, on the motion for the renewal of the Bank Charter, he moved the rejection of the bill, and his speech on this occasion occupies nine columns of Hansard. He was supported by the heads of all the great banking houses, such as Baring, Robarts, Abel Smith and Farquhar, but Government obtained a majority for the bill.¹

In the same year he supported Lord John Russell's motion for the Reform of Parliament, but the majority against it at this time was 124.

It would be tedious to name all his votes, and it is only necessary to mention that he supported all the Liberal measures of the day, such as the repeal of the Test and Corporation Acts, Reform of Parliament, the removal of the Disabilities of Roman Catholics and Jews, and spoke in favour of many of them.

In 1828 he spoke against the Government proposal to abolish the Militia, and in favour of increasing its efficiency. It is worthy of note that the Duke of Wellington was Prime Minister at this date, and it was during his administration that the Militia was abolished and the Transport train of the Army done away with. It has often been remarked by military men who know these facts that the Duke was the remote cause of all our disasters in the Crimea. He appeared, at this date, to consider that the country would never be at war again.

In 1829 Sir John presented a petition from Wolverhampton in favour of the Roman Catholic claims, and spoke in support of it. In the course of his speech he mentioned that the population of Wolverhampton at that date was 22,000, of which 2,760 had signed the petition.

In 1830 he brought forward a motion against the Truck System, which consisted in the payment of labourers' wages in goods instead of money. This proposal was eventually carried by other hands, but he was the first member of Parliament to draw attention to the evils of the system.¹

In the same year he moved for a Select Committee to enquire into the duties of the Commissioners of Hackney Coaches and the existing state of the public carriages of the Metropolis. The motion was agreed to, and the eventual result of it was the extinction of the "Jarvey" and the old hackney coach, and the introduction of the present cabs.¹

On the 15th of November of this year he voted in favour of Sir Henry Parnell's motion for an enquiry into the details of the Civil List, which threw out the Duke of Wellington's Ministry. The majority was 29.¹

The next three years were taken up with the struggle over the Reform Bill, the story of which is too well known to bear repetition. Sir John voted steadily for it throughout all its stages, and spoke frequently upon the various clauses in Committee.

The first Reform Parliament met on the 29th of January 1833. The Act had divided Staffordshire into two constituencies, North and South. Sir Oswald Mosley and Edward Manningham Buller were returned for the Northern Division, and Edward John Littleton and Sir John Wrottesley for the Southern Division. The new constituencies all elected men of note in their various localities. Stoke-on-Trent returned Josiah Wedgwood and John Davenport, both great names in the Pottery trade; Walsall returned Charles Smith Foster, an eminent iron-master, and Wolverhampton returned William Wolrych Whitmore and Richard Fryer, a well-known banker.

In this year Sir John spoke a second time against the renewal and extension of the Bank Charter, in which it was proposed to make all their notes a legal tender. He was supported by Sir Robert Peel, Sir George Philips, Mark Philips, the member for Manchester, Sir John Hanmer, Herries, Sydney Herbert, and W. E. Gladstone, but the Government carried their bill by a large majority.¹

In 1834 he gave up his connection with the Wolverhampton Bank, owing to the retirement of his original partner, Francis Holyoake, who died in the following year. Mr. Holyoake was succeeded by his two sons, Francis Goodricke and George Holyoake. The latter was a solicitor in the town without any experience in banking business. Francis Goodricke had come into possession of large property, but was only known as a leading man in sporting circles, of extravagant habits, and a gambler on the turf. He was likewise a Tory with political views, and at this date was subscribing largely to party funds. The money he was spending in this way was obtained, in the first instance, by advances from the bank, and would have placed Sir John in a very anomalous position.² It was in this year the King dismissed his Ministers and called in the Duke of Wellington, who took all the Seals, pending the return of Sir Robert Peel, who was travelling abroad. Sir Robert Peel formed a Ministry in December, after his return to England, and immediately dissolved Parliament.

² Up to this time the bank had been very prosperous, their profits having exceeded £40,000, of which a moiety fell to the share of Sir John Wrottesley. Ex Inf. George Holyoake, Esq.

The General Election which followed was a momentous one for the Tories, who spared no pains or money to obtain a majority in Parliament. In this they were unsuccessful, but in February 1835 Sir Francis Goodricke was created a Baronet, and there is no doubt he subscribed very largely to the Tory funds upon this occasion.

On a vacancy occurring in South Staffordshire, by the promotion of Mr. Littleton to the Peerage in May 1835, Sir Francis obtained the vacant seat after a severe contest. Up to this time it had been considered a safe seat for the Liberals, and the election of a Tory due in a great measure to a very large expenditure upon the constituency, was the cause of a very serious riot in Wolverhampton, the mob assailing the Old Swan Tavern, where the Committee of Sir Francis sat, and breaking all the windows. The magistrates, fearing further mischief, sent for the assistance of the military, and a troop of the First Dragoon Guards, under the command of Captain Manning, arrived from Birmingham. They were drawn up in the Old Market Place (now Queen Square), and on being ordered to clear the streets, a man in the crowd stabbed one of the troop horses in the ribs. The Dragoons, on perceiving the horse fall dead in a pool of blood, became exasperated, broke loose from their officers and attacked the mob with the flat sides of their sabres, inflicting a very severe beating upon them, during which some of their swords were broken. The troops even followed the retreating crowds into the adjoining streets, and a few shots were fired from their carbines. Fortunately nobody was killed, but there was a large number of wounded, and a loud outcry was raised against the military, which, under the influence of party feeling, was no doubt greatly exaggerated.¹

With a view of calming the excitement, Sir John Wrottesley pressed upon Lord John Russell, who was then Home Secretary, the advisability of a public enquiry on the spot, by a Commission sent down for the purpose. This was refused by the Government in the first instance, but after a debate in Parliament, and a strong speech delivered in favour of it by Sir John, they gave way and conceded the enquiry. During the speech which he made on this occasion, he made one of those slips of the tongue which are the delight of the House of Commons. He stated "he had been a magistrate for the County of Stafford for forty years, and had been concerned in the greater part of the riots which had taken place in that district."¹ When the laughter had subsided he corrected himself by saying, "he should have said he was engaged in suppressing those riots;" but the idea of the respectable and sedate member for South Staffordshire (he was then sixty-four years of age) having been concerned in all the riots of that district, must have been a source of unbounded delight to the House.

At the opening of Parliament in February 1836, Sir John was asked by Lord Melbourne to move the Address. His speech will be found in Hansard, but it was a quiet time, and it contains nothing of interest. In his preamble he said, "he could not plead the inexperience usually urged as a claim on the indulgence of the House." It is curious to reflect that he had moved the Address thirty-six years before, on the request of Mr. Pitt, when the latter was in the plenitude of his power, and at the date he was then addressing the House the memory of the great Minister had become but the shadow of a name.

It will be seen from the above sketch that his career in Parliament was not an undistinguished one. At the General Election of 1837 he lost his seat for South Staffordshire,² and shortly before the Coronation of the Queen in the following year, Lord Melbourne wrote and offered him a Peerage. His patent is dated 11th July 1838.

He took his seat in the House of Lords, and in the Session of 1839 spoke against Lord Brougham's Bill for the regulation of Beer Houses, and voted amongst the non-Contents with Lord Melbourne and the Lord Chancellor Cottenham, but the Liberal Ministry had not a majority in the House of Lords, and the bill was passed. He likewise spoke on the Tythe Commutation Act of the same Session.¹

From this point there is nothing further to record respecting him. He died on the 16th of March 1841, and was buried at Tettenhall, on the 23rd March, a great concourse of people following his remains to the grave. After his burial, the ancient family vault was finally closed. At the time it was sealed up it held twenty generations of the family.³

His first wife, Lady Caroline Wrottesley, died in London,

² Sir Francis Goodricke also lost his seat. The two new members were Viscount Ingestre and the Hon. George Anson. Sir John Wrottesley had no intention of standing, and had issued no address, but stood at the last moment to obviate some advantage which the Tories would have obtained by the absence of a second Whig candidate.

aged forty-five, on the 7th March 1818, and was buried at Tettenhall.¹ Sir John married secondly, on the 19th May 1819, Julia, the daughter of John Conyers, Esq., of Copt Hall, Essex, a well-known sporting character. She was the widow of Sir John's brother-in-law, Captain the Hon. John Astley Bennet, of the Royal Navy,² and one of the most agreeable women of her day. As Julia Conyers she is mentioned in Lord Palmerston's letters. She died 29th September 1860, and was buried at Tettenhall.

By his first wife he had six sons and eight daughters:—

1. John, who was born at Wrotesley on the 5th of August 1798,¹ and succeeded as second Baron.
2. Charles Alexander, the second son, was born at Wrotesley 20 October 1799,¹ and obtained a commission as Cornet in the 16th Lancers (his father's old regiment) on the 21st of December 1815. The regiment moved to Ireland in March 1816, and in the following year took up the Dublin duty. In this year Earl Talbot became Lord Lieutenant, and Charles Wrotesley was appointed one of the Viceregal aides-de-camp, and appears to have held the appointment till Lord Talbot's resignation in 1821. In the following year he embarked with the regiment for India, and after five months' voyage in a troopship arrived at Calcutta in December 1822. In December 1825 the regiment took the field as part of an expeditionary force, which had been collected under Lord Combermere for the siege of Bhurtpoor. The fortress was captured 18th January 1826, and the prize money amounted to £250 for each Subaltern. The Lieut.-Colonels, of which there were two, obtained £1,500 each. Out of this prize-money the officers of the Regiment subscribed £5,000 for the relief of the widows of officers and soldiers who had been killed in the siege.³

He obtained his Lieutenantcy 5th July 1821, and was promoted to an unattached Captaincy, 10th June 1825, but the notification of this did not arrive before the regiment had taken the field. He was appointed Captain 43rd Regiment on the 19th of September 1826, and was pro-

He obtained a regimental Lieut.-Coloneley on the 3rd July 1839, and served in command of the 29th Regiment till the 8th of April 1842, when he exchanged to half-pay on the regiment being ordered to India. This was done on medical advice, as it was considered that his health would not stand another turn of service in the tropics, but he lost by it the Sutlej campaign, and the probability of employment as a Brigadier-General in all the actions of the Punjaub under Lord Gough. He retired from the Army, 16th April 1847, and died unmarried at Clifton, 24th February 1861.

3. Robert, the third son, was born at Wrottesley¹ 2nd June 1801, and matriculated at Christ Church, Oxford, 22nd October 1818, obtaining the degree of B.A. in 1822 and M.A. in 1825. In the latter year he was appointed Perpetual Curate of Tettenhall and Principal Official of the Peculiar.² He married, in 1828, Georgiana, daughter of Sir George Pigot of Patshull, and was presented by Lord Ward to the Rectory of Himley, co. Stafford in 1830. He died, 20th January 1838, leaving no issue. He was buried at Tettenhall on the 27th of January.¹
4. George Thomas, the fourth son, died 8th April 1818, aged ten.¹
5. Walter, the fifth son, was born 8th April 1810,¹ and matriculated at Christ Church, Oxford, 28th June 1827. He obtained the degree of B.A. in 1831, and in the same year was elected a Fellow of All Souls'. He afterwards became a Barrister at Law, Lincoln's Inn, and married, 22nd June 1843, Marianne Lucy, the only daughter of Colonel Archer, formerly of the 16th Lancers. He died, 2nd May 1872, leaving issue, Walter Francis, who entered into holy orders, and a daughter, Lucy Edith, who married, 9th September 1869, Charles Gilbert, the second son of John Moyer Heathcote of Connington Castle, and has issue, two daughters and a son: Mrs. Walter Wrottesley died, 29th

6. Edward Bennet, the sixth son, was born 26th July 1811,¹ and matriculated at New Inn Hall, Oxford, 7th February 1833. He married, 8th January 1846, Ellen Charlotte, daughter of George Rush, Esq., of Elsenham Hall, Essex, and died 20 Jan. 1892, leaving issue by her (who died 29th October 1878), Alfred Edward, who was born 29th December 1855, and entered the Corps of Royal Engineers in 1874, becoming Major in 1894. In 1899, on the outbreak of the Boer War, he was appointed Director of Telegraphs with the Field Force, and was given the local rank of Lieut.-Colonel, but was unfortunately drowned whilst on passage to South Africa on the 26th of October. He was an officer of much promise and of considerable professional ability. He married, 20th April 1881, at Halifax, Nova Scotia, Ellen Mary Isabel, daughter of Major-General Drayson, R.A., and left a son, Hugh Edward, born at Halifax, N.S., 12th February 1882, now a Lieutenant in the Rifle Brigade, and a daughter, Maud Ellen.

Edward Bennet Wrottesley had also two daughters, Clara Bennet, who died unmarried, 25th Sept. 1882, aged 32, and Ellen Maria, who married, 10th July 1884, the Rev. Canon Charles Rowland Haydock Hill, Rector of Holy Trinity, Dorchester, and has issue, a son.

The daughters of John, first Baron Wrottesley, were:—

1. Caroline, born at Wrottesley 31st December 1797, died an infant, 1798.¹
2. Emma died an infant, 8th March 1804.¹
3. Henrietta, born in 1805; married, 10th Jan. 1832, Henry van Straubenzee of Spennithorne, co. York, formerly of the 14th Light Dragoons, and afterwards Colonel of the West York Militia, who died 31 May 1892. She died, 13th May 1893, aged eighty-eight, leaving, with other issue, Major-General Turner van Straubenzee, C.B., born 1838, and Mary, who married in 1866 Sir William Chaytor, Bart., of Crofts Hall, Darlington.

JOHN, THE SECOND BARON WROTTESELEY, AND TENTH
BARONET, 1841—1867.

John, the second Baron, was born at Wrottesley on the 5th of August 1798¹ and like his father and grandfather before him, was educated at Westminster School, where he remained from January 1810 to 29th July 1814. He matriculated at Christ Church, Oxford, in May 1816, and applying himself principally to mathematics and astronomy, he passed out with the distinction of a First Class in 1819. He obtained the Degree of M.A. in 1823, and was made Honorary Student of Christ Church in 1860.² On leaving the University he took up the study of the Law as a profession, was called to the Bar in February 1823, and for the next nine years practised as a conveyancer and Equity draughtsman.

In 1820 he joined the Astronomical Society at the time of its first formation, and afterwards acted as its Secretary, and later on, as President.

He married at Brewood Church, 28th July 1821, Sophia Elizabeth, the third daughter of Thomas Giffard, Esq., of Chillington,³ by his wife, Lady Charlotte Courtenay. After his marriage he took a house at 5, Powis Place, Bloomsbury, and erected a small transit and a transit circle on the sill of his dressing-room. At this time he appears to have been a very hard worker, for he was reading and practising law during the day-time and observing and computing at night often till three o'clock in the morning, but the fascination which his astronomical pursuits exercised over his mind at this period, produced a weakness of the eyes which never deserted him, and must have been a cause of great trouble to him in after life. He was one of the original founders of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge, and was placed on the Committee in 1827. He wrote for it the article on "Navigation," which was published in the "Library of Useful Knowledge," and he also took charge of the astronomical articles in the "British Almanac," which was published by the same Society.

In 1829 he removed from London to Blackheath, the confined air of Powis Place being considered detrimental to the health of his children. Here he built an observatory in his garden, and set up the instruments which are described in the "Memoirs" of the Royal Astronomical Society. At this time he was still working at the Law, and had to leave Blackheath early every morning in a curious old-fashioned public coach, occupying a place in the "Basket" behind, which held four persons. For his new observatory he required the services of an assistant, and he instructed in astronomy and mathematics a very intelligent legal clerk, Mr. John Hartnup, who had entered his service in 1829. To the ability, zeal, and energy of Mr. Hartnup¹ he attributed, in a great measure, the success of his "Catalogue of the Right Ascensions of 1318 Stars," which gained him the Gold Medal of the Astronomical Society in 1839, and established his reputation with foreign astronomers.

In 1831, after the passing of the Reform Bill, he was appointed one of the Boundary Commission for the delimitation of the new County and Borough Boundaries. The President of the Commission was the Right Honble. J. Abercromby, the Chief Baron of Scotland, and amongst the Commissioners were many who rose into eminence in after life. Of these may be named Mr. E. J. Littleton, afterwards Lord Hatherton, Lieutenant Thomas Drummond, R.E., afterwards Under Secretary for Ireland, Lieutenant Dawson, R.E., afterwards Director of the Ordnance Survey, Captain F. Beaufort, R.N., afterwards Hydrographer of the Admiralty, the Rev. R. Sheepshanks, a well-known astronomer, Mr. Bellenden Kerr, the Conveyancer and Equity Surveyor, and John Wrottesley, afterwards President of the Royal Society.

Nearly all these names are to be found on the Committee of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge, of which Lord Brougham was the Chairman, and these as well as the lawyers on the Commission were doubtless nominated by him; the Engineer officers had been lent to the Commission by the Ordnance Office, but as soon as the names were announced by Lord Althorp in the House of Commons, the Opposition raised a loud outcry, complaining that many of the Commissioners were political partisans of the Government or closely connected with their supporters, objecting specially on these grounds to Mr. Littleton and Mr. Wrottesley.

Lord Althorp and Lord John Russell defended the choice of the Commissioners, and protested against any idea of political partisanship in their selection, their nomination being due in nearly every case to their legal or scientific acquirements, and after a somewhat heated wrangle the storm blew over. The Commissioners were unpaid, but they were allowed liberal travelling expenses by the Treasury.

The selection of John Wrottesley was, without doubt, due to Lord Brougham, and it was probably owing to the same influence that he was appointed shortly afterwards one of the Poor Law Commissioners. The report of this Commission effected a revolution in our Poor Law system, and is the basis on which the administration of the Law has been carried out ever since, but at the date of its promulgation it was fiercely assailed in many quarters.

In 1841 he succeeded to the title and estates, and soon after taking up his residence at Wrottesley he erected the Observatory, which forms a conspicuous object from the high road between Wolverhampton and Shrewsbury. The Observatory and its instruments have been fully described in the "Memoirs" of the Royal Astronomical Society; it became well known to astronomers on account of the continuous work carried on within it. The work of observation was committed to the care of well trained assistants, one of whom, Mr. Joseph Hough, still resides in the neighbourhood, and exercises a general supervision over its contents, although no observations have been carried on for many years.

Shortly after the completion of the building, one of his neighbours sent him the following lines:—

"A stedfast Whig, in Melbourne's Liberal reign, Sir John at length obtained a Baron's glory,
His son now reigns o'er Wrottesley's fair domain,
And passers-by cry out 'Observ-a-tory.'"

In 1841 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society, and was shortly afterwards appointed a member of the Committee, on which he served till his death in 1867.

Shortly before the meeting of Parliament in 1850, he was asked by Lord Lansdowne to move the Address in the House of Lords. It was the Session which followed the so-called Papal aggression, and the Durham letter of Lord John Russell. The popular outcry had been so violent that the Government bent before the storm, and Lord Lansdowne stated in his letter that it would be necessary to legislate upon the subject. Lord Wrottesley objected very strongly to any bill of pains and penalties against the Catholics, and declined under these circumstances to move the Address in the House. His reply apparently was not to the liking of Lord Lansdowne, for he informed the writer that his relations with the Government afterwards were not on so cordial a footing as they had been previous to this episode. In 1855, however, on his writing to Lord Lansdowne that the recall of Sir John Burgoyne from the Crimea and the way it had been announced by Lord Panmure in the House would cast a slur upon the reputation of a very gallant officer, and that his relationship to Sir John would justify him in asking a question in the House on the subject, Lord Lansdowne got up in the House and delivered a very eloquent eulogium upon Sir John, declaring that there was no intention whatever of casting any reflection upon him by his recall from the seat of war.¹

His rank as a Peer, combined with his scientific attainments, led to his employment as President of several Royal Commissions of a quasi-scientific nature. The most important of these was one to investigate and report upon the strains to which iron railway bridges were exposed by the passage over them of heavy trains. Accidents had occurred by the failure of some of these bridges, after they had been passed by the Government Surveyors, and in other cases the Government Engineers had refused to certify bridges as safe on grounds which the Civil Engineers considered to be unsound and vexatious. Up to this date the test of such bridges had been one of a statical nature only, by noting the deflection caused by heavy weights at rest upon them; but Engineers had begun to suspect that a dynamic force was exercised by the passage over bridges of heavy weights at a very high velocity, and the Commission was called upon to investigate this subject. Lord Wrottesley had always retained his fondness for pure mathematics, and at one of the early meetings of the Commission proposed that an attempt should be made to procure, if possible, a mathematical formula for such strains, and the solution of the problem was given to Mr (now Sir George) Stokes, who was the Senior Wrangler of his day and Professor of Mathematics at Cambridge. It was a very difficult analytical problem, but by making certain assumptions, Mr. Stokes was able to produce a mathematical expression for these forces, which was found of some practical utility, and established his reputation abroad, as well as in England, as one of the leading mathematicians of his day.

In 1853, by a speech in the House of Lords, Lord Wrottesley drew the attention of the Government to the writings of Lieutenant Maury, of the United States Navy, on improvements in navigation and on the Law of Storms. His object in this was to interest the public as well as the Government in a scheme for systematic observations with a view of determining the course and periods of the destructive hurricanes and cyclones of tropical climates. In this scheme he obtained the co-operation of Colonel James, R.E., the Director of the Ordnance Survey, and of Sir John Burgoyne, the Inspector General of Fortifications. The latter recommended to the Secretary of State for War that uniform meteorological observations should be taken at all the Royal Engineer stations which were scattered about in various parts of the globe. On the War Office concurring in this, the Treasury granted money for the requisite instruments, and a syllabus and instructions were drawn up by Colonel James and issued to all Royal Engineer stations. These observations were carried on for some years, but the cost of tabulating and printing them was found to be so heavy that the Treasury objected to the expense, and the scheme not being supported by the learned societies, it was eventually discontinued. The scheme appears to have been started on too ambitious a scale, and it would have been better to have confined the observations to those parts of the globe which were the scene of these great atmospheric disturbances. Lord Wrottesley's speech was afterwards published as a pamphlet, and attracted a good deal of attention abroad as well as in England.

On 30th November 1854 he succeeded Lord Rosse as President of the Royal Society, and held the office until 1858, when he resigned, and was succeeded by Sir Benjamin Brodie. In 1860 he was President of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, and delivered the usual inaugural address. The meeting took place at Oxford, and was signalised by the famous contest between Wilberforce, the Bishop of Oxford, and Professor Huxley on Darwin's theory of the Origin of Man. On the 2nd July 1860 the University conferred on him the degree of D.C.L. In September 1865, at the opening of the Birmingham and Midland Institute, he delivered an address on "The Recent Applications of the Spectrum Analysis to Astronomical Phenomena," which was afterwards published, and in the following year he spoke in the House of Lords on the "Public School Bills," advocating strongly the cause of science as a branch of education. In addition to these pamphlets and addresses and his contributions to the Royal Astronomical Society, he published in 1859 "Thoughts on Government and Legislation," which was translated into German in 1869.

He died at Wrottesley on the 27th October 1867, aged 69, and was buried at Tettenhall. Up to the time of his death in 1867 he was the only person who had held the office of President in each of the three great scientific societies, viz.—the Royal, the Astronomical, and the British Association.

The following characteristic sketch of him occurs in an obituary article in the "Athenæum" newspaper of November 1867, written by one who must have known him well:—

"Lord Wrottesley was a strong man in all good work, but he did not make much show even in science, and hardly ever came forward in political life. He was, we believe, one of the Boundary Commissioners under the first Reform Bill. His characteristics were plain manners, kind feelings, sound judgment and useful intellect. A stranger at the Royal Society would look with some surprise when he saw a quiet gentleman, utterly devoid of all mark of pretension, step into the chair of Newton, and his surprise would be augmented if he chanced to be told that the unassuming President was a man of such splendid descent, that many held his father to have derogated when he accepted a Peerage."

With this flourish of trumpets I may fitly close my account of him.

He had five sons and two daughters. Of these—

Arthur, the eldest son, succeeded his father.

Charles, the second son, was born at 5, Powis Place, Bloomsbury, 23rd February 1826, and matriculated at University College, Oxford, 30th May 1844. He obtained the Degree of B.A. in 1847, and M.A. in 1851. He was elected Fellow of All Souls' in 1847. He was a Student of Lincoln's Inn in 1850, but was never called to the Bar. On the revival of the Militia in 1852, he became Captain of the 1st Regiment of the King's Own Staffordshire Militia, and served with it at the Ionian Islands after its embodiment during the Crimean War. Whilst there he obtained leave to proceed to the Crimea, and was a witness of the unsuccessful assault upon Sebastopol of the 18th June 1855. He served again with the regiment after its embodiment during the Indian Mutiny, and rose to the rank of Major. Upon the establishment of the Volunteer force in 1860 he was appointed to the command of the Tettenhall Company, and was subsequently Major and Commandant of the Walsall Administrative Battalion. Upon his retirement from the Militia in 1867, the officers of the Regiment presented him with a piece of plate as a testimonial "of their esteem and regard." He is still living.

George, the third son, was born at 5, Powis Place, 15th June 1827. He entered the Royal Military Academy in 1842, and obtained a commission in the Royal Engineers in 1845. On the outbreak of the Russian war he was ordered to the East, and was employed on the survey and a scheme of defence for the Dardanelles. He accompanied General Sir John Burgoyne on his mission to Omar Pasha at Shumla, and was afterwards appointed A.D.C. to Brigadier-General Tylden, the Commanding Royal Engineer of the Forces in Turkey. After the Russians had crossed the Danube and had invested Silistria, he was ordered to accompany Lord Raglan to Varna, where a meeting was to be held with Omar Pasha, to deliberate upon the movements of the Allied Forces. At this meeting it was decided to move the English forces up to Varna at once, and as no member of the Quartermaster-General's Department was present, Lieut. Wrottesley was ordered by Lord Raglan to reconnoitre the road for thirty miles in advance of Varna, and select positions for the encampment of two Divisions of the Army. Omar Pasha had made urgent representations that one Division should be posted as far in advance as Devna, twenty-five miles from Varna, in order to maintain the communication with Shumla, and when Lord Raglan gave verbal instructions to Lieut. Wrottesley, he informed him that the retreat of this Division upon Varna might be cut off by a rapid advance of the Russians, and he was to report upon the practicability of another line of retreat to the south of the Devna Lakes. At this time it was considered that Russia would advance upon Turkey with overwhelming forces, and these instructions are worth recording as shewing how different the outcome of the war was, from the original conception of it. In October 1854 Lieut. Wrottesley was invalided home from Turkey owing to dysentery and fever contracted at Varna. In December following he obtained the rank of Captain, and in April 1855 was nominated by Lord Panmure, then Secretary for War, to act as military adviser to the Admiral in command of the Baltic Fleet, but was forced to forego this duty owing to the state of his health.¹ In 1855 he became A.D.C. to General Sir John Burgoyne, the Inspector-General of Fortifications. In 1859 he was appointed Secretary to the Defence Committee of the War Office,

“Dear Sir,—I ought, perhaps, to have addressed myself to your father, who is an old college acquaintance of mine, as was your grandfather in Parliament, but having these hereditary claims to your acquaintance, I shall save time by writing to yourself.

“I wish to send an Engineer officer to the Baltic with Admiral Dundas, and I am inclined to think that no one would do what is to be done better than and in the same year acted as Secretary to the Committee on the Influence of Rifled Artillery on works of Defence. In this year, also, he accompanied Sir John Burgoyne on a special mission to the French Emperor, in order to present to him the Funeral Car which had been used at the interment of the first Emperor at St. Helena.¹ In 1863 he was President of a War Office Committee on Army Signalling, which introduced into the service the Morse system of signalling by dots and dashes.² He became Lieut.-Colonel in 1868; was Commanding Royal Engineer at Shorncliffe, 1868-72; at Gravesend, 1872-75; and at Woolwich, 1875-81. He retired on full pay as Colonel, with the honorary rank of Major-General in 1881.

He married, in 1854, Margaret Anne, the eldest daughter of the late Field-Marshal Sir John Fox Burgoyne, Bart. She died in 1883, and he married secondly in 1889, Nina Margaret, the daughter of John William Philips, Esq., of Heybridge, Staffordshire. Major-General Wrottesley is still alive and is the author of the present work.

Henry, the fourth son, was born at 5, Powis Place 4th March 1829. After passing through the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, he obtained a commission without purchase, as Ensign of the 43rd Regiment, 9th June 1846, and became Lieutenant, 11th December 1849. In 1851, whilst quartered at Clonmel, the regiment received orders to embark for the Cape of Good Hope in order to reinforce the forces employed under General Sir Harry Smith for the subjugation of the Hottentots and Kaffirs, who yourself. There may not be a great deal to do, but I wish to have an officer on whose judgment, in case of need, Admiral Dundas could rely.

"You will be in the flagship permanently, but moveable for temporary purpose to any other vessel, which might be convenient. Your obedient servant,

"CHARLES WOOD.

"You must be ready to start very soon."

The military operations in the Baltic in 1855 consisted of the bombardment of Sweaborg, for which my substitute obtained a Brevet majority and the C.B.

² The other members of the Committee were the late Sir Francis (then Captain) Bolton, a very able officer of Infantry, and Lieut. Colomb, R.N., afterwards Rear-Admiral Colomb. These two officers were employed to bring the system into operation in their respective services. It was eventually considered so valuable that Captain Bolton was knighted, and Lieut. Colomb received a sum of money (£5,000 it is believed) in lieu of Knighthood. The original suggestion proceeded from myself, but I claim no credit for it, as the inventor was Mr. Morse, an American. At the date in question Professor Wheatstone's Code was still in use in England.

were in revolt. The regiment embarked at Cork in September in H.M.S. "Vulcan"; Henry Wrottesley being then the senior Lieutenant of his regiment and in command of a company. The troops were disembarked at East London, and arrived at King William's Town on the 21st of December. Towards the close of February 1852 the regiment was sent to clear Fuller's Hoek, which had been occupied by the Chief Macomo and his followers. On the 9th of March they reached Blinkwater, and whilst scouring Fuller's Hoek, on the 11th of March Henry Wrottesley was shot in the thigh by a musket ball which divided the femoral artery, and was the cause of his death very shortly afterwards. Cameron, the fifth son, was born at Blackheath, 19th December 1834, and was educated at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, from which he passed out with Honours and at the head of his batch in 1853. He was appointed 2nd Lieutenant of the Royal Engineers 21st December 1853 and Lieutenant on the 17th of February 1854. On the completion of his course of instruction at Chatham he was specially selected, on account of his brilliant career at the Royal Military Academy,¹ to accompany the troops to the Baltic during the Russian War, and was present at the siege of Bomarsund, where he was unfortunately killed by a cannon shot on the 15th of August 1854.

Julia, the eldest daughter, was born at Wrottesley 22nd October 1822, and died young of measles, at Blackheath, on the 26th of March 1835. She was buried in the Dartmouth vault in Lewisham Church.

Caroline was born at Blackheath, 24th February 1832, and married on the 28th December 1859, Edward Wallace Goodlake, of the Inner Temple, second son of Thomas Mills Goodlake, Esq., of Wadley House, Berks. She died at Wrottesley, s.p., on the 1st of September 1860 and was buried at Tettenhall.

ARTHUR, THIRD BARON WROTTESELEY, AND ELEVENTH BARONET.

Arthur, the present Peer, was born at 5, Powis Place, Bloomsbury, on the 17th of June 1824, and was educated at Rugby under Dr. Arnold. At Rugby he was noted as a ¹ His great forte was mathematics, in which he was so far in advance of the other Cadets that a special paper on the Integral Calculus had to be drawn up for his examination. The Professor of Mathematics at the Royal Military Academy told my father he would certainly have been a Wrangler at Cambridge.

Cricketer, and played in the match between the Rugbeians and the M.C.C., which has been rendered famous by the account of it in "Tom Brown's School Days." Hughes, the author of the book, was the Captain of the Eleven, and Arthur Wrottesley was the successful bowler on the Rugby side.¹ He matriculated at Christ Church, Oxford, 9th June 1843, and obtained his degree of B.A. in 1846. He soon afterwards joined the Staffordshire Yeomanry.

In 1854, when the Staffordshire Militia was embodied owing to the Russian War, he resigned his commission in the Yeomanry and was appointed Major of the 2nd Regiment. He served with them at Portsmouth till they were disembodied in the following year. In 1857, when the regiment was again embodied owing to the Indian Mutiny, he served with them at Plymouth and in Ireland.

On the establishment of the Volunteers in 1860 he was appointed Lieut.-Colonel of the 2nd Staffordshire Battalion, and held this post for a few years. On his appointment as Lord-Lieutenant of the County in 1871 he resigned his Commission in the Militia.

In 1869, soon after the formation of the first Administration of Mr. Gladstone, he was appointed one of the Lords-in-Waiting to the Queen, and held this post till 1874. He was re-appointed to the same office in 1880 on the formation of Mr. Gladstone's second Administration, and held it till 1885. He resigned the Lord-Lieutenancy in 1887.

On the establishment of the County Councils he was elected as representative of the Tettenhall Division, and on his resignation in 1898, was made an Alderman. He was Master of the Albrighton Foxhounds from 1849 to the end of the season of 1852.

He married, on the 18th July 1861, at St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, Charing Cross, Augusta Elizabeth, the fourth daughter of Albert, first Lord Londesborough, and by her (who died 20th January 1887) has had issue:—

1. William, late Captain 4th Dragoon Guards, who was born 17th May 1863. He was educated at Eton, and in 1880 was appointed Lieutenant of the 2nd Staffordshire Militia. In 1885 he obtained a commission in the 4th Dragoon Guards, and was promoted to Captain in 1891. He accompanied the regiment to India in 1894, and served with it in the North-West Frontier War of 1897, for which he obtained a medal and two clasps. On his passage home on sick leave, in 1899, he died suddenly, on board the P. and O. steamer, "Peninsular," on the 7th of October, shortly before the arrival of the vessel at Marseilles. His remains were brought to England and interred in the family vault at Tettenhall, on the 16th of October 1899..

2. Bertram Francis, the second son, was born 20th July 1864, and died whilst at school at Cheam, 26th October 1875.
3. Victor Alexander, for whom Queen Victoria stood sponsor, was born 18th September 1873.
4. Walter Bennet, the fourth son, was born 28th September 1877.
5. Henrietta Evelyn, the only daughter, was born 10th October 1866.

Lord Wrottesley succeeded to the Wrottesley estates at his father's death in 1837, and has recently purchased additional land in Sussex. The great number of local offices which he has held at various times is worthy of note. He has served as an officer of Yeomanry, of Militia, and of Volunteers, as Justice of the Peace and Deputy-Lieutenant, Master of Foxhounds, County Councillor, County Alderman, and Lord-Lieutenant.

The present Peer is the twenty-second in direct male descent from Simon, who was enfeoffed in the manor of Wrottesley circa 1164, and it is a remarkable circumstance and probably unique, that from that period the manor has descended in a direct line from father to son in every generation.

Shortly before midnight of the 16th of December 1897, Lord Wrottesley on entering his dressing-room, which was on the first floor of the house, found it full of smoke. The house was well provided with all the means recommended by the London Fire Brigade for the extinction of fires. On every floor were hung buckets filled with water, and a small manual engine was kept on the premises. It was found impossible, however, to discover the source of the fire, or even to approach the scene of it, owing to the intense smoke, and like all fires which had been smouldering for some time, as soon as a ladder had been placed against the window and an opening made into the room from the outside, the current of air produced a fierce flame, before which everybody had to retreat, and it was evident that the house was doomed. The dressing-room, where the fire originated, was situated on the west side of the house, a strong westerly wind was blowing at the time, and the spread of the fire was so rapid that none of the inmates were able to save their clothes. The floors and woodwork of the house being two hundred years old, were extremely dry and burnt like match wood. Besides the servants, the only persons staying in the house were Lord Wrottesley, his daughter, the Hon. Evelyn Wrottesley, and a cousin, Major Alfred Wrottesley, of the Royal Engineers, all of whom, as well as the servants, escaped without any injury. The family pictures and plate and some of the furniture on the ground floor were saved, but the ancient library of books and all the family muniments, which were on the first floor, were destroyed.¹ It was owing to the loss of the latter that it was determined to print this history and to introduce into it such of the ancient deeds which bore on the descent or history of the family, and which had been fortunately copied in former days by the present writer.

He was buried on the 4th of February 1612-13 in the Paragon Church of Canterbury. He is styled in the will "William Wrottesley, of Bedynge, in the co. of Berke, Gentleman," and he makes in it the following bequests:—

To my daughter Elizabeth 5 marks and my best silver gilt, half a dozen of my best silver spoons and my best chayne of gold, and a cross of gold.

To my daughter Constant, in ready money £10 and two chaynes of gold of the value of 20 marks & all my stuffe bringe in my chamber within the Citty of London except a suter which I gave and bequest to my sonne Robert. Also I gave and bequest to the said Constant a sill of silver, a peece of silver and half a dozen of silver spoons.

Item I bequest to my sonne in lawe Eames (Askew) my best hope (sic) of gold of the value of 5 marks and 5s. 4d. sterling.

To my lady Stanton my suter of gold, price 56s. 8d. and to my sonne her husband a bowell ryal and to my lady Sowthe (de la Zouch) a bowell ryal of gold.

Item I bequest to John Wrottesley (Wrottesley) a rose of gold.

To my lady Europe a chayne of gold and a pair of beades of white amber, and to Thome Parned bringe within the maner of Dordelands in the co. of Kent tenners for my soule 12s. 4d. and my best furze and my best coat beate padded with silver and gilt.

To my eldest brother 50s. and I will and ordayne by this my testament that my said eldest brother shall well and truly pay 40s. which that he oweth me, that is to say, unto his wife 5s. 8d., to his son Walter 5s. 4d. and to his son Thomas 12s. 4d.

Also I bequest to my son Edwards all the duties which he oweth to me of the parsonage hereunder written.

And to my said son Edward a doublet of black suten and 30s. sterling.

† EYLHARW : RETLAW. : MYCALYMIS : IED : SYNOB : RIV

The inscription read backwards, is as follows:—

YOUNGER BRANCHES OF THE FAMILY.

Younger branches of the family sprang from William Wrottesley, the brother of Richard Wrottesley, of Wrottesley, living temp. Henry VII and Henry VIII, see p. 257, and from Thomas, one of the younger sons of the same Richard. The will of William Wrottesley was dated 26th December 1512, and was proved on the 4th of February 1512-13 in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury. He is styled in the will "William Wrottesley, of Redynge, in the co. of Berks, Gentilman," and he makes in it the following bequests:—

To my doughter Elizabeth 5 marks, and my best silver pott, half a dozen of my best silver spones and my best cheyne of golde, and a crosse of golde.

To my doughter Custance, in redy money £10 and two cheynes of golde of the value of 20 marks & all my stuffe beinge in my chamber within the Citie of London except a cofer which I geve and bequeth to my sonne Robert. Also I geve and bequeth to the said Custance a salt of silver, a pece of silver and half a dozen of silver spones.

Item I bequeth to my sonne in lawe Escue (Askew) my best hope (sic) of golde of the price of 4 marks and 3s. 4d. sterling.

To my lady Sturton my signet of golde, price 26s. 8d. and to my lorde her husband a bowed ryall and to my lorde Sowche (de la Zouch) a bowed ryall of golde.

Item I bequeth to John Wraxley (Wrottesley) a rose of golde.

To my lady Scrope a shelde of golde and a pair of bedes of white amber, and to Dame Parnell beyng within the nonry of Dertforde in the co. of Kent to pray for my soule 13s. 4d. and my best furre and my best coral bedes gawded with silver and gilte.

To my eldest brother 10s. and I will and ordeyne by this my testament that my said eldest brother shall well and truly pay 40s. which that he oweth me, that is to say, unto his wife 6s. 8d., to his son Walter 6s. 8d., and to his son Thomas 13s. 4d.

Also I bequeth to my son Edward all the dettes which is owinge to me of the persones hereunder written.

And to my said son Edward a doblot of black satyn and 20s. sterling, to his wife and to his children, etc. (No names given.)

To Robert my sonne all my londes and tenements lyinge in the towne of Redynge in the co. of Berks, to him and to his heirs for evermore, 10s. to be paid out of them yearly to the churchwardens of the Parish Church of our Lady of Redynge.

Robert my sonne and Custance my doughter to be executors.

In the proof of the will it is stated that Robert and Constance were both under age, but that the will was proved "de expressu consensu et assensu Roberti Wrottesley et Custancie Wrottesley executorum in hujusmodi testamento nominatorum in minore etate existentibus, videlicet Roberto personaliter et Custancie in persona Magistri Willelmi Falk procuratoris," etc. It would appear by this that Robert Wrottesley, although under age, must have reached the age of consent, and was therefore over fourteen years of age. He would, therefore, have been born about the year 1498, and I conclude he is identical with the Robert Wrastley who was member for Chippenham, co. Wilts, in the first year of Queen Mary, viz., 1553.¹

The establishment of a younger branch in Wiltshire seems to be due to their relationship to Dr. Richard Dudley, the Chancellor of Salisbury, who was brother to Dorothy, the wife of Richard Wrottesley, see p. 256. Richard Dudley was buried at Salisbury in 1536. He made his will on the 21st May 1536, and it was proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury on the 12th of June following. In this will (of which Henry Wrottesley, the son of Richard, was one of the executors), he makes bequests to Henry Wrottesley, to Richard Wrottesley, the son of Henry, and the testator's godson, to John Wrottesley, the elder brother of Henry, and to Anne Wrottesley and her brothers; the relationship of Anne to the other members of the Wrottesley family is not mentioned in the will.²

Amongst the Chancery Suits of the year 1601, there is one in which Robert Wrottesley, of Chippenham, co. Wilts, who appears to have been the grandson of the above named Robert, sues Richard Sydenham, of Clarendon Park, co. Wilts, for premises in Eastbrent, co. Somerset, called Wingods. The pleadings in this suit give the following pedigree:—

... = Joan Wrottesley, grandmother of
the plaintiff.

John Wrottesley, father of the complainant, who had died about nine years before the date of the suit.

Robert Wrottesley, the complainant.

Amongst the papers of Mr. F. M. E. Jervoise, of Herriard, co. Hants, and of Britford, co. Wilts, there is a deed dated 1st February 3 Elizabeth (1560-1), by which John ² See Staffordshire Collections, vol. ix, p. 81, which gives the will in extenso.

Wingood, of Brumham, co. Wilts, gentleman, in consideration of his marriage with Joan Wrasley alias Wraxley, widow, late the wife of Robert Wrasley alias Wraxley, deceased, settles upon her all his messuage and tenements called Wingoods in the Parish of Eastbrent, co. Somerset, and all his lands, etc., in the said County or elsewhere in England, to the use of the said John Wingood and Joan Wrasley for their lives, and with certain remainders over.¹

The will of Joane Wrottesley, widow, of Chippenham, was dated 24th April 35 Elizabeth (1593) and was proved in the Archdeaconry Court of Wilts, 11th June 1593-4. By it she bequeaths £4 to Jane Wrottesley, widow, her daughter-in-law, and to Grace, the daughter of the said Jane, £20, and after bequests to the poor of Roude and Chippenham, she leaves all the rest of her property to Robert Wrottesley, "my nephew (sic), the sonne and heyre of John Wrottesley, my sonne."²

Robert Wrottesley died in 1608, and probate of his will was granted in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury on the 30th of September in the same year. His will describes him as Robert Wrottesley, gentleman, of Chippenham, and contains the following bequests:—

To the Parish Church of Chippenham, £10 for a new bell. To my cousin, Nicholas Smyth, son of Philip Smyth, £5. To Thomas Long, son of Henry Long, £5. To Robert Long, son of the said Thomas, £5. To my cousin, Gabriel Gouldney, son of Gabriel Gouldney, £5. To my cousin, Hugh Wrottesley, £5. To the Parish Church of Rowde, £4. To the poor of Chippenham, £5. To Elizabeth Wrottesley, my mother, all my messuage, tenements, etc., called the Bell, in Chippenham, with remainder to John, son of Anne Woodland, of Notton, co. Wilts. He mentions in the will that he had mortgaged divers lands in the parish of Estbrent, co. Somerset, called Wingods, to Gabriel Gouldney the elder for forty years; and he had also mortgaged his lands in Chippenham to Gabriel Gouldney and Hugh Barrett³ (my kinsman), and he directs that the above lands should be sold to pay his debts. His mother Elizabeth was appointed executrix and residuary legatee, the overseers of the will to be Henry Long, of Southweeke, gentleman; Thomas Atkins, of Chippenham, gent^a; Richard Sherfield, of Tidworthe, co. Wilts, gentleman, and Henry Sherfield, brother of the said Richard.

² From Mr. Jervoise's deeds. In the will she styles herself "Joane Wrottesley of the Parish of Chippenham in the countey of Wilts wydowe."

It is difficult to reconcile the above evidence, except upon the assumption that Joan Wrottesley who died in 1593 was identical with the Joan Wingod of the deed of 1561, and with Joan Wrottesley of the suit of 1601. In this case she must have dropt her name of Wingod after the death of her second husband, and re-assumed the name of her first husband. Instances of this are to be found on the Rolls, as in the case of Katherine, the widow of Sir William Wrottesley, temp. Edward II. It is evident that the Robert Wrottesley, who died in 1608 was identical with the plaintiff in the suit of 1601, as he is found dealing with the estate called Wingods.

It would appear by the will of Robert Wrottesley, above quoted, that he left no legitimate issue, but he was succeeded by a John Wrottesley who must be identical with the John, the son of Anne Woodland mentioned in his will, who was his illegitimate son. Amongst the Herriard muniments is a deed of Robert Wrottesley of Chippenham, dated 25th March 5 James I (1608), by which he was bound in a sum of £30 to Henry Sherfield, of Lincoln's Inn, gentleman, for the payment of 16d. per week to Anne Woodland, daughter of Richard Woodland, of Notton, in the parish of Lacoche, co. Wilts, for the maintenance of John, supposed to be begotten by the said Robert, until he shall attain the age of thirteen years.

Amongst the same muniments there is a copy of a will of John Wrottesley, of Chippenham, dated 16th March 22 James I (1624-25), in which he bequeaths "to Anne, my loving mother, now the wife of Richard Osgood, the sum of £60, to my brother Richard £30. To my loving aunt Elizabeth Gale, the wife of John Gale, £20. To my loving and kind uncle Henry Sherfield, Esq., to whom I am much bound for his love and favour, £40. To my loving cousin Matilda, daughter of the said Henry, £20. To my loving uncle Robert Woodland, gentleman, £20," and the residue of his estate "to the said Henry Sherfield."

This will must have been made when the testator was under age, for by a deed poll dated 6th April 1625, John Wrottesley covenants that whereas Henry Sherfield, his uncle, has in his hands by a decree of the Court of Chancery, certain money on which he pays no interest, according to the decree, until he (John Wrottesley) attains twenty-one years, and has hitherto given him an allowance for maintenance, schooling, etc., now he John Wrottesley proposes for his further advancement to go to Oxford, and promises that whatever charges Henry Sherfield¹ pays for his main-

Beyond this point I cannot carry the pedigree. It will be noted that there is a weak point in it, inasmuch as, although the epochs correspond, there is nothing to establish the identity of Robert Wrottesley, of Chippenham, with Robert Wrottesley, the son of William Wrottesley, of Reading.

According to Mr. Jervoise's deeds, one Henry Wrottesley was living at Britford, near Salisbury, in 1546. He occurs as a juror in the Britford Manor Rolls in the years 1546, 1549, and 1553, and amongst the same deeds there is a copy of Court Roll (Britford Manor) which states that on the 30th of March 1570, Richard Love came into Court and received a messuage and lands, "habendum prefato Ricardo, Henrico Wrasley et Thome Wrasley filiis Thome Wrasley senioris pro termino vite eorum et cujuslibet eorum diuturnus viventis."

I conclude that this Thomas Wrottesley, the elder, was identical with Thomas, the son of Richard Wrottesley, named on page 255, and the following suits and deeds shew that Thomas, the younger, had two sons, George and John.

Decrees of Court of Wards and Liveries, Michaelmas Term, 32-33 Elizabeth (November 1590).

Thomas Gervoy, Esq., of Northfield and Weoley, co. Worcester, on his marriage with Cecily, now wife of George Wrottesley, gentleman, had settled on himself and his wife, by Fine and Indenture dated 7th February 15th Elizabeth, the manors of Northfield and Weoley, co. Worcester, and the manor of Walkringham, co. Notts, a virgate of land in Chelmarsh, co. Salop, and other lands and tenements, with remainder to the heirs of the body of Thomas. Thomas died in 30 Elizabeth, leaving a son Thomas, one year old. The Queen, by Letters Patent of 31 Elizabeth, granted the custody of the manor of Walkringham and the wardship of the heir to Rowland Lacon and Francis Neuport, during the minority of the heir.

George Wrottesley and Cecily asked to be recompensed for the loss of Walkringham, and a decree was made by which the manor of Badcote, co. Worcester, and lands and rents in Sturbridge and Ould Swinford, co. Worcester, land in Britford, co. Wilts, and a messuage in St. Mary Bowe, in London, and the manor of Quatt, co. Salop, of which Thomas Gervoy, the father, had died sole seised, should be handed over to George and Cecily for that purpose.

By another decree of the same Court, made at Michaelmas Term 37-38 Elizabeth (November 1595), it appeared that Cecily had died in the previous July, and the custody of the manors of Northfield and Weoley, was granted by the Court to George Wrottesley, for which he was to render £106 2s. 0d. annually (at which value they had been assessed) during the minority of the heir, Thomas Gervoy.

Another decree of the same Court was delivered at Easter Term 43 Elizabeth (1600), which states that George Wrottesley, gentleman, had the wardship of Thomas Gervis, Esq., son and heir of Thomas Gervis, Esq., under Patent of Great Seal (the wardship had been granted to Rowland Lacon, Esq., and Francis Newport,¹ Esq., and subsequently conveyed to George Wrottesley, who was now Committee of the said ward); Sir Richard Pawlett, Kt., with his wife and others, the defendants, had entered into a combination to eloiigne the said ward. The defendants in their reply stated that the said ward of his own free will could petition the Master of the Court of Wards. Afterwards an agreement was brought into Court by which George Wrottesley for a sum of £1,100, should assign the wardship and marriage of the said ward to Sir Richard Pawlett, Kt., but the Court considering that small advantage to George Wrottesley, decreed that the ward at full age should sue out livery of his lands and become bound to George Wrottesley for the £1,100, with a condition to make estate of the mansion place of Britford, co. Wilts, late in the occupation of Thomas Wrottesley, gentleman, father of the said George, and Elizabeth Russell, or their assigns, unto the said George Wrottesley, the said George to have a lease of twenty-one years under the same covenants as let to Giles Estcourt, of New Sarum, and Thomas Wrottesley, father of the said George.²

The following information has been supplied by F. H. T. Jervoise, Esq. :—

"Thomas Jervoy died in 1588. From his marriage settlement with Cecily Ridley it appeared that he had inherited Northfield, Weoley, Chelmarsh and Walkeringham from his father, and these were settled in 15 Elizabeth on himself and his wife, the trustees being Sir George Blunt and Thomas Ridley, of Bowld. Many papers relating to Sir George Wrottesley and his correspondence with Henry Sherfield, the Recorder of Salisbury, are now at Herriard.

² These decrees of the Court were considered test cases, and are given in Moore's Reports, viz., Gervoyse's case, p. 717, and Wrottesley's case, p. 721.

"In a suit in the Court of Wards and Liveries, temp. James I (Sir Thomas Hesketh, Attorney-General, versus Sir George Wrottesley), in the matter of Thomas, Jane and Winifred Gervys, it was stated that Thomas Gervys died in 1588 intestate, and administration of his effects was granted to Cecily, his widow, who afterwards remarried Sir George Wrottesley. By Letters Patent of 31 Elizabeth (1589), the Queen granted the wardship of the heir, Thomas Gervys, to Rowland Lacon and Francis Newport. The latter afterwards assigned his interest to Thomas Lawley, Esq. Rowland Lacon and Thomas Lawley assigned the wardship of the heir and lands without licence to George Wrottesley.

"Sir Richard Poulett had paid £1,100 for the marriage of the ward, and the assignment of the wardship and marriage in 43 Elizabeth to him was said to have been of great benefit to the ward, and the latter was subsequently married to Lucy, the daughter of Sir Richard. In 43 Elizabeth the ward was aged fourteen, and Lucy was somewhat younger. On the death of Cecily in 1595, Sir George Wrottesley applied to Lord Burghley for a lease of the jointure lands during the minority of the heir, for which he paid £100. This was granted to him, it was supposed, for the education of the daughters. John Wrottesley, the brother of Sir George, afterwards married Jane, one of the ward's sisters, and Winifred, the other sister, followed her brother Thomas to Sir Richard Poulett's home."¹

George Wrottesley was one of the first Knights made by James I, and in the same year he purchased the manor of Badminton, co. Gloucester. Amongst the Fines of co. Gloucester, of Michaelmas 1 James I (1603), there is one by which the manor of Badminton was settled on Sir George Wrottesley and his heirs, for which Sir George paid £600. The vendors were William Weare and Edith, his wife.

In 1607, amongst the State Papers, there is a complaint lodged against him by the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury, for wrongs committed by him in the matter of the presentation to the church of Barford. He appears to have kept a steady look-out for well endowed widows, for he married shortly after the death of Cecily Jervoy, Katherine, the daughter of Sir John White, of Farnham, co. Surrey, a very rich citizen of London. Sir John had been Sheriff of London in 1556 and Mayor in 1563. He died at Aldershot in 1573.² Katherine had had two husbands before she married Sir George. Her first husband was William Harding, of Wyke, near Worplesdon, co. Surrey, by whom she had a daughter Mary, married to Sir Robert Gorges, of Worplesdon; her second husband was Sir David Woodroffe, Kt.,³ son of Sir Nicholas Woodroffe, formerly Mayor of London. Sir George Wrottesley must have been married to her before 1625, for in that year he was a Commissioner regarding the validity of a grant of property in Farnham for charitable uses,¹ and in the same year an information was laid against him and Katherine his wife for the ravishment of Thomas White, the King's ward, who had been married to Elizabeth Woodroffe, daughter of the said Katherine.

The hearing took place on the 12th of February 22 James I in the Court of Wards and Liveries on an information laid by Sir John Hall, Kt., and Dame Dorothy his wife, the Committees of Thomas White, His Majesty's late ward, when it was ordered that Sir George Wrottesley should pay the sum of £1,083 6s. 8d., viz., £541 13s. 4d. on the February next ensuing and £541 13s. 4d. on the 2nd November, Sir Thomas Jervoise² to be his surety for the performance of the decree, and the money to be applied for the benefit of the younger brother of the ward.

Apparently there was some difficulty in extracting the money from Sir George, for a final decree was made at Trinity Term, 8 Charles I (1632), i.e., nine years after the date of the first information, that the said Sir George Wrottesley shall, in performance of the said decree, pay unto Henry White, on the first day of Michaelmas term next at the Font Stone in the Temple Church, the sum of £1,083 6s. 8d. of lawful English money in full performance of the decree aforesaid.

After his marriage with Katherine Woodroffe Sir George appears to have been a person of considerable local importance and is mentioned frequently in the State Papers of the reign of James I. Administration of his goods was granted to Dame Katherine, his relict, on the 25th of March 1636.³ In these

The Genealogist for July 1902, gives the following description of the Woodroffes: "Now touching the Daughters of this Alderman (Stephen Kirton) by Margrett, his wife, one of the Daughters of old Wm. Offley; the eldest of them was married to Sr Nicholas Woodroffe sometime Maior of London, who after leaving the City and giving up his Cloake (as the tearme is) had a goodly house and estate in Hampshire about thirty miles from London, where hee and his Lady the Daughter of Mrs. Kerton dyed and left behind them sons and Daughters. His eldest sone Sir David Woodroffe, Kt. who married one of the Daughters of Sir John White, Kt. sister to Mrs. Offley who was wife to Henry Offley, esq^r and mother to Sir John Offley; this David Woodroffe, Kt. dyed, whose widow was married to Sir George Wrottesley, Kt."

² Sir Thomas Jervoise, the ward of Sir George Wrottesley, was a man of note during the Civil War. He was M.P. for Whitechurch (Hants) during the reign of James I and Charles I, and Colonel of a Regiment of Dragoons on the side of the Parliament. letters he is described as Sir George Wrottesley, Knight, late of Guildford, Surrey.

"The History of Surrey," by Manning and Bray, states he left a son by Katherine White, who died young, and the deeds at Herriard appear to shew that Elizabeth, wife of Richard Orchard, was the right heir of Sir George Wrottesley.¹

The Visitation of co. Wilts of 1623 states that Thomas Barrett, of Titherton Lucas, co. Wilts, married Jane, the daughter of Edward Wrottesley, of Rowde, co. Wilts, but as usual with Visitations, gives no date.

Mistress Elizabeth Wrottesley was buried at Chippenham 29th May 1614 (Chippenham Register).

ADDENDA AND CORRIGENDA.

- p. 32, line 22. An explanation of the circumstance that the Sheriff of the County was collecting the scutage from the sub-tenants of the Stafford Barony in this year, is afforded by an entry in the Pipe Roll of 3 H. 3, which shows that this was done at the request of Hervey Bagot and Millicent de Stafford, his mother. The entry in the Roll is as follows:—

Milisent de Stafford and Hervey, her son, give £15 to be quit of all arrears of the scutages of King John of the fee of Hervey Baghot, the husband of Milisent, so that the King may receive all the arrears by hands of his bailiffs from those who had not paid or made fine for them.

- p. 216, line 26, for "Emma," read "Anne."

- p. 229, Sir Walter Wrottesley and the King Maker.

Richard, Earl of Warwick, derived his wealth from his great English estates, consisting of the Honors of Clare, Gloucester, Despencer, and Warwick; but his political power arose from his command of the garrison of Calais, and his possession of the great Honor of Glamorgan and the land of Morgan in Wales, and it will be noted that at the most critical period of his fortunes, in 1470 and 1471, when he had determined to dethrone Edward IV, he placed both these great posts successively in charge of Sir Walter Wrottesley.

The possession of Glamorgan and Morgannok had always enabled its ancient lords, the Earls of Clare and Gloucester, to take up a position independent of the Crown, and the King Maker had succeeded to all the prerogatives of its former Norman lords.

Mr. George Clark, in his account of the "Land of Morgan," says there could not be a more complete "imperium in imperio" than the sway of the lords of Glamorgan. The "Comitatus" was a Court of Chancery and Record, composed of the lords, principal tenants, or barones Comitatus, presided over by the Vice Comes or Sheriff, from the decision of which there lay no appeal to the Crown.

The following additional particulars of the descendants of the Baron von Kutzleben and Dorothy Wrottesley have been furnished by Mrs. Curtis, his granddaughter:—

The Baron Christian von Kutzleben and Dorothy had issue—

1. William Baron von Kutzleben born in 1785, Lt.-Colonel of the 44th Regiment of Madras Infantry; he died in 1836.
2. Gertrude Philippine married Mr. W. King, by whom she had two children, Gertrude and Charles.
3. Charles von Kutzleben, of the 69th Foot, who died young in India and left no issue.

William Baron von Kutzleben was twice married. By his first wife, Susanna, whose maiden name is not known, he had issue—

1. Gertrude, born 1815, died 1845.
2. William Fitz Roy, born 1816, died 1817 an infant.
3. Emma, born 1820, died 1872.

By his second wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Knipe, Esq., of St. Helena, and widow of William Lambe, Esq., he had issue—

1. Elizabeth, born 1830.
2. Louisa, died an infant 1834.
3. Matilda Catherine Alice, born 1835.

The eldest daughter Gertrude, by the first wife, married Mr. Edward Collins, and had issue by him—

1. Edward, born 1836.
2. Anne, born 1838.
3. Susan, born 1839; and two sons:

Robert and Thomas, both of whom died in India of cholera whilst under age.

The second daughter, Emma, was born in 1820 and died in 1872. Her husband, Captain Ralph Leicester, was killed in India in 1859 and left no issue.

Elizabeth von Kutzleben, the eldest daughter by the Baron's second wife, was born in 1830, and married Mr. Moreton J. Walhouse, of the Indian Civil Service, by whom she had issue—

1. Hervey James, born 1851.
2. Helen Elizabeth, born 1853.
3. Moreton Edward, born 1855.
4. Charles Herbert de Kutzleben, 64th Staffordshire Regiment, born 1857, died 11 Nov. 1895.
5. Alice, born 1860, died 1872.

Louisa von Kutzleben, the second daughter, was born in 1832 and died in 1834.

The third daughter, Matilda Catherine Alicia von Kutzleben, was born in 1835 and married John Robert Lloyd Curtis, of the 8th Regiment Madras Army, by whom she had issue—

Elizabeth Harriet, born 1859, now living in London in charge of one of the Queen's Nursing Homes.
 Caroline and William Lloyd, both of whom died young.

- p. 354. Harriet, the youngest daughter of Sir Richard Wrottesley, likewise figures in the Walpole correspondence. In a letter to the Countess of Upper Ossory of 31st April 1773, Horace Walpole describes a festival and fancy dress ball at Lord Stanley's, at which he had been present. He says "the Seasons danced by himself (i.e., Lord Stanley), the younger Storer, the Duc de Lauzun and another, the youngest Miss Stanley, Miss Poole, the youngest Wrottesley, and another Miss, who is likewise anonymous in my memory, were in errant shepherdly dresses without invention, and Storer and Miss Wrottesley in banians with furs for winter, cock and hen."
- p. 355. In the quotation from George Selwyn's letters, the words "to the Duke his brother," should read "to the Dukes his brothers." These were the Dukes of Gloucester and Cumberland, the first of whom lived at Gloucester House (now Grosvenor House) and the latter at Leicester House. Ex. inf: Colonel W. F. Prideaux, who also informs me in reference to the footnote on this page, that the Princess of Wales had left Leicester House in 1766 for Carlton House (which had also belonged to her late husband), but she resided principally at Kew, where she was probably living when the news of her son's death would have reached England.
- p. 361, line 21, for "blank," read "black."
- p. 362. Lt.-Colonel Hugh Wrottesley died 18th October 1830.
- p. 363. Edward Wrottesley was married to Ann Tringham at Gibraltar, by licence granted by His Excellency Lt. Governor Campbell, at the King's Chapel, Gibraltar, on the 1st of November 1812, in presence of Percy Fraser, Commissioner of H.M. Navy; J. J. Pechell, Captain H.M.S. "Cleopatra"; Martha Tringham, and others, the officiating minister being the Rev. Thomas Tringham, H.M. Chaplain, the father of the bride.
- p. 366. At the period of the emigration of the French nobility owing to the revolution of 1792, Wrottesley, like many of the other large country houses, sheltered one of the emigrés. A Vicomte de Mauny, under the guise of a French tutor, lived there for several years.
- p. 377. The "Rugby School Register" (printed) contains the following entries under the name of Wrottesley:—

Entrances in 1699.

Wrottesley, John, eldest son of Sir Walter Wrottesley, Bart., Somerford, Staffordshire.

Wrottesley, Hugh, second son of the above.

Wrottesley, Walter, third son of Sir Walter Wrottesley, Bart., Somerford, Staffordshire.

Entrances in 1722.

Wrottesley, Hugh, second son of Sir John Wrottesley, Bart., M.P. for Staffordshire.

Wrottesley, Walter, third son of Sir John Wrottesley.

Entrances in August, 1838.

Wrottesley, Arthur, son of the Hon. John Wrottesley (now Lord Wrottesley), Blackheath, Kent, and Wrottesley, Wolverhampton, aged 14, June 17th.

The "Westminster School Register" shews that Wrottesley, John, was admitted 31st Jan. 1782.

Wrottesley, Walter, admitted 17th Jan. 1821, left Bartholomewtide 1827.

Wrottesley, Edward Bennet, admitted 18th Jan. 1822, King's Scholar 1826, elected to Trinity College, Cambridge, but went to New Inn Hall; matriculated 7th February 1833.

p. 379, line 33, for "Committee" read "Council."

p. 382. After the death of John, the second Baron Wrottesley, his widow, Sophia, Lady Wrottesley, took up her abode at the Dower House of the family at Oaken, and died there in 1880.

p. 384, line 10 and footnote. The words for visual signals" should be added to the sentence, for Morse's alphabet was in use on many of the railway telegraphs at this date, and was employed by the Royal Engineers for their electric field telegraph.

The Committee had been formed for the purpose of reporting on Rendl's system of telegraphy by means of collapsible cones. By the use of two of these cones and a large circular ball of black canvas, the inventor was able to produce all the permutations required for the Naval Code of Signals, and he claimed that they would be more visible at a distance than the flags in use. I pointed out that a single cone made to open and shut would suffice if the Morse alphabet was used, and there would be this additional advantage, that the same alphabet could then be used both for visual and electric signals. The Committee recommended that experiments should be made with this object in view, but the Navy would not renounce their signal flags and Naval Code. The result, however, was the introduction of the Morse alphabet for all visual signals on shore, and Lieutenant Colomb afterwards invented the flash light for naval signals at night. The use of the Morse alphabet also led to the introduction of the Heliostad into the service for day signals on shore.
